I am decidedly in favor of the sections of the bill, which it is proposed to strike out; and I say so, because I have examined them. They have been carefully prepared, although their provisions may be defective. All new systems, however, are defective, and require to be improved after time and experience have shown where the defects exist. I have no doubt that there may be defects in this scheme. But it is a new undertaking; it is a new enterprise. How was it gotten up? By the act of 1851, you authorized a Light-House Board to be appointed. That board was appointed, and was composed of scientific gentlemen, some of them officers of distinction in the Army and Navy. After a very elaborate examination, the result of which I have somewhat carefully looked into, they present you with the result to which they have come, which is, that the present system is essentially defective. They show you the fact, that the distribution of the lights is imperfect and unequal; that on some parts of the coast, to wit: at the North, there is an accumulation of lights far beyond what the exigencies of the case demand, so much so that they are accumulated in some places as to be a nuisance to the navigator instead of a benefit, and a great many of them are defective. At the South there is a far less proportion of lights than at the North. They ought certainly to be in the same proportion in the South as at the North, and in some parts there ought to be a greater accumulation. But that is not a sectional question. No question can be made on that score, because the North has occasion, in point of fact, to use the lights at the South as much as those on their own coast. It is their commerce, their ships that navigate along that coast, and it is important to them, to escape shipwreck, to have the coast properly lighted.

There is one point of importance which is developed by the report of that board. In some parts of the country, people have been ever anxious to come forward and insist on the necessity of having lights at different points, and by urging it, have procured light-houses to be established in neighborhoods where there was not much occasion for them. A good deal of money has been expended in that way that need not have been expended. That, of course, has not applied to all sections of the country.

We need reform, and an examination of that book will demonstrate it. Gentlemen say they have not read the book. I am sorry for it. When the Senate is called upon to act upon the subject, they ought to be prepared. I could very well excuse my friend from Massachusetts, if he had not carefully examined it.

Mr. DAVIS. I have examined the report.

Mr. DE SAUSSURE. But he has examined it. I could very well excuse him if he had not, because I know he is a very laborious Senator. His hands have been full of another subject, which he has elaborated with great care, and to the great satisfaction of the Senate—I mean the steamboat bill. But other Senators have said that they have not examined the book. The Senator from Florida has not had it in his power to do so. The evidence has been before us a great while. I regret it has not been examined, for it is my firm conviction, that if Senators had examined the testimony, so elaborately prepared, and the result of which has been set before us by the board which was appointed, they would all have come to the conclusion that I have come to—that this subject requires to be acted upon, and that promptly; and that that board has pointed out the proper mode of proceeding. The plan which they suggest may be full of defects.

I regret to say that I have not come to the same conclusion with the Senator from Massachusetts. Instead of there being greater expenses entailed upon us by the reform which is advocated, I believe it is a cheaper system. I believe that by it you will greatly diminish the number of lights in some parts of the country, instead of increasing them. And although there may be an increase in other parts, yet, upon the whole, I have come to the conclusion that there will be an economy in the system which the board recommend. I have examined the difference between the dioptric light and the reflectors. It is true, the reflectors may answer in some parts of the country, after they have been improved. With that alteration, I understand they are of a superior character, and may answer the purpose instead of the lenticular light. But the dioptric light, upon the whole, I think is the best. It may be that it will be the most expensive at the outset, but it is not the most expensive in the end. The first cost may be expensive, when you come to set up and establish one of these lights. As the French say, "C'est le premier pas qui coûte"—it is the first step which costs. After that, the expense is comparatively small.

The system now presented to us has been elaborately prepared in the House in the bill which they have presented to us. I regret that no committee of the Senate has examined it carefully. The House has adopted it upon testimony which you yourselves directed to be prepared. I have examined it, and my judgment is satisfied that their system is right, and that it will be the cheapest. I know well that it will give a better light than the present. Unquestionably there are improvements to be made which they have not suggested, but I think they have devised the proper method of carrying out the work. The persons appointed under the act of last session to superintend the matter were competent to do it. I do not understand that the board which it is now proposed to establish, is one which will claim any compensation out of the Treasury. On the contrary, it is to be composed of officers who belong to the Government; whose talents, whose time, whose services, belong to the country. I understand that the services are to be performed by those parties. Why not try the experiment? My friend from Massachusetts says all boards fail. I have not sufficient experience to speak with great certainty upon that subject, but I have known some boards to succeed. I have known some boards to carry out systems very well. When there was a new system to be struck out, a code of laws to be organized, I have known some boards, without compensation, patriotically to devote their attention to it, and elaborate it most successfully, and carry it into execution. They left it to other parties afterwards, who succeeded them, to continue that service. It may be in some instances that they failed. That may depend upon the persons selected. I believe, however, that you have a great many very intelligent, capable, and patriotic persons in your Navy, whose attention could be turned to this subject. A great many of them are out of service; I may say they are out of active employment, at all events; and I have no doubt it would be a relief to them to be enabled to devote a portion of their time to the country. I think that the means for the selection and composition of this board are very large, and that Congress would be able to make such a selection as would carry out the purpose contemplated by the system.

Now, when you have the evidence, when you have been at great pains to procure it—when it has been methodized and reduced to a system, what objection is there made to the plan proposed? Why, that gentlemen have not had time to examine it. It may be that it would have been better to have examined it, but, as was well suggested by the Senator from Maryland, [Mr. PEARCE,] who preceded me, you are about to encounter the short session, and you will have very little time to arrange any great matters of this sort. The whole system cannot be carried out then. You have only three months; therefore, it strikes me now is the time to enter upon the system. It has been carefully prepared; it is before you; and I think we had better adopt it.

Mr. HAMLIN. I do not wish to say anything more on this subject. All I desire is, that the Senate should vote upon the question.

Mr. MALLORY. If I had perused the work alluded to by the honorable Senator from South Carolina, I should perhaps have come to the same conclusion that he does. I should have felt constrained, however, to have examined the work in connection with other evidence upon the same subject which is in the Treasury Department. I have no objection to—on the contrary, I am decidedly in favor of, improving, or rather systemizing the plan of lighting the coast. I know the system is defective, but I have yet to learn that any of the mariners of this country, or of any other commercial people who trade with us, as a general thing, find fault with the lights on the coast. As to this work of nearly eight hundred pages, Senators will have an opportunity between this and the next session to give it a full examination.

Mr. DAVIS. There is nothing more true than the remark made by the Senator from Florida, as he took his seat, that the complaints against the present system do not come from the navigators. They spring up in Washington. They are made here by men who have no concern with navigation. Now, I am not surprised that my worthy friend from South Carolina, if he really believes all the statements which are contained in that book, as he seems to do, should be led to the conclusion that he adopts. But, sir, can all that is in that book be true? Is it possible that the lights in this country should be in such a condition as they are represented there, and yet give a reasonable degree of satisfaction to the public? As far as I recollect, in all that book, there is not one thing in the present system that the board approves of. I read it with some care and attention, and I was astonished at the declarations made in it. For, while I will not deny that there are defects in it, yet, in a system like this, which has stood more than half a century, to find no one thing to approve of in it, is a little extraordinary. I hold that the report is an unfair, unjust, and an exaggerated statement of facts. I say this with all due deference and respect to the gentlemen who put their names to that report. I suppose some other persons have collected the testimony which they present—it was not obtained from their own observation; it has been derived from other sources, and they have been misled as to the facts.

I wish to add a word as to economy. My worthy friend from South Carolina thinks there is greater economy in the lens system, simply because it burns less oil. Now, you may go to the Department, and find that there has never been a lenticular light introduced which has not cost $10,000, independent of the structure and lantern in which it is put. You put the greater part of your lights into operation for some $3,000 or $4,000. Now, if economy is to be considered at all, in the United States—and I do not know that it is—the system which we pursue is recommended by its economy; and that is one of the apologies for its defects; for whatever else may be said of the administration of this Department, it has always been economical, and always adopted views with a prudent regard to expenditure. There may be imperfect light-houses, I know there are. But, on the other hand, there are good houses. There may be imperfect reflectors. On the other hand, there are good reflectors; and all reflectors may now be made with suitable form—with a form that is mathematically correct. And when they are properly adjusted, they are good lights. They may not give as much light as the lenses; but they are good lights, and they answer the public purpose at a much less expense. Many gentlemen can certainly understand me, when I say, that the economical comparisons in the report, are made with lamps that light the whole horizon—that presupposes that you are to light the whole horizon. When you use lenses, you have but one lamp; and whether you want to light one fourth, one half, or the whole horizon, you use the same quantity of light. But every reflector has its own light, and as you diminish the reflectors, you diminish the quantity of light. The board do not suffer that to come into the comparison; and the effect is to mislead us on that point. I say that this whole subject ought to be scrutinized with care, and carried out with a careful and just consideration as to expense; and it should not be taken up and crowded down our throats on the very last days of the session, as it is now proposed to do. The bill which established the board that has made this report, was brought in here last year, under such an emergency that you could not read the title of it, and it was passed, upon a hasty vote, without reading. Then it took a man to run as rapidly as he could to the other House, to get it there so that it might be signed in time. That is the way this board was created; and it is now proposed to continue it in much the same way. I am opposed to it; but I am not opposed to a good system of lights.

Mr. PRATT asked for the yeas and nays on the amendment; and they were ordered.

Mr. HOUSTON. I have a great respect for the opinions of the Senator from South Carolina. Amongst others, he has given us one that this bill is defective. He has examined it thoroughly, and perused the authority upon which it is based, and he says it is defective. Now, we ought not hastily to commence an important system, which is acknowledged to be defective, which is to lead to a great expenditure of money. We should make it perfect. The fact that a board of officers, competent for the purpose, should have reported in favor of a measure, commends it to my respect and investigation, but not to my support, or to its adoption in the Senate. I entertain due respect for the opinions of others; but if we are to constitute boards for the shaping out of subjects for this body to adopt, we had better, in the first place, and to save trouble, invest them with power to declare them as edicts, and we become the registering power alone. If we have a right to do anything, we have a right to investigate the measures recommended by boards. I must confess, that, in many instances, the reports of boards do not commend subjects to my favorable consideration, much respect as I may have for the gentlemen composing them. I am not always disposed to adopt their reports, because their opinions may be moulded by what is called outside pressure here.

It is but this moment that the civil and diplomatic bill was finally passed in the House of Representatives by a single vote, owing, perhaps, to an obnoxious amendment, introduced into it upon my motion. That seems to me to augur something to the Senate. That that bill should be passed by one single vote, and that the casting vote of the Speaker, speaks something of a most extraordinary character.

As the honorable Senator from Florida has said, we shall have ample opportunity for investigating this enormous volume between this and the next meeting of Congress, or during the next session; and then we will be enabled to vote understandingly upon the subject, instead of adopting it now; when I will venture to say, two Senators of this body have not had the opportunity of comparing the testimony collected by these gentlemen and endorsed by their opinion, with the evidence registered in the Fifth Auditor's Office. For this reason I cannot vote for the measure, but will vote for the amendment of the committee.

The question being taken by yeas and nays, resulted—yeas 10, nays 28; as follows:

YEAS—Messrs. Brodhead, Clarke, Davis, Dodge of Wisconsin, Hale, Hamlin, Houston, Mallory, Mangum, and Miller—10.

NAYS—Messrs. Badger, Bayard, Borland, Bright, Brooke, Butler, Cass, Charlton, Chase, Cooper, Dawson, De Saussure, Dodge of Iowa, Downs, Felch, Fish, Gwin, Hunter, Jones of Iowa, Mason, Morton, Pearce, Pratt, Rusk, Spruance, Toucey, Wade, and Weller—28.

So the amendment was rejected.

The bill was then reported to the Senate as amended; the amendments were concurred in and ordered to be engrossed; and the bill was ordered to be read a third time. It was read a third time and passed.

EXECUTIVE SESSION.

On motion by Mr. MASON, the Senate proceeded to the consideration of Executive business, and after some time spent therein, the doors were reopened.

ARMY APPROPRIATION BILL.

A message was received from the House of Representatives by Mr. FORNEY, its Clerk, announcing that it agreed to the 4th, 9th, 20th, and 27th amendments of the Senate to the bill making appropriations for the support of the Army for the year ending the 30th of June, 1853; and that it disagreed to the 1st, 2d, 3d, 5th, 6th, 7th, 8th, 10th, 11th, 12th, 13th, 14th, 15th, 16th, 17th, 18th, 19th, 21st, 22d, 23d, 24th, 25th, 26th, 28th, 29th, and 30th amendments of the Senate to the same.

The Senate proceeded to consider their amendments disagreed to by the House to the bill making appropriations for the support of the Army for the year ending the 30th of June, 1853, and on motion by Mr. HUNTER, it was

Resolved, That the Senate insist on their amendments disagreed to by the House, and ask a conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses.

Ordered, That the Committee of Conference be appointed by the President pro tem.

Mr. BRIGHT, Mr. DAWSON, and Mr. BRODHEAD were appointed accordingly.

A message was subsequently received from the House of Representatives by Mr. FORNEY, its Clerk, announcing that it insisted on its disagreement to the amendments of the Senate to the bill making appropriations for the support of the Army for the year ending the 30th of June, 1853; that it agreed to the conference asked by the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses; and had appointed Mr. HOUSTON, Mr. STANLY, and Mr. GORMAN, managers at the same on their part.

POST OFFICE APPROPRIATION BILL.

A message was received from the House of Representatives, by Mr. FORNEY, its Clerk, announcing that it agreed to some, and disagreed to other amendments of the Senate to the bill making appropriations for the Post Office Department during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1853.

The Senate proceeded to consider their amendments disagreed to by the House of Representatives to the bill making appropriations for the Post Office Department during the fiscal year ending the 30th of June, 1853, and on motion by Mr. HUNTER, it was

Resolved, That they insist on their amendments disagreed to by the House, and ask a conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses.

The Committee of Conference was ordered to be appointed by the President pro tem.

Mr. MILLER, Mr. RUSK, and Mr. FELCH were appointed.

A message was subsequently received from the House of Representatives, announcing that it agreed to the conference asked by the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the bill making appropriations for the service of the Post Office Department during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1853, and that it had appointed Mr. BROOKS, Mr. PENN, and Mr. FICKLIN, a Committee of Conference on their part.

POST ROADS BILL.

A message was received from the House of Representatives, by Mr. FORNEY, its Clerk, announcing that it agreed to the 20th amendment of the Senate to the bill to establish certain post roads; that it disagreed to the 39th, 43d, 44th, 45th, 46th, 47th, 48th, 49th, 50th, and 53d amendments of the Senate; and that it agreed to the residue of the amendments of the Senate.

COMMITTEE ON MEXICAN CLAIMS.

Mr. SOULE. The Select Committee, to which were referred the memorials of American citizens complaining of the action of the late Board of Commissioners on the claims submitted to their adjudication, have devoted to the discharge of the duties imposed upon them as much time, labor, and attention as they possibly could under the pressure of other exigencies, arising out of their required attendance at the sessions of the Senate, and at such standing committees as they are members of respectively. They have been able to dispose finally of nineteen memorials out of the sixty-five referred to them, and have been employed for six weeks past in taking testimony. They have now reached that point in their investigation which induces the hope that, if permitted to proceed on with their labors during the recess of Congress, they will be enabled to present themselves to the Senate early the next session with a full and complete report. In the mean time, as it will become necessary to procure testimony at no small expense to the Government, they desire that the Secretary of the Senate be clothed with sufficient authority that he may provide for such expenditures as may be deemed advisable by the committee; and the resolution which I now send to your table is destined to elicit the sense of the Senate with reference to the expediency of continuing the committee in the exercise of their powers, and of incurring the expense which the seeking for testimony may render indispensable. I now present the resolution; and I hope the Senate will pass it at once.

The resolution was read, as follows:

Resolved, That the Select Committee on Mexican claims appointed on the 26th of February, 1852, be continued during the ensuing recess of the Senate, and that the Secretary of the Senate pay out of the contingent fund such charges as may be necessarily incurred under the direction of the committee in obtaining testimony.

There being no objection, the resolution was read a second time and considered as in Committee of the Whole.

Mr. HALE. Since I have been here various applications of this sort have been made to extend the sessions of committees into the vacation, but they have been uniformly refused with one single exception; and that was in regard to the Committee on Printing. But since that time that committee has not sat here during the recess, but its clerk has been substituted for it. It seems to me that it is a new and dangerous principle to undertake, by special legislation of this sort, to extend the functions of Senators during the whole year; but if nobody else makes objection to this I shall not.

The resolution was read a third time and passed.

PATENT OFFICE REPORTS.

On a motion by Mr. HAMLIN, the Senate proceeded to consider the resolutions reported by the Committee on Printing on the 29th of April, in favor of printing the report of the Commissioner of Patents, for the year 1851, in relation to arts and manufactures; and the report was ordered to be printed.

Also, the resolution reported by the Committee on Printing the 29th of April, "that seventeen thousand additional copies of the report of the Commissioner of Patents relating to arts and manufactures be printed, fifteen thousand copies thereof for the use of the Senate, and two thousand for the use of the Commissioner of Patents;" and the resolution was agreed to.

Also, the resolution reported by the Committee on Printing the 29th of April, that thirty-two thousand five hundred additional copies of the Agricultural Report be printed, thirty thousand thereof for the use of the Senate, and two thousand five hundred for the use of the Commissioner of Patents; and the resolution was agreed to.

MEXICAN BOUNDARY.

Mr. WELLER submitted the following resolution, which was considered by unanimous consent, and agreed to:

Resolved, That the reports from the Secretary of State, of the Interior, and War, touching the boundary line between the United States and Mexico, and referred to a select committee, be printed by the public printer, under the direction of the Secretary, for the use of the Senate.

RAILROAD IN ARKANSAS.

Mr. BORLAND. I ask the Senate now to take up the bill from the House of Representatives, "granting the right of way and making a grant of land to the States of Arkansas and Missouri, to aid in the construction of a railroad from a point on the Mississippi, opposite the mouth of the Ohio river, via Little Rock, to the Texas boundary, near Fulton, in Arkansas, with branches to Fort Smith and the Mississippi river," for the purpose of having it read a second time.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. My friend from Arkansas is the most pertinacious gentleman I ever met with. I think this is about the twentieth time he has asked the Senate to take up this bill. If it comes up, I am satisfied it will be discussed at length.

Mr. GWIN. I hope the gentleman will allow it to be read a second time, and referred.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I wish to state that this bill gives Arkansas a favor in regard to her railroads which other States cannot obtain. If you act upon it at all, one State has as much right as another, and the bill called Bennett's distribution bill will come up, and be discussed upon this bill.

Mr. GWIN. I hope the Senate will take up this bill and pass it, as an act of justice to the Representatives from Arkansas in the other House, [Hon. R. W. JOHNSON.] That gentleman, by his energy, talents, and unwearied industry, has so won on the respect and esteem of the House of which he is a member, that in the face of a majority of forty against the policy of granting lands for railroad improvements, he has been enabled to suspend the rules requiring a two thirds vote, and then pass this bill. This is the most extraordinary exhibition of the personal influence of an individual that has ever been known in our Congressional history. And shall the Senate, where similar bills pass by a majority of twenty votes, dash the cup from his lips, and deprive his constituents of the advantages of his indomitable energy? Is not the laborer worthy of his hire? Let us not only take up the bill, but pass it, and send its author to his constituents rejoicing. He is the sole Representative of his State in the House of Representatives. He represents a border State that is not surrounded by powerful political influences that will aid him in securing beneficial objects of legislation for his constituents. I have a warm sympathy for the Senators and Representative from that State. I have experienced the fearful obstacles that the want of political influence and association throws in the way of passing measures of the first importance to new States. I have myself passed measure after measure through the Senate, of vital importance to my constituents, with what unwearied exertions my associates around me can bear witness, to see them either defeated or postponed in the other House. And shall we adopt the baneful example of that House, when for once, influenced by the principles of justice and equity, a measure is sent to us which embodies a principle that we have time and again declared in favor of? I hope not. The Senate will honor itself by taking up this bill and acting upon it at once.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I want to state to the gentleman from California, that I have impeached the honor of nobody, particularly the honorable gentleman who represents Arkansas in the other House. I thought that, as regarded the gentleman who made the motion here, I was rather complimenting him for his pertinacity in trying to secure the interests of his State. I meant to cast no reflection upon the gentlemen from Arkansas, either here or in the other House. They are faithful representatives; but I wish to state this: the bill now upon the table which my friend from Arkansas wants to have referred, is a departure, in many essential particulars, from the railroad bills which we passed through this body; and now, have we time to consider it? Can I, as a member of the Committee on Public Lands, have an opportunity of considering this departure, and reporting the bill back by to-morrow? Is there time to investigate it? When it cannot be investigated discreetly and properly, ought we to give Arkansas an advantage over all other States who have similar bills, and let her get her bill through, and refuse it to everybody else? I think justice requires that this bill, like the others, should be postponed until next session.

Mr. CASS. I shall vote for taking up this bill, and I shall vote for it upon its final passage; but I must say that there is a great deal of justice in what the honorable Senator from Kentucky has said. I do not understand how the House of Representatives can put through a bill of this description, on account of the personal influence of any one member, and refuse similar bills to other States. Why, the very fact of passing bills for Missouri, and Illinois, and for Arkansas—every one of which I was in favor of—

Mr. GWIN. And Michigan too.

Mr. CASS. I am speaking of the action of Congress as a body. I say that it is unjust to give lands to those States, and refuse it to others. I voted for this bill when it was before the Senate last year, and I shall vote for it again; but I do not conceive that the ground assumed by the honorable Senator from California applies. It places the rest of the Representatives of all the other States who have not succeeded, in a similar predicament. No gentleman thinks more highly of the honorable member from Arkansas than I do. I have a very high opinion of him; but I say this is one of those enormities in a free Government, that a despotic Government would not permit—passing one, two, or three bills for one, two, or three States, and refusing like bills to all the other States precisely similarly circumstanced, and who have received nothing. It is very great injustice.

Mr. RUSK. The course of reasoning of the honorable Senator from Michigan is, to me, strange. We have passed this bill through the Senate, and therefore have given it the indorsement of our justice.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. This bill is an entirely different one from the bill which we passed. The railroads go from different points. This is a House bill, and not the same bill which the Senate passed.

Mr. RUSK. Well, we passed a bill of precisely similar character, and hence, having done that, we cannot object to the justice of this bill. Even the honorable Senator from Kentucky himself did not object to it; but he thinks injustice has been done to the other States. Now, sir, if the bill is proper, if it is right, if it is a similar bill to those we have passed for the other States, it is nothing but justice to Arkansas, and I have yet to learn that it is just to refuse justice to one, because everybody else does not get it. Do gentlemen wish to introduce log-rolling here? It is vastly better that we should take these measures isolated, and pass them separately, than to combine together interests which will control, instead of the merits of each application. I have done justice to the other States, and here, because this State happens to be a peculiar locality, and because this bill does not include other States, it is said that we are doing injustice to Michigan, because we do justice to Arkansas. Sir, it is unreasonable to be complaining in this way. Besides, this is the commencement of a road which must eventually go to the shores of the Pacific. It is upon that line, and is the commencement of that road. Why there should be such strenuous opposition, I cannot see.

Mr. CASS. The honorable Senator from Texas has misunderstood me, for I am sure he would not misrepresent me. I do not object to the passage of the bill because Michigan does not get enough, but I say it is a great species of legislative injustice to pass such bills for one State and not pass them for others similarly circumstanced. I might appeal to the honorable Senators from Iowa, Wisconsin, and other States that have not been thus favored; and I would appeal to the honorable Senator from Texas, if anything was granted to every other State in the Union, would he not think it great injustice to his State not to have something granted to her? I know he would. I repeat, I consider it a great species of injustice; but I do not blame Arkansas, nor her honorable member. I merely wished to call attention to the fact that the House of Representatives had passed one bill of this sort and refused to pass others; and to check, so far as my voice could, partial legislation.

Mr. CLEMENS. I wish to say that I concur heartily with the Senator from Texas. If the rest of us—and the State of Alabama is as much interested in these railroad bills as any other State—have had the misfortune to have Representatives in the other House who could not get these bills through, it is no reason why we should reject a bill in favor of the State whose Representative did have influence enough to get it through. All these bills passed the Senate, and I cannot understand why a Senator should now vote to reject one of them, because a member from one State happened to be a little more faithful—a little more attentive to his duties than the others. I shall vote for this bill, and vote against putting any amendment to it. The Representative from Arkansas in the other House has done his duty to his State; and I believe, if the rest of the Representatives from the new States had done their duty, we would have all got our bills through.

The PRESIDENT. The question is not on the passage of the bill, but on taking it up.

Mr. BORLAND. I wish to say a single word in justice to myself; for it is said that I have been rather pertinacious on this subject. The late day at which this bill came from the House is well known to the Senate. It is well known that there are but two days during which this bill can be attended to. It was read a first time on Saturday evening, and its second reading was then objected to, so that it could not be read a second time until to-day. I wish to have it read a second time now, so that it may be referred to the committee, and they can report upon it to-morrow.

Mr. BORLAND's motion was agreed to.

The bill was accordingly read a second time, and the Senate proceeded to consider it as in Committee of the Whole.

Mr. BORLAND. Is it competent for me to ask for its third reading now?

The PRESIDENT. It is not. It has to go through the regular stages, and is now before the Senate as in Committee of the Whole.

Mr. DAWSON. I thought the bill was taken up with a view to reference. It was so announced.

The PRESIDENT. That was the understanding of the Chair; but the Chair has no power to refer the bill without a motion.

Mr. DAWSON. I move that it be referred to the Committee on Public Lands.

The motion was agreed to.

VIRGINIA LAND WARRANTS.

Mr. HUNTER. There is a bill lying on the table which will give rise to no discussion. It passed the Senate two or three months ago almost unanimously. By the rules of the House, however, it could not be reached there, and they have now sent back a similar bill. I ask, as a personal favor of the Senate, that the bill may be taken up and disposed of.

The motion was agreed to.

The bill was accordingly read a second time, and considered as in Committee of the Whole; and no amendment having been proposed, it was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read a third time, and passed.

HON. DAVID L. YULEE.

Mr. MORTON. I beg leave to submit the following resolution, and ask for its consideration at this time:

Resolved, That there be paid out of the contingent fund of the Senate, to the Hon. DAVID L. YULEE, a sum equal to the amount of mileage and per diem compensation of a Senator from the commencement of the present session to the 27th instant, the day on which the Senate decided that the Hon. STEPHEN R. MALLORY, whose seat in the Senate was claimed by him, was duly elected a member of the Senate from the State of Florida.

Mr. RUSK. I object to its consideration now, and call for the consideration of the message of the House in relation to the post route bill.

The resolution was accordingly laid over under the rules.

POST ROAD BILL.

On motion by Mr. RUSK, the Senate proceeded to consider their amendments amended and disagreed to by the House of Representatives to the bill "to establish certain post roads."

Mr. RUSK. I move to concur in the amendment of the House to the twentieth amendment of the Senate, and that the Senate recede from their other amendments, or, in other words, that the Senate recede from such of their amendments as have been disagreed to by the House.

Mr. BORLAND. Before that motion is acted upon, I wish to make an inquiry. Upon my motion a very important amendment was made to the bill, establishing mail lines upon the Ohio and Mississippi rivers. I wish to inquire of the chairman of the Committee on the Post Office and Post Roads whether that amendment has been concurred in or rejected by the House?

Mr. RUSK. It has been rejected by the House.

Mr. BORLAND. I must call for a separate vote upon that question.

Mr. HAMLIN. I ask for a separate vote upon the amendment in relation to a mail route between Boston and Halifax.

On motion by Mr. RUSK, all the amendments, with the exception of the above-mentioned two, were receded from.

The question then recurred on the motion of Mr. RUSK that the Senate recede from the following amendment:

"Sec. —. And be it further enacted, That the Postmaster General be, and he is hereby, authorized to enter into contracts for the transportation of the United States mail on board the steam-vessels which at present ply regularly between Boston, in the State of Massachusetts, and Halifax, in Nova Scotia, upon such terms as may appear to him reasonable."

Mr. HAMLIN. I hope the Senate will not recede from this amendment. It was recommended by the Postmaster General. Boats are now running about once a week from Boston to Halifax, and the object is to allow the mails to be put on board of these boats, so as to be carried directly to Halifax. The route round by the Bay of Fundy takes from two to three weeks. The object is to have a shorter conveyance.

Mr. RUSK. I know this would be a great convenience, but it is only three months until the next session of Congress. There are about thirty States interested in the internal routes provided by the bill. The result, I am told by a member of the House, if we send the bill back, will be its defeat.

The motion to recede was agreed to.

The question then recurred on the motion to recede from the following amendment of the Senate, disagreed to by the House:

"Sec. 16. And be it further enacted, That it shall be the duty of the Postmaster General to issue proposals and contract for the transportation of a daily mail between Louisville and Cairo, St. Louis and Cairo, Cairo and Memphis, and Memphis and New Orleans, and to supply such intermediate points as he may order from time to time, on suitable and safe steamboats."

Mr. BORLAND. I hope the Senate will insist on that amendment to the bill. I consider it, and I trust a majority of the Senate will consider it, as fully equal in importance, and perhaps of more value to the country, than all the rest of the bill together. We hear complaints because the mail is not carried more than once a week, or twice a week, or because there is not a daily mail at particular points. Why, sir, upon the Ohio and Mississippi rivers, between the points mentioned in that amendment, we have no regular mail at all.

I am unwilling to occupy the time of the Senate in repeating what I have said here on more than one occasion in regard to this, but I must be permitted to say a few words upon this subject. Upon the Ohio river from Louisville to its mouth, and on the Mississippi river from the mouth of the Ohio to New Orleans, there is no mail line at all. These rivers stand in that respect on a different footing from all other mail routes in the United States; for on every other route advertisements are issued, and the mail is carried by contract, and carried regularly once a month, once a week, once a day, or at known, regular, and stated intervals; but upon these great rivers there is no regular mail line. The system there carried on is of this kind: agents are appointed at the different towns along the rivers between these points. They take the mail and send it off, as freight, upon steamboats as they pass along. Steamboats, as we all know, are of unequal speed. We know, also, that some are engaged in the transportation of passengers and freight from certain points, and pass with great rapidity between those main points; others are engaged in a sort of coasting trade. The consequence is, that some boats will pass between the mouth of the Ohio river and

32D CONGRESS, 1ST SESSION.

TUESDAY, AUGUST 31, 1852.

NEW SERIES.....No. 155.

New Orleans in one fourth the time that others take; and I, living at a town on that river, may chance to put my letter in the office to-day; a mail will be made up—the agent will put it as freight on one of these coasting boats, and it will take ten days to get to New Orleans; one of the fast boats passing along will stop, and the agent will put on board a mail containing letters written by those residing in the same town the day after mine, and they will get to New Orleans three or four days sooner. The consequence is confusion beyond anything that can be conceived of by those who have not to suffer it. The revenues of the Department suffer in consequence of it. Business men are driven from the mails; and I have estimates made by men of experience and observation, some of whom are, or have been, postmasters, some editors of newspapers, merchants, and others, and many of them do not hesitate to say that not more than one tenth part of the mail matter now passes in the mails there. Others of great intelligence, and experience, and observation have looked into it, and they say that not more than one twentieth part of the mail matter passes in the mails. That fact answers the objections which the Department have heretofore made, that there is no revenue to meet this expense. Sir, you cannot have revenue when you have such a system that business men are driven from the use of the mails as a means of carrying their correspondence. The only objection that ever has been made is, that the receipts from postage will not amount to a sufficient sum to pay the cost of the transportation of this mail. If you establish a regular mail from Louisville to New Orleans, and from St. Louis to New Orleans, instead of having only one twentieth part of the mail matter carried in the mails, you will have the whole of it carried, because no man of business will select uncertain private conveyances when there is a daily mail passing his door; particularly at the low rate of postage which we now have. I repeat, that now not more than one letter out of ten, and perhaps not more than one out of twenty, is carried in the mails; whereas, if this line be established, we shall have all the mail matter on that route brought into the mails, and thus there will be a sufficient revenue to pay the expense and a surplus remaining.

For these reasons, and considering the immense amount of business involved, and the complaints that have been made, I do hope that the Senate will insist on this provision in the bill. I think that if we send it back to the House of Representatives, they cannot, in justice, or from any consideration of policy or of propriety, refuse to retain it.

Mr. RUSK. I reported a bill accomplishing the object which this amendment intends to accomplish. I am in favor of giving a daily mail to that section of the country. It has been resisted, however, for years by the Department, on account of the additional expense which it will throw upon them. It has been now struck out by the House of Representatives. It will be but three months till we meet again, and Congress can act upon it at the next session, before a contract could be made; and it seems to me, therefore, that the question is whether we shall stick to this amendment or lose the entire bill.

Mr. BORLAND. I move that the Senate insist on this amendment.

Mr. HAMLIN. The Senator from Texas made a motion to recede, and I wish to know which question is to be first put?

The PRESIDENT. The Chair has examined the rule to ascertain whether any preference is given to a motion to insist over a motion to recede, and he finds that they both stand on the same footing, and, therefore, the motion first made is to be put. The question, therefore, will be on the motion to recede from the amendment of the Senate.

Mr. BORLAND. On that question, I ask for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered; and being taken, resulted—yeas 18, nays 27; as follows:

YEAS—Messrs. Badger, Bayard, Cass, Cooper, Dawson,

Fish, Foot, Hale, Hamlin, Mangum, Mason, Miller, Morton, Pratt, Rusk, Smith, and Spruance—18.

NAYS—Messrs. Adams, Bell, Borland, Bright, Brodhead, Brooke, Butler, Chase, Clemens, De Saussure, Dodge of Wisconsin, Dodge of Iowa, Downs, Geyer, Houston, James, Jones of Iowa, King, Mallory, Meriwether, Shields, Soulé, Stockton, Underwood, Wade, Walker, and Weller—27.

So the Senate refused to recede.

Mr. RUSK. The other amendments are equally as important. If we insist on this, we should insist on all. I therefore move to reconsider the vote receding from our other amendments.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. RUSK. I now move that we insist on all our amendments which have been disagreed to by the House, and ask a conference.

The motion was agreed to; and

Messrs. RUSK, BORLAND, and BADGER were appointed the conferees on the part of the Senate.

A message was subsequently received from the House of Representatives, by Mr. J. W. FORNEY, its Clerk, announcing that it insisted on its disagreement to the amendments of the Senate to the bill of the House, "to establish certain post roads," and agreed to the conference asked by the Senate, and had appointed Messrs. CLARK, HALL, and HAVEN conferees on its part.

TRADE OF THE BRITISH COLONIES.

Mr. HAMLIN, from the Committee on Printing, to which was referred the motion of the 26th instant, to print five thousand additional copies of the report of the Secretary of the Treasury, relative to the trade of the British North American colonies, reported thereon; whereupon it was Ordered, That five thousand additional copies of the said report be printed for the use of the Senate, one thousand additional copies for the Secretary of the Treasury, and five hundred additional copies for J. D. Andrews.

NAVY APPROPRIATION BILL.

A message was received from the House of Representatives, by Mr. FORNEY, its Clerk, announcing that it agreed to some, and disagreed to other amendments of the Senate, to the bill "making appropriations for the naval service for the year ending the 30th of June, 1853."

The Senate proceeded to consider their amendments disagreed to by the House of Representatives to the bill last mentioned; and on motion by Mr. HUNTER, it was

Resolved, That the Senate insist on their amendments disagreed to by the House, and ask a conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses.

On motion by Mr. HUNTER, that the Committee of Conference be appointed by the President pro tempore, Mr. MALLORY, Mr. PEARCE, and Mr. TOUCHEY were appointed the committee.

A message was subsequently received from the House of Representatives, by Mr. FORNEY, its Clerk, announcing that it agreed to the conference asked by the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the bill making appropriations for the naval service for the year ending the 30th June, 1853, and that it had appointed Mr. PHELPS, Mr. FREDERICK P. STANTON, and Mr. THADDEUS STEVENS, the Committee of Conference on its part.

ISTHMUS OF TEHUANTEPEC.

Mr. MASON. The Committee on Foreign Relations, to which was referred a message of the President of the United States, in answer to a resolution of the Senate calling for the correspondence between the Governments of the United States and Mexico, respecting the right of way across the Isthmus of Tehuantepec, have instructed me to make a report accompanied by three resolutions. I do not ask or expect that the matter will be acted upon at this session, but it is the desire of the committee that the report should be made, and the resolutions laid before the Senate and printed for the use of the Senate.

The resolutions were read, as follow:

Resolved, As the judgment of the Senate, that in the present posture of the question, on the grant of a right of way through the territory of Mexico, at the Isthmus of Tehuantepec, conceded by that Republic to one of its citizens, and now the property of citizens of the United States, as the same is presented by the correspondence and documents accompanying the message of the President of the United States of the 27th July, 1852, it is not compatible with the dignity of this Government to prosecute the subject further by negotiation.

Second, Should the Government of Mexico propose a renewal of such negotiation, it should be acceded to only upon distinct propositions from Mexico, not inconsistent with the demands made by this Government in reference to said grant.

Third, That the Government of the United States stand committed to all of its citizens to protect them in their rights abroad, as well as at home, within the sphere of its jurisdiction; and should Mexico, within a reasonable time, fail to reconsider her position concerning said grant, it will then become the duty of this Government to review all existing relations with that Republic, and to adopt such measures as will preserve the honor of the country and the rights of its citizens.

Mr. MASON. So far, this is the act of the Committee on Foreign Relations alone. I regret very much that they were under the necessity of making any report at all, or that they were not able to report at an earlier period of the session. I cannot ask the Senate now to consider the subject. It is one of very grave character and great importance. I can ask only, that the report may be laid upon the table, and that with the documents which accompany it, and the resolutions, be printed for the use of the Senate.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. BROOKE informally submitted the following resolution for consideration; which was read, and ordered to be printed:

Resolved, That the Executive be requested to inform the Government of Mexico, that unless the American holders of the right of way across Tehuantepec shall, on or before the 1st day of March next, be put in full possession of their property and franchises, this Government will proceed to protect them in the occupation and enjoyment thereof. And that if this determination should occasion a rupture of relations between the two Republics, this Government will rely for justification, in the eyes of mankind, upon the obligation of every Government to protect the rights of its own citizens, and upon the flagrant and the indefensible violation by Mexico of private right and national law.

POST OFFICE APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. MILLER, from the Committee of Conference on the part of the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the bill making appropriations for the Post Office Department during the fiscal year ending the 30th June, 1853, reported that they had met the conferees on the part of the House, and, after full and free conference, have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows, to wit: That the House recede from their disagreement to the amendments of the Senate, numbered 1, 2, 4, and 5.

INDIGENT INSANE.

Mr. COOPER. I move to postpone all the prior orders, for the purpose of taking up the bill from the House making a grant of land to the several States of the Union for the benefit of indigent insane persons. I hope we will wind up our business by passing a bill for such a humane purpose.

Mr. CASS. I ask for the yeas and nays on that motion.

Mr. SHIELDS. I hope the honorable Senator will withdraw the call for the yeas and nays, and let the bill be tested by a fair vote, without discussion.

Mr. CASS. It must lead necessarily to a long discussion.

Mr. SHIELDS. I hope not.

Mr. COOPER. I intend to say not a word in regard to the bill.

Mr. SHIELDS. I am in favor of this bill. I was a member of the committee that reported it, and I believe there is not a friend of the bill here who wants to discuss it. It is one of those bills that, in my humble opinion, being for such a humane object, should be treated without much discussion.

Mr. CASS. I would cheerfully withdraw the call for the yeas and nays if there was to be no discussion, and no amendments offered to the bill.

Mr. SHIELDS. I hope there will be no discussion, and no amendments, but a fair vote.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I cannot agree to that, for I have an amendment which I wish to offer.

Mr. JONES, of Iowa. I shall vote to take up this bill, and for the very reason that I know that amendments will be offered to it, which I hope will be adopted.

Mr. CASS. Then I must insist on the call for the yeas and nays. If discussion is to proceed on this bill it cannot be disposed of at this session.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. MASON. If this bill be taken up it must necessarily lead to a long discussion.

Mr. BELL. I should like to know who will debate it—not its friends certainly.

Mr. MASON. Then its opponents will debate it.

Mr. BELL. Let the debate come on.

Mr. BRIGHT. One fact must be apparent—that if this bill be taken up, there are three or four bills on the table which will be offered as amendments to it. There is the homestead bill, and several railroad bills which will be offered as amendments, and they are germane, because they all ask for appropriations of land. I am a friend of this measure. I would be glad to see it taken up and passed, but I am quite sure, that if it be taken up now, and these amendments be offered, the residue of the session will be consumed with the subject.

Mr. ADAMS. I merely rise to suggest to Senators in favor of the proposition, that if they expect that so large a portion of the lands lying in the new States are to be taken and divided out to the old States without objection being offered, or amendments being proposed, they certainly are drawing very strongly upon the forbearance of the representatives of the new States.

Mr. BELL. No one can object to offering amendments. All we want is to have a chance to vote upon them when they are offered.

Mr. MILLER. This is the only bill which gives anything like justice to all the States of the Union. It makes a fair distribution of lands for the benefit of this unfortunate class of people in every State of the Union. In all the scrambles here for public lands for railroads, and for all kinds of purposes, this is the first time that humanity has made a call. I trust the bill will be taken up.

The question being taken by yeas and nays on the motion to proceed to the consideration of the bill, it resulted—yeas 33, nays 18; as follows:

YEAS—Messrs. Badger, Bell, Borland, Brooke, Chase, Clarke, Cooper, Dawson, De Saussure, Downs, Fish, Foot, Geyer, Hale, Hamlin, Houston, Jones of Iowa, Mallory, Mangum, Miller, Morton, Penrice, Pratt, Seward, Shields, Smith, Spruance, Stockton, Sumner, Underwood, Upham, Wade, and Weller—33.

NAYS—Messrs. Adams, Bayard, Bright, Brodhead, Butler, Cass, Clemens, Dodge of Iowa, Douglas, Felch, Gwin, Hurver, King, Mason, Meriwether, Norris, Rusk, and Walker—18.

So the motion was agreed to, and the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill.

It proposes to grant to the several States and Territories, for the benefit of indigent insane persons, ten millions of acres of land, to be apportioned under the direction of the President of the United States, in the compound ratio of the geographical area, and representation of said States in the House of Representatives according to the Census of 1850: Provided, That the area of no State shall be computed at more than fifty thousand square miles; that the land, after being surveyed, shall be apportioned to the several States and Territories in sections or subdivisions of sections; and whenever there are public lands in a State or Territory, worth $1 25 per acre, the value of the lands to be determined by the Governor of the State or Territory, the quantity to which the State or Territory shall be entitled shall be selected from those lands, and the Secretary of the Interior is to issue to those States in which there are no public lands of the value of $1 25 per acre, land scrip to the amount of their distributive shares in acres, under the provisions of this act, which scrip to be sold by said States, and the proceeds applied solely to the uses and purposes herein prescribed: Provided further, That in no case shall any State to which land scrip may thus be issued be allowed to locate the same within the limits of any other State, or of any organized Territory of the United States; but their assignees may thus locate said land scrip upon any of the unappropriated lands of the United States subject to private entry.

It further provides that all moneys derived from the sale of these lands by the States or Territories to which the lands are apportioned, and from the sales of land scrip, shall be invested in stocks of the United States, or the States, or of some other safe stocks, yielding not less than five per centum upon their par value; and that the moneys so invested shall constitute a perpetual fund, the capital of which shall remain forever undiminished, and the interest of which shall be inviolably appropriated to the comfortable maintenance and support of the curable and incurable indigent insane.

Mr. GWIN. I have an amendment to offer to the bill. It is to add:

And be it further enacted, That with the view of securing the speedy construction of two railroads connecting the Mississippi with the Pacific ocean, the one from a point north of Memphis, and the other not south of St. Louis, the President of the United States is hereby authorized to enter into contracts, in conformity with the provisions of this act, for the construction of a railroad from a point on Red river, at or near the southwest corner of the State of Arkansas, on the most direct and feasible route, via the vicinity of El Paso, to a point on the eastern boundary of the State of California, at or near the junction of the Gila with the Colorado river, connecting with the navigable waters flowing into the Gulf of California; and the other from a point on the western boundary of Missouri or Iowa, (not within the limits of any existing State,) on the most direct and feasible route to the eastern boundary of the State of California, with a track departing from this line at some point west of the Rocky Mountains, and running on the most direct and feasible route, to some safe and commodious harbor in the Territory of Oregon, which shall be at all times accessible to the largest class of sea-going vessels navigating the Pacific ocean.

Sec. 2. And be it further enacted, That the right of way, two hundred feet wide, throughout the entire length of said roads, is hereby set apart and appropriated for the use of said roads forever; and a quantity of land, equal to the alternate sections, for the space of fifty miles on each side of said roads, to wit: the sections which shall be marked and designated on the public surveys of said lands by odd numbers, are hereby set apart and appropriated to aid in the construction of said roads, in the manner and subject to the terms, conditions, limitations, and restrictions hereinafter provided.

Sec. 3. And be it further enacted, That for the purpose of facilitating the extension of one of said roads eastward from its terminus on Red river, on the two lines, the one through the State of Arkansas, and the other through the State of Louisiana, so as to connect at the Mississippi river with the several lines of railroads now in process of construction between the Mississippi and the Atlantic seaboard, a like quantity of land is hereby granted to the States of Arkansas and Louisiana, with the same terms, conditions, limitations, and restrictions, to wit: the alternate sections designated on the public surveys by odd numbers, for twenty miles on each side of said road, throughout its entire length within the State of Arkansas, are hereby granted to the said State of Arkansas; and the alternate sections designated on the public surveys by odd numbers, for twenty miles on each side of said road, throughout its entire length within the State of Louisiana, are hereby granted to the said State of Louisiana; and for the purpose of facilitating the extension of the other of said roads eastward from the terminus on the Missouri river, on two lines, the one through the State of Iowa, and the other through the State of Missouri, so as to connect with the principal lines now in process of construction between the Atlantic seaboard, the lakes, and the Mississippi river, a like quantity of land is hereby granted to the States of Iowa and Missouri, with the same terms, conditions, limitations, and restrictions, to wit: the alternate sections designated on the public surveys by odd numbers, for twenty miles on each side of said road, throughout its entire length within the State of Iowa, are hereby granted to the State of Iowa; and the alternate sections designated on the public surveys by odd numbers, for twenty miles on each side of said road, throughout its entire length within the State of Missouri, are hereby granted to the State of Missouri: Provided, That the lands granted to the State of Missouri, at the present session, in aid of railroads, shall be deducted from the amount hereby granted: And provided further, That if the State of Missouri shall cause those two roads to accept of, and in all things comply with the requirements of this act, in respect to the grants made to the several States herein provided for, then the lands herein granted may be divided between those two roads upon just and equitable principles, to be determined by the President of the United States; and for the purpose of facilitating the extension of each of said roads westward from the eastern boundary of the State of California, to safe and commodious harbors, which shall be at all times accessible to the largest class of sea-going vessels navigating the Pacific ocean, a like quantity of land is hereby granted to the State of California, with the same terms, conditions, limitations, and provisions, to wit: the alternate sections designated on the public surveys by odd numbers, for forty miles on each side of each of said roads, throughout their entire length within the limits of the State of California.

Sec. 4. And be it further enacted, That in all cases where the United States shall have disposed of any of the lands herein granted to any State, or from any cause shall be unable to convey a title to the same, the deficiency may be made up by selections, to be made under the authority of the Governor of each of said States, respectively, out of any unimproved public lands designated on the public surveys by odd numbers, and which shall lie nearest to the lines of said roads, respectively; and in like manner all deficiencies in the lands herein set apart and appropriated to enable the contractors to make said roads through the territory of the United States, may be made up by the selections to be made by said contractors, subject to the approval of the Secretary of the Interior.

Sec. 5. And be it further enacted, That the said grants of land are made to the States herein named on the express conditions following, to wit:

First. That the States of Louisiana, Arkansas, Missouri, and Iowa, respectively, will commence the roads within their respective States within one year from the passage of this act, and prosecute them with vigor to completion, and will complete the same within the period of five years from the passage of this act; and that the State of California will commence each of the roads within her limits within one year, and prosecute them with vigor to completion, and will complete them within ten years from the passage of this act, and so much sooner as the roads through the territory to connect therewith shall be completed by the contractors herein provided for.

Second. That the United States mail shall be carried on said roads forever, free of charge or expense to the Government, under the direction of, and in strict conformity with the requirements of the Post Office Department; and that all troops, seamen, arms, munitions of war, military and naval stores, and all funds and property of whatever kind belonging to the United States, and all persons on official business in their employment, shall at all times be transported and conveyed on and over said roads free of charge or expense to the Government; and for all the purposes of transportation in this article mentioned, the United States shall have the preference over all persons or bodies politic whatsoever, when, in the opinion of the President of the United States, the public interest requires promptness and dispatch in such transportation.

Third. That each of said States shall conform to and comply with such and all the terms, conditions, limitations, restrictions, and provisions of this act, in respect to these roads, and shall assent to the power which is hereby expressly reserved to Congress by law, from time to time, to regulate the charges for freight and passengers thereon, subject to the restriction that Congress shall never reduce such charges below the average rates per mile for like service for the time being on first-class railroads in the United States.

Sec. 6. And be it further enacted, That it shall be the duty of the Secretary of War, under the direction of the President of the United States, within one month after the passage of this act, to prepare and cause to be published in three newspapers in the District of Columbia, and in each State of the Union, for the period of six months, inviting separate sealed proposals for the construction of each of said roads through the Territories of the United States, which is not included in any of the States of the Union. At the expiration of said period of six months, the Secretary of War, under the direction of the President, shall proceed to open the said proposals and to select from among them one for the construction of each of said roads, the terms of which shall be most favorable to the United States in these particulars, to wit:

First. Which shall insure the completion of the roads respectively within the shortest period of time, not to exceed ten years from the date of the contract in any event.

Second. Which, in consideration of the lands herein set apart and appropriated and of the use of the roads for the periods agreed upon, shall insure said roads respectively to be kept in good repair, to be run and managed in all respects in compliance with the terms of the contract and with the provisions of this act, and to be surrendered and delivered up to the United States in good condition, together with all the appurtenances thereunto belonging, in the shortest period of time, not to exceed thirty years from the date of completion in any event.

All the provisions of this act, except so far as they relate exclusively to the States herein named, shall be deemed and held to be parts of said contracts, whether expressly incorporated and set forth therein or not; and the Secretary of War, under the direction of the President, is hereby authorized to demand, receive, and approve such securities and guarantees for the faithful performance of the said contracts as he shall deem necessary and proper; the said proposals to be decided upon and the contracts entered into at the expiration of one month from the day fixed upon for opening the proposals; and in the event the contractors shall not furnish the securities and guarantees required by the Secretary of War, under the direction of the President, within thirty days from the time of awarding the contracts, a selection shall be made from the other proposals, or like advertisements shall be immediately made for new proposals for the period of three months, and the same proceedings shall be had thereon as herein required for the first proposals.

Sec. 7. And be it further enacted, That the said contractors for each of said roads shall be deemed and held in law to be corporate and politic with perpetual succession for the period of said contracts, and for five years thereafter for the purpose of winding up their business, with the capacity of making by-laws not inconsistent with their contracts, and of suing and being sued in all courts having competent jurisdiction, and be vested with all the powers, rights, privileges, and immunities necessary and proper to the performance of their said contracts, or necessary to the vindication of their rights accruing under or growing out of or pertaining to the same.

Sec. 8. And be it further enacted, That so soon as the contractors on either of said roads shall have completed and put into successful operation one section of one hundred miles thereof, it shall be the duty of the President of the United States to issue to them patents for one third of the land set apart and appropriated in the second section of this act, which shall be located along and pertain to the portion of the road so completed, retaining the other two thirds as additional security for the completion of the entire road; and when an additional section of one hundred miles of the road shall have been completed and put in operation as aforesaid, a like quantity of land shall be conveyed in like manner; and so on for each section of one hundred miles so completed, until five hundred consecutive miles of said road shall have been completed and put in successful operation; when upon the completion of an additional section of one hundred miles of said road, two thirds of the land pertaining to said section, and also one of the remaining thirds pertaining to the first section of the road so completed, shall in like manner be conveyed to the contractors to enable them to prosecute the work; and upon the completion of another section of one hundred miles, two thirds of the land pertaining to that section, together with the remaining third pertaining to the first section, shall be conveyed in like manner; and so, on the completion of another section of one hundred miles of the road, the two thirds of the land pertaining to that section, together with the one third pertaining to the second section of the road, shall be conveyed in like manner; and so on shall there be conveyed to the contractors in like manner for the completion of each section of one hundred miles of the road, two thirds of the land pertaining to that section, together with one of the remaining thirds of the land pertaining to one of the first five sections in the order in which those sections were completed, until fifteen hundred miles of said road shall have been completed and put in successful operation; upon the completion and successful operation of fifteen hundred consecutive miles of either of said roads, there shall be conveyed to the contractors in like manner for the construction of each hundred miles of road, three fourths of all the lands pertaining to such sections, and a remaining third pertaining to one of the sections already completed; and so on until the whole road shall have been completed and put in successful operation, when the residue of all the lands pertaining to such road shall be conveyed in like manner to the contractors.

Sec. 9. And be it further enacted, That it shall be stipulated in the contracts for the construction of said roads, that a certain number of miles of each shall be completed each year; and it shall be so arranged in this respect, that the whole of each road shall be completed within ten years and as soon as is practicable, and that all portions of said roads shall be kept in good repair, and be run and managed in conformity with the provisions of this act from the day of the completion of such portion of either road; and in case of a failure on the part of the contractors for either road to comply with the provisions of this act and the terms of their contract in all respects, without a reasonable excuse, to be judged of by Congress, subject to the veto power of the President under the Constitution, such contract may be annulled, and the road and all the lands remaining unsold shall be forfeited and shall revert to the United States.

Sec. 10. And be it further enacted, That the said roads shall become and remain the property of the contractors therefor, respectively, for the period specified in said contracts, subject to the terms of their contracts and the provisions of this act: Provided, That Congress hereby expressly reserves the right by law, from time to time to regulate the charges for freight and passengers thereon, subject to the restriction that Congress shall never reduce such charges below the average rates per mile for like service for the time being on other first-class railroads in the United States.

Sec. 11. And be it further enacted, That by the contracts for the construction of each of said roads, it shall be distinctly understood that the United States mails shall be carried on said roads during the full period of said contracts, free of charge or expense to the Government, under the direction of, and in strict compliance with, the requirements of the Post Office Department; and that all troops, seamen, arms, munitions of war, military and naval stores, and all funds and property of whatever kind belonging to the United States, and all persons on official business in their employment, shall at all times be transported and conveyed on said roads free of charge or expense to the Government; and for all the purposes of transportation in this article mentioned, the United States shall have the preference over all persons or bodies-politic whatever, when, in the opinion of the President of the United States, the public interest requires promptness and dispatch in such transportation.

Sec. 12. And be it further enacted, That in case either of the States herein named to which lands are granted, to facilitate the extension of either of said roads, shall fail to accept the same, on the terms and with the conditions herein provided, within one year from the passage of this act, the Secretary of War, under the direction of the President, is hereby authorized to award contracts for the construction of the roads, in such States as shall so fail or refuse, to the contractors having charge of the line of road of which such roads are extensions; the said contracts to be awarded on the same terms and conditions, in all respects, as the other contracts herein provided for; and the President shall dispose of and convey the lands proposed to be granted to such States, in the same manner as is herein provided for the lands set apart and appropriated in the second section of this bill.

Sec. 13. And be it further enacted, That upon the expiration of the period of time specified in the contracts for the construction of said roads, respectively, whereby the same shall cease to be the property of said contractors, and shall be surrendered to the United States, so much of either of said roads as shall at that time be situated within the limits of any one of the States, may be granted to such States upon the same terms and conditions, in all respects, as are herein prescribed to the States receiving grants of land under the provisions of this act; and the residue of said roads, if any, to be conveyed in like manner and on like terms and conditions, to the States in which they may be situated when such territory may become States of the Union.

Sec. 14. And be it further enacted, That the said roads shall be constructed in the best and most substantial manner, with all the modern improvements, with the best quality of iron rail, which shall weigh not less than sixty-four pounds to the yard, and a uniform gauge of six feet for the track.

Sec. 15. And be it further enacted, That a commissioner for each of said roads, who shall receive a salary of — dollars each, payable quarterly, shall be appointed by the President, by and with the advice of the Senate, whose duty it shall be, under the direction of the Secretary of War, to take all necessary measures to protect the public interests, and see that the terms of the contracts, respectively, shall be fully and strictly complied with; and the said commissioners shall, once a year, or oftener if required, make to the Secretary of War full reports of their proceedings, and of the state and progress of the roads.

Mr. RUSK. I am favorable to this bill. If we could get a vote upon it, I should certainly vote for it. I have voted for similar bills heretofore; but, for one, I must say, we are consuming the time of the Senate to no purpose. It seems that we are about to cry out before we get out of the woods. There are committees of conference on almost every appropriation bill, and on one or two other bills, which it is absolutely necessary should be passed. This amendment will be discussed. Other amendments will be offered and discussed; and it must be evident to every one that the time of the Senate will thus be consumed to no purpose; and we shall be exactly where we are now. I move, therefore, to postpone the further consideration of the subject until to-morrow.

Mr. SHIELDS. I hope my honorable friend will not insist on that motion. I agree with him that from present appearances this bill is about to lead us into embarrassment, but I am extremely sorry that a bill of this character—a bill which is in some measure sacred—should be made the vehicle for these various amendments, which gentlemen are now about to offer. It occurs to me that it is an improper manner to treat a subject of this kind. This bill is for the relief of those who are born with claims upon humanity. When a bill is brought in here in order to relieve, and support, and protect, and foster that unfortunate class of our fellow-beings who have been stricken by Heaven, is it proper to make it a vehicle of these various amendments? In my opinion, such a course is not worthy of the Senate.

Mr. ADAMS. Will the Senator allow me to ask him a question? Does he consider that the claims of these unfortunate people rest upon the Federal Government, or upon the State governments?

Mr. SHIELDS. Sir, I am not about to discuss the question of where that claim rests. It is, however, a claim upon the nation; and the nation cannot get rid of it. This bill has been prepared by the only agent I respect about this Capitol—by Miss Dix. All your other agents come here as the agents of selfish and sordid objects. But here is a lady, who is a voluntary agent for the unfortunate—for those who have no friends. I think, sir, that, for once, we should have a fair vote upon this question. Let the bill be beaten, if gentlemen choose; but let it be beaten openly and fairly; and not by loading down with amendments. I am in favor of this amendment as a separate proposition; but I shall vote against putting it on this bill. And if it were proposed to amend this bill by tacking on a measure granting land to the State of Illinois, I should vote against it. I want to get the bill clear from all other influences.

Mr. GWIN. I wish to reply, in a few words, to the Senator from Illinois, [Mr. SHIELDS.] He says it is not just to offer amendments to this bill. It is for me to judge of my duty to my constituents; and that duty I will perform, regardless of the admonitions of those who assume to judge for me. The measure before the Senate is important. It is not just and equal in its operation. It does not do justice to the new States, but I am in favor of the principle embodied in the bill. But its importance sinks into insignificance when compared to the great national measure embodied in my amendment. The bill I propose as an amendment has been matured by the Committee on Territories, of which I am a member, and proposes the establishment of two railroads from the Mississippi valley to the Pacific ocean, one by the northern, and the other by the southern route. Sir, it is useless to disguise the fact, that upon the completion of one or more railroads connecting our Atlantic and Pacific possessions, depends the existence of this Union. The present connection between the Atlantic States and our Pacific coast is too precarious. A hostile collision with any maritime nation will interrupt, if not destroy that connection. Do you expect we can remain one nation when our social and commercial intercourse is held by so precarious a tenure? This railroad bill, or some similar measure, must become a law before we can be considered as inseparably one people. With it nothing can separate us. The Union will be impregnable to all assaults from within or without. But I repeat that this measure, or one of similar object, and a more just and liberal policy towards California than has been pursued since I have been a member of this body, is required to make us feel on the Pacific coast that we have all of the advantages of our sister States, and are on a perfect equality with them. But I will not continue this debate. Important to my constituents as is the measure embodied in the amendment I propose, I should not have brought it forward at this late period of the session if the bill now under consideration had not been taken up. It is too late to consider either, and I propose to lay the whole subject on the table.

Mr. SHIELDS. I call for the yeas and nays on the motion of the Senator from California.

YEAS—Messrs. Adams, Bayard, Bright, Brodhead, Butler, Cass, Charlton, De Sausure, Dodge of Iowa, Douglas, Felch, Gwin, Hunter, King, Mason, Meriwether, Norris, Pratt, Rusk, Toucey, and Walker—21.

NAYS—Messrs. Badger, Bell, Borland, Brooke, Chase, Clarke, Cooper, Davis, Dawson, Downs, Fish, Foot, Geyer, Hale, Hamlin, Houston, Jones of Iowa, Mangum, Miller, Morton, Pearce, Seward, Shields, Smith, Spruance, Stockton, Sumner, Underwood, Upham, Wade, and Weller—31.

So the motion was not agreed to.

The question then recurred on the motion of Mr. RUSK, to postpone the further consideration of the bill until to-morrow.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I gave an intimation that I intended to move an amendment to this bill. The gentleman from Illinois seems to charge those who intimate anything of that kind with a disposition to defeat the bill, and load it down with amendments. I wish to say to that gentleman, and to all of the members of the Senate, that I heartily approve of this bill, which generally bears the name of one of the most estimable females of our country, and I shall vote for it most cheerfully. But it is nothing more than an appropriation of lands to objects beneficial to the American people; and while you are appropriating lands for objects of that sort, however charitable they may be, you have as much right to appropriate them for the benefit of citizens who, in all time after your asylums shall be erected, will have to support those asylums. I say you have as much right to appropriate the lands for the benefit of the people who through after ages are to support this unfortunate class, as you have to appropriate directly for the erection of the houses.

Sir, it is a very curious argument which Senators are making here. You can give lands for the benefit of the insane; and yet you cannot appropriate lands for the benefit of the sane, who are to support the insane through all time to come! A strange charity this! as if the States were mendicants coming here, knocking at your doors, to get a few acres of land to help to build houses; when the people of the States, for ages after all your lands are gone, will have to support all these objects of charity.

The PRESIDING OFFICER, (Mr. NORRIS in the chair.) The Chair is very unwilling to interfere with the Senator, but he must remind him that debate upon the merits of the bill is not in order upon a motion to postpone.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I had supposed that the merits of the question were directly in point, to show that the bill ought not to be postponed. I cannot understand how an argument can be made on the subject, unless it embraced the merits to show that you ought to act immediately instead of postponing it. I want to show the importance of acting upon this bill now, and not delaying it until to-morrow. What is the argument of the gentleman from Illinois worth? In my own State we have built two asylums, and I give the celebrated Miss Dix credit for one of them. I know that the land will be beneficial to us, and will help us to carry on these asylums; but I know, further, that when these houses have rotted down, if you would appropriate some of these lands for the benefit of internal improvements, after generations would be enriched by them, and be better enabled to support the insane existing then. I wish to show what ideas gentlemen entertain, and to bring them to the consideration of the country. Some insist that you have the power to give, through mere charity, lands for the temporary support of the insane, but that you cannot help the States to make permanent and lasting improvements which are to benefit the sane for ages to come.

Sir, there is no such distinction as that in the Constitution, in reason, or in the charities of the human heart. This bill seems to find universal support upon a momentary charity, upon an excitement of sympathy for those who are suffering under the misfortune of the deprivation of intellect. Now, my policy, the policy of the gentleman from California, and others who wish to amend this bill—as it is a portion of the land system—is to provide for coming ages.

We are not limited by that momentary sympathy which acts upon the spur of the occasion, to make a mere temporary arrangement; but, sir, our charities extend, and our sympathies extend for the insane and for the sane also; not merely for a day, or a year, but through all coming ages. It is for these reasons that I wish the bill considered now and amended.

Mr. WELLER. Mr. President, I voted to take up this bill, with the sincere hope that we might be able to pass it. I have voted against laying it on the table, anticipating that gentlemen would refrain from offering their amendments. But I see that there is no hope whatever for the passage of the bill at this session. It was one to which I was devoted. It was a bill which commended itself to my judgment, and all of the sympathies of my heart. But I see it is utterly impossible to make any progress with it at this session. I am therefore driven to the necessity of moving that the bill, with the amendments, lie on the table.

Mr. BELL. I submit that the motion is not in order.

Mr. WELLER. I believe that a motion to lay on the table takes precedence of a motion to postpone. The pending question was on the motion to postpone, and I have moved that the bill lie on the table.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. (Mr. NORRIS.) The Senator from California [Mr. GWIN] moved to lay the bill upon the table, and that motion was rejected. Since that time there has been no business done; and therefore the Chair decides that the motion of the other Senator from California is not in order.

Mr. WELLER. There has been action of the Senate since that motion was made.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Not that the Chair is aware of.

Mr. WELLER. A motion to postpone has been entertained, and that I apprehend is action.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The motion to postpone was made before the first motion to lie on the table.

Mr. BADGER. I wish to make a suggestion on the point of order. I would suggest to the Chair, that although there may have been no motion intervening since the first motion to lie on the table, yet if debate has arisen, the second motion is in order; otherwise, if the Senate once refuse to order a bill to lie on the table, they might go on and discuss it for six, eight, or ten hours, and could not then order it to lie on the table.

Mr. WELLER. I think there has been action since the former motion to lie on the table was disposed of. The subject has been considered and debated upon a motion to postpone; and therefore I think it is now in order to move that the bill lie on the table.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair is of a different opinion.

Mr. WELLER. My object is to get rid of debate, and I am therefore constrained to appeal from the decision of the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair has decided that the motion of the Senator from California is not in order, inasmuch as there has been, according to the view of the Chair, no business intervening since the former motion to lie on the table was rejected. The question is, "Shall the decision of the Chair stand as the judgment of the Senate?"

The question being taken, the decision of the Chair was overruled.

The question then recurred on the motion of Mr. WELLER, that the bill, with the amendments, lie on the table.

Mr. SEWARD asked for the yeas and nays; and they were ordered; and being taken, resulted—yeas 15, nays 25; as follows:

YEAS—Messrs. Adams, Butler, Cass, Charlton, De Saussure, Dodge of Iowa, Douglas, Downs, Houston, Hunter, King, Meriwether, Toucey, Walker, and Weller—15.
NAYS—Messrs. Badger, Bell, Brooke, Chase, Clarke, Cooper, Davis, Dawson, Foot, Geyer, Hale, Hamlin, James, Jones of Iowa, Mallory, Mangum, Morton, Norris, Pearce, Seward, Shields, Spruance, Sumner, Underwood, Upham, and Wade—25.

So the motion was not agreed to.

Mr. BORLAND. I have an amendment to offer. I submitted it informally sometime since, and it was then ordered to lie on the table. My intention was to offer it as a substitute for the original bill; but I now offer it as an amendment to the amendment of the Senator from California, [Mr. GWIN.] It is to strike out all after the enacting clause of his amendment, and insert:

That there be granted to the several States, for the purposes hereafter mentioned, ten millions of acres of land, to be apportioned under the direction of the President of the United States in the compound ratio of the geographical area and representation of said States in the House of Representatives, according to the census of 1850: Provided, That the area of no State shall be computed at more than fifty-five thousand square miles.

Sec. 2. And be it further enacted, That the land aforesaid, after being surveyed, shall be apportioned to the several States in sections or subdivisions of sections, and whenever there are lands of suitable quality in a State, the quantity to which said State shall be entitled shall be selected from such lands, and the quantity apportioned to any State in which there are no such lands shall be located in the territory belonging to the United States, and not within the limits of any State to which the Indian title shall be extinguished; and it shall be the duty of the States to offer the said lands immediately, and to complete the same at the earliest practicable day: Provided, That the said lands shall not be sold at a less rate per acre than the minimum price of the public lands, and that they be subject to the right of preemption, like the said public lands: Provided, also, That the lands hereby granted shall be taken from such portion of the public lands as shall be subject to entry at private sale at the time of selection.

Sec. 3. And be it further enacted, That whenever the apportionment of said lands shall be completed, patents shall be issued to the several States for the portions which shall be allotted to them; respectively; and thereupon the said States shall assume the management and sale of the lands thus apportioned to them.

Sec. 4. And be it further enacted, That all the expenses of management and superintendence of said lands previous to their sales, and all expenses incurred in the management and disbursement of the moneys which may be received therefrom, shall be paid by the States to which they may belong.

Sec. 5. And be it further enacted, That all moneys derived from the sales of the lands aforesaid, shall be invested in stocks of the United States, or of the States, and that the moneys so invested shall constitute a perpetual fund, the capital of which shall remain forever undiminished, and the interest of which shall be inviolably appropriated to the comfortable maintenance and support of the curable and incurable indigent insane, blind, deaf, and dumb.

Sec. 6. And be it further enacted, That the grant of land hereby authorized shall be made on the conditions following, to which, as well as to the provisions hereinbefore contained, the previous assent of the several States shall be signified by legislative acts:

First. If any portion of the fund invested as provided by the foregoing section, or any portion of the interest thereon, shall by any action or contingency be diminished or lost, it shall be replaced by the State to which it belongs, so that the capital of the fund shall remain forever undiminished, and the annual interest shall be regularly applied without diminution to the purposes mentioned in the fifth section of this act.

Second. The interest of said fund shall be faithfully applied to the maintenance and support of the curable and incurable indigent insane, blind, deaf, and dumb, who shall be placed in regularly-organized State institutions, or in public incorporated institutions or hospitals, for the exclusive care of the insane, blind, deaf, and dumb, or in public hospitals or schools for the sole care and treatment of the same, having full corps of officers charged with the management of said institutions, and resident physicians attached thereto; and in no case shall any part of the said fund or the interest thereof, be applied permanently or temporarily to the maintenance, or support of insane persons who may be kept or confined in jails, or in buildings connected with or attached to them, or in any work-houses or poor-houses, or in any department of the same whatsoever, or in any private hospital, or in any general hospital not exclusively devoted to and occupied for the remedial care of the same.

Sec. 7. And be it further enacted, That if any State shall establish a public State institution for the maintenance and education of idiots, they may, at the discretion of such State, be permitted to participate in the benefits of this act, under the restrictions hereinbefore specified, and in the ratio of their numbers, relatively to the insane, for whose maintenance and support the interest of the fund belonging to such State shall be applied, anything in this act to the contrary notwithstanding.

Sec. 8. And be it further enacted, That the right of way through the public lands be, and the same hereby is, granted to the following States respectively, viz: Arkansas, Iowa, Wisconsin, Michigan, Ohio, Indiana, Mississippi, Louisiana, Alabama, Florida, and California, and to the Territory of Minnesota, for the construction, under the authority and direction of the Legislatures respectively of each of said States and of the said Territory, upon such route or routes as said States or Territory respectively shall direct, between the following points, viz: in Arkansas, from a point on the west bank of the Mississippi river opposite the town of Memphis, Tennessee, by way of Little Rock, to or near Fulton, on Red river; from Helena, by way of Little Rock, to Fort Smith; and from Gaines's Landing, by way of Camden, to or near Fulton. In Iowa, from Dubuque to Keokuk; and from Davenport and Burlington to the Missouri river, with a branch from the latter to Keosauque. In Wisconsin, from the southern line of the State of Wisconsin, by way of Janesville and Fond du Lac, to Lake Superior, in said State; and from Prairie La Crosse, on the Mississippi river, in Wisconsin, to Milwaukee, in said State. In Michigan, from Pontiac to the waters of Lake Michigan, in Ottawa county, from Lake or river Saint Clair to Lake Michigan; from Milwaukee by Grand Traverse Bay to Mackinaw; from Grand river by way of the Straits of Mackinaw and Sault Ste. Marie to the Montreal river. In Ohio, from Beebe, in Ohio, by way of Chillicothe, Hillsboro', Cincinnati, and Vincennes, to a point on the east bank of the Mississippi river opposite the city of Saint Louis. In Indiana, from Indianapolis to connect with the Mobile and Chicago route, at or near the latter place. In Mississippi, from Brandon to the eastern line of the State of Mississippi, in the direction of Montgomery, Alabama. And to the States of Louisiana and Mississippi, respectively, for the construction of a railroad from New Orleans, in Louisiana, by way of Jackson, in Mississippi, and thence by Canton, Mississippi, to some point on the line between Tennessee, Mississippi, and Alabama, so as to connect with the proposed Nashville and New Orleans road; and to the State of Mississippi, from Canton, in said State, to the Tennessee line by way of Holly Springs, in said State. In Alabama and Florida, from Montgomery to the waters of Pensacola Bay, with branches to the Chattahoochee river, and a branch to the waters of the Tumsaw river and Mobile Bay. In Louisiana, from Shreveport, in said State, to a point on the west bank of the Mississippi river, at Providence or opposite Vicksburg. In Alabama, from Girard to Mobile Bay; and from Selma, on the Alabama river, to Guntersville, on the Tennessee river. In California, from San Francisco to San José. In Florida, from Pensacola, by way of Tallahassee and Madison, with a branch to Saint Mark's and a branch to Tampa Bay, to Saint Mary's in the State of Georgia. And in the Territory of Minnesota, from Fond du Lac, or the Falls of Saint Louis river, to Saint Paul; and from the western line of Minnesota, through the valley of Minnesota river, to Dubuque, with a branch to Saint Paul.

Sec. 9. And be it further enacted, That said States and Territory, respectively, shall have the right, also, to take necessary materials of earth, stone, and timber, for the construction of said railroads, from the public lands of the United States adjacent thereto: Provided, That in locating the railroads aforesaid, and assigning the limits to the easement, no more land shall be taken from the United States than is necessary for a convenient construction and use of said roads or public ways for transportation, including stations, with the usual buildings of all kinds, turn-outs, and such other appurtenances as are usually enjoyed by railroad companies; and a copy of the location of said roads made under the direction of the Legislature, shall be forwarded to the proper local land offices respectively, and to the General Land Office at Washington city, within ninety days after the completion of the same, to be recorded.

Sec. 10. And be it further enacted, That there be, and is hereby, granted to the said States and Territory, for the purpose of aiding in making the railroads aforesaid, every alternate section of land designated by even numbers, for six sections in width on each side of said roads respectively: but in case it shall appear that the United States have, when the lines of routes of said roads are definitely fixed by the authority aforesaid, sold any section, or any part thereof, granted as aforesaid, or that the right of preemption has attached to the same, then it shall be lawful for any agent or agents, to be appointed by the Governors of said States or Territory, respectively, to select, subject to the approval of the Secretary of the Interior, from the lands of the United States most contiguous to the tier of sections above specified, so much land, in alternate sections or parts of sections, as shall be equal to such lands as the United States have sold, or to which the right of preemption has attached as aforesaid, which lands thus selected in lieu of those sold, and to which the right of preemption has attached as aforesaid, together with the sections and parts of sections designated by even numbers as aforesaid, and appropriated as aforesaid, shall be held by the said States and Territory, respectively, for the use and purpose aforesaid: Provided, That the lands to be so located shall in no case be further than fifteen miles from the line of the road in each case, and selected for and on account of each of said roads: Provided further, That the lands hereby granted shall be exclusively applied in the construction of that road for which it was granted and selected, and shall be disposed of only as the work progresses, and the same shall be applied to no other purpose whatsoever: And provided further, That any and all lands heretofore reserved to the United States by any act of Congress, or in any manner by competent authority, for the purpose of aiding in any object of internal improvement, or for any other purpose whatsoever, be, and the same are hereby, reserved to the United States from the operation of this act, except so far as it may be found necessary to locate the routes of the said railroads through such reserved lands, in which case the right of way only shall be granted.

Sec. 11. And be it further enacted, That the sections and parts of sections of land which by such grant shall remain to the United States, within six miles on each side of said road, shall not be sold for less than double the minimum price of the public lands when sold; which lands shall, from time to time, be offered at public sale to the highest bidder, under the direction of the Secretary of the Interior, and shall not be subject to entry until they shall have been so offered at public sale.

Sec. 12. And be it further enacted, That the said lands hereby granted to the said States and Territory, respectively, shall be subject to the disposal of the Legislature thereof, for the purposes aforesaid and no other; and the said railroads shall be and remain public highways for the use of the Government of the United States, free from toll or other charge upon the transportation of any property or troops of the United States.

Sec. 13. And be it further enacted, That if the said railroads respectively shall not be completed within ten years, each of the said States and Territory, respectively, shall be bound to pay to the United States the amount which may be received upon the sale of any part of said lands by said States and Territory, respectively, the title to the purchasers under said States remaining valid; and the title to the residue of said lands shall reinvest in the United States, to have and to hold the same in the same manner as if this act had not been passed.

Sec. 14. And be it further enacted, That the United States mail shall at all times be transported on said railroad, under the direction of the Post Office Department, at such prices as Congress may by law direct.

Mr. CLARKE. It appears to me, that if the bill under consideration is to be passed, it must be done in a very short time. We have now only about fourteen hours of the session remaining; and I think, if we go on in this way, we shall never get through with the bill.

Mr. BORLAND. I will state, for the information of the Senate, that my amendment consists of the bill usually called Miss Dix's bill, so modified as to include with the insane, the deaf, dumb, and blind; and then in addition to that, several railroad bills that have passed the Senate.

Mr. CLARKE. If it is such a slight amendment as that, I suppose it can be adopted without any discussion. [Laughter.]

Mr. HALE. I can hardly expect at this late hour of the evening and of the session to gain the attention of the Senate, but I will make an effort to do so for a very few moments, and then I shall have done. I have voted for this bill uniformly since its first introduction into the Senate to the present time. I have voted twice to-night against laying it on the table, and I now make an appeal to its friends and to the Senate to let us have a vote upon it, and vote down all these amendments. I am in favor of some of them as separate measures. But this bill has been sent to us from the House. Its history is familiar to us all. It seems to me that it stands out in its characteristics so prominently from the ordinary objects of legislation, that it is entitled and demands of its friends and of the Senate a hearing upon its own individual merits.

Sir, this bill emanates from a lady whose history is well known to the country. She has gone through the country, from one end of it to the other, into nearly every State of the Union, taking a gaze into that misery to which the human form and the human soul is reduced when the divine light of reason is put out by the inscrutable decrees of Providence. In nearly every State she has been received with enthusiasm, and the public records of the States bear honorable testimony to her worth, and the estimation in which she has been held by every community she has visited. She told me not long since, that if she failed in her attempt here, in the Congress of the United States, it would be the first legislative body upon this continent to which she had ever made her appeal in behalf of the unfortunate in vain.

Now, sir, I ask if this is not a subject which can appeal to the highest sympathies of our hearts, to place it above the considerations that are connected with these local interests of railroads and other matters which ordinarily appertain to our everyday legislation? I ask, may we not consider this bill without embarrassing it with any such considerations or questions as these? I do hope, that for the honor of our common nature, for the honor of humanity, we will separate this measure from everything of that kind, vote down the amendments, and come to a direct vote on the bill. What can the friends of these measures gain by proposing their amendments? They may have the miserable satisfaction that the Hebrew prisoner had in the prison of the Philistines: they may pull down the temple; they may destroy the bill and the amendments with it; but they cannot carry one or the other by loading down this bill in this way. Let us vote down these amendments, and vote upon the bill; and at the coming session of Congress, we can give to these other measures the consideration which is their due.

I wish, sir, this appeal could have been made by somebody whose voice is more potential and influential than mine; but as nobody else has made it, I have felt it to be my duty to make it, and I do trust it will find a response in the hearts of Senators.

Mr. BORLAND. I have, on consultation with friends, agreed to alter my amendment with regard to the arrangement of the roads. I therefore substitute for all of my amendment after the seventh section, what I send to the Chair. It is the same in substance, but makes a different arrangement of the roads.

The amendment as modified, was read.

Mr. CLARKE. I move to lay the whole subject on the table.

Mr. SEWARD. I ask for the yeas and nays. The yeas and nays were ordered; and being taken, resulted—yeas 24, nays 21; as follows:

YEAS—Messrs. Adams, Bayard, Bright, Brodhead, Cass, Charlton, Clarke, Clemens, De Saussure, Dodge of Iowa, Douglas, Downs, Felch, Fish, Gwin, Houston, Hunter, James, King, Mason, Meriwether, Pratt, Walker, and Weller—24.

NAYS—Messrs. Bell, Chase, Cooper, Davis, Dawson, Geyer, Hale, Hamlin, Jones of Iowa, Mallory, Mangum, Miller, Morton, Seward, Shields, Soule, Spruance, Sumner, Underwood, Upham, and Wade—21.

So the bill was laid upon the table.

SENATE EMPLOYEES.

Mr. DODGE, of Iowa. I am instructed by the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate to report back the resolution which was offered by the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. BADGER] a few days ago, in relation to compensation of clerks and other employees in the Capitol, with an amendment, as follows:

1. Resolved, That there be allowed and paid, under the direction of the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate, to the persons in its employ, the sums respectively which were allowed at the last session, and to Harry Dodson, John Brown, and Robert Carter, the sum of $50 each.

2. Resolved, That the Sergeant-at-Arms, under the direction of the same committee, be authorized to employ the messengers, pages, and folders during the recess in folding documents, and that the same price be paid therefor as was paid at the last session; and that he be authorized, under the same authority, to employ the necessary force of men and wagons to convey the documents to the city post office.

The PRESIDENT. The resolution has been read twice and referred. It is now before the Senate as in Committee of the Whole.

Mr. WELLER. I ask whether that resolution embraces the reporters?

The PRESIDENT. It does not.

Mr. WELLER. I hope they will be included.

Mr. WALKER. I offer the following amendment to provide for them:

Resolved, That there be paid, under the direction of the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate, to each member of the respective corps of reporters to the Senate, $100.

Mr. HAMLIN. I move to amend the amendment by striking out "one hundred," and inserting "three hundred." I understand that the House of Representatives have agreed to give each of their reporters the sum of $300. And I am quite satisfied that our reporters in the Senate are equally as talented as those in the House, and as richly deserve this compensation.

Mr. WALKER. I accept the amendment.

Mr. ADAMS. Before the vote is taken on the question of the reporters I wish to say a word. There is a provision in the resolution reported by the committee for paying folders and others during the recess. Unless that provision is better guarded, I see nothing in it to prevent documents printed in the cities of New York, Boston, and Philadelphia from being brought here, and folded at the public expense. If that be the design of the resolution, I cannot vote for it. I think it would be utterly wrong for Congress to keep employed at the public expense persons in the folding-room to fold and dispatch documents, which are not published under authority of Congress. The proposition seems to me to involve a new principle—a very important one—and a precedent will thereby be established which it may not be at all times advisable to follow.

Mr. HALE. I want to say, Mr. President, that there is but one presidential candidate on the floor of the Senate, and the party which support him ask nothing for themselves in that respect. [Laughter.]

Mr. DODGE, of Iowa. The provision in regard to the folders is precisely the same as has been adopted heretofore. It has reference to the folding of the Patent Office Report, and such speeches as Senators may order. If they send none in, there are none folded. If they do, all that they send there are folded. That is the case every session.

Mr. ADAMS. I beg to inquire if there is anything in the resolution to prevent Senators from sending to New York and elsewhere and having political documents printed, and brought here, folded and circulated at the public expense? If the resolution is so guarded as to prevent this, I shall not insist upon my amendment. If it is not so guarded, I shall propose an amendment.

Mr. DODGE, of Iowa. The resolution is not so guarded. Senators certainly have the same right to send to New York, and have their speeches printed there, as to have them printed at the office of John C. Rives, or any other office in the city of Washington.

Mr. WALKER. For the satisfaction of the Senator from Mississippi, as well as for my own satisfaction, I shall at the proper time move to amend the resolution by providing that the folders shall be employed only in folding such documents as shall be printed by the authority of Congress, and such speeches as Senators may order to be folded.

The PRESIDENT. The question is on the amendment offered by the Senator from Wisconsin in relation to reporters.

Mr. DODGE, of Iowa. I wish to call the attention of the Senate to the fact, that this amendment involves the introduction of an entirely new principle in regard to compensation. No such thing has ever been attempted from the foundation of the Government until the present day. This proposition was brought before the committee, but it did not receive its sanction. It is now offered by the Senator from Wisconsin, [Mr. WALKER,] who is a member of that committee, upon his own responsibility. The committee do not recommend it. I do not see how we can with propriety make this appropriation—giving compensation to the employees of the gentlemen who have contracted to report our proceedings. It would be opening a door so wide, that no man can tell where we should stop. Carry out this principle, and no treasury in the world would be sufficient to meet the demands which would thus be made upon it.

Mr. CLEMENS. One word in relation to this matter. I do not believe that a more efficient corps of reporters can be found than those who report for us. But it is the business of those who employ them to pay them—not ours. I am so well satisfied with the reporters that we have that it is very rare indeed that I look over any report of my remarks made here, before I see them in the newspapers. I am satisfied that they report correctly. But the fact is that we pay the gentlemen who contract to publish the reports, and it is not our business to pay the reporters. I therefore feel under the necessity of voting against the amendment.

The question was taken on a division, and there were—yeas 16, noes not counted.

The PRESIDENT. The amendment is not carried, in the opinion of the Chair.

Mr. WALKER. I ask for the yeas and nays.

Mr. JAMES. I move to amend the amendment, by providing that there shall be paid to each of the reporters, the sum of "$250," instead of "$300."

Mr. SHIELDS. I ask if the question has been lost in regard to paying them $300?

The PRESIDENT. The amendment was not lost. The Chair stated that it was lost, in his opinion; but the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. WALKER] called for the yeas and nays.

Mr. SHIELDS. I hope the Senator from Rhode Island will withdraw his amendment.

Mr. JAMES. Certainly, I will withdraw it. I was under the impression that the amendment giving to the reporters $300 was lost. That was my object in proposing $250.

The yeas and nays were ordered; and being taken, resulted—yeas 28, nays 14; as follows:

YEAS—Messrs. Bayard, Brodhead, Brooke, Charlton, Clarke, Cooper, Davis, De Saussure, Downs, Fish, Foot, Gwin, Hale, Hamlin, Houston, James, Jones of Iowa, Mason, Morton, Pratt, Seward, Shields, Soule, Sumner, Upham, Wade, Walker, and Weller—28.

NAYS—Messrs. Adams, Cass, Chase, Clemens, Dodge of Iowa, Felch, Geyer, King, Mangum, Meriwether, Miller, Norris, Spruance, and Underwood—14.

So the amendment was adopted.

Mr. MANGUM. I move to amend the resolution by adding the following:

Resolved, That the Secretary of the Senate be authorized to employ an additional clerk, who shall be allowed the same compensation as is allowed to the engrossing clerks.

This amendment, perhaps, requires a word of explanation. The object of it is not to increase the number of clerks in actual employment, but to legalize the continuance of a clerk who has been performing duty ever since last winter, under the authority of the Committee on Contingent Expenses.

Mr. DODGE, of Iowa. I hope that amendment will not be adopted. It seems to me to be a very extraordinary time to offer such a resolution when we are within a few hours of adjournment. If this were the first day of the session, instead of next to the last, there might be some propriety in such a resolution. I think we have quite as many clerks, if not more, than we want; and I trust that the amendment will be rejected.

Mr. GWIN. I hope the amendment will be agreed to. The gentleman for whom it provides has been employed for months past. His services were indispensable to enable the Secretary to perform the duties in his office. I know him to be a very meritorious clerk—a gentleman who has filled his post well, and who ought to be retained in it. I trust, therefore, that the amendment will be adopted.

Mr. MASON. I move that when the Senate adjourns it adjourn to meet to-morrow at ten o'clock.

The PRESIDENT. That motion cannot be received until the subject under consideration has been disposed of.

Mr. MASON. Then I move that the Senate do now adjourn.

A division was called for on the motion, and there were—ayes 15, noes 22.

So the Senate refused to adjourn.

Mr. BRODHEAD. I would like to address an inquiry to the Senator from Iowa, who reported the resolution from the committee. I should like to know what will be the aggregate amount of extra compensation which will be paid to the clerks and others under this resolution? I understand it is similar to the one heretofore adopted.

Mr. DODGE, of Iowa. Precisely the same.

Mr. BRODHEAD. I understand that the amount will be $20,000.

A SENATOR. More than that.

Mr. BRODHEAD. I am informed that the amount will exceed $20,000. I know that when a similar resolution was before the Senate at the last session, the honorable Senator from Indiana [Mr. WHITCOMB] showed that under it $20,000 extra would be paid. My friend from Wisconsin says I am somewhat in error upon this subject. I would really like to know how much it is, because if it is $10,000 or $15,000 extra, I do not think it is exactly right. I think that the clerks here are as well paid as any of the employees about the Departments, and if we are to pay them $10,000 or $15,000, let us extend it to all the clerks in the Departments.

Mr. SEWARD. I regret, Mr. President, that there should be any objection to this resolution in the shape in which it comes before the Senate. I believe that it proposes nothing new. For several years past, at the expiration of the session of Congress, we have been in the habit of bestowing a gratuity upon the officers who have attended upon us during our deliberations. I believe that it proposes nothing in the way of increase or augmentation, but that the sums recommended by the committee are precisely the same as those which have heretofore been paid. I believe that we have never appropriated less than is proposed now—while we have appropriated more.

The PRESIDENT. The Chair will inform the Senator from New York [Mr. SEWARD] that the question is upon the proposition offered by the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. MANGUM] to employ an additional clerk.

Mr. MANGUM. Upon that question let me explain that the object of the amendment is not to increase the number of clerks. It is simply to continue and legalize the employment of a gentleman who has been performing duties in the Secretary's office all the session.

Mr. DODGE, of Iowa. Will the Senator from North Carolina permit me to interrupt him? Upon a representation which has been made to me in regard to this amendment, I withdraw my objection to it.

Mr. MANGUM. Then I will make no further remarks, except to say that this gentleman, at the instance of divers Democratic friends, resigned one office which was to him as good as a life estate.

Mr. ADAMS. I shall offer no opposition to the amendment proposed by the Senator from North Carolina; but I say now, that so long as I entertain the opinion which I now entertain, I shall think it quite proper, that when gentlemen desire to employ clerks over and above the usual number, they ought to notify the Senate in advance.

The question was taken upon the amendment offered by Mr. MANGUM, and it was agreed to.

Mr. WALKER. I now move further to amend the resolution of the committee by inserting the following in regard to the provision made concerning messengers and folders:

In folding documents printed by Congress, and such speeches made in Congress as Senators may order to be folded.

Mr. CLEMENS. I move to amend the amendment by adding the following:

And that the employees in the offices of the Daily Union, the National Intelligencer, and the Republic shall each be paid the sum of $300.

I think, sir, that if we are to pay reporters who are not directly employed by us, but who are the employees of the proprietors of these papers, we might as well give extra compensation to each of the employees engaged in each of these offices.

A SENATOR. I would suggest to the Senator from Alabama that he ought to amend his amendment by including the employees of the National Era.

Another SENATOR. And the Southern Press.

Mr. CLEMENS. But the Southern Press is dead, and of course there are no employees there.

Mr. MANGUM. I think I may feel authorized to say, that the two distinguished Whig presses named in that amendment, desire no such gratuity.

Mr. CLEMENS. Then, it is the first time I ever knew a Whig to refuse anything of the kind. [Laughter.] If the Senator proposes an amendment to my amendment, to that effect, I will accept it.

The PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Alabama persevere in his amendment?

Mr. CLEMENS. No, sir, I withdraw it.

The PRESIDENT. The question, then, is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Wisconsin.

Mr. WALKER. On that amendment I ask for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were not ordered; and the question being taken, the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. ADAMS. I offer the following amendment to come in at the end of the section providing for the reporters:

And that the office of Reporter be, and the same is hereby, abolished, from and after the close of the present session.

Mr. HALE. I wish to inquire of the Senator from Mississippi whether he wishes to abolish the office of Reporter entirely, or whether he designs to abolish the office of Reporter to the Senate?

Mr. ADAMS. I mean the office of Reporter to the Senate.

The amendment was not agreed to.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I offer the following amendment:

Resolved further, That the Secretary of the Senate cause to be published, and laid upon the tables of Senators at the commencement of next session, the sums paid, under these resolutions, to the several persons entitled, and the amount paid to each.

A SENATOR. Is the gentleman from Kentucky serious in offering that amendment?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I am serious.

Mr. WELLER. We will all go for the amendment, provided the Senator from Kentucky will not make a speech.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. SHIELDS. I move to strike out from the original resolution, the words "under the direction of the same authority." The object is, to leave the Sergeant-at-Arms to judge of the number of wagons and horses necessary to be employed in conveying documents to the post office, during the recess. It is impossible that the committee can judge of it. If the committee were here during the recess, they could determine what would be necessary; but they will not be here, therefore this discretion should be given to the Sergeant-at-Arms.

Mr. HUNTER. Can I submit a motion to go into Executive session?

The PRESIDENT. Not until this subject is disposed of.

Mr. DODGE, of Iowa. I hope the amendment of the Senator from Illinois [Mr. SHIELDS] will not be adopted. The resolution is now in the same terms as those of the resolution of last session. I think that the committee should have supervision of this matter. If my friend from Illinois were as well acquainted with this business as I am, I think he would not persist in his amendment.

Mr. SHIELDS. Very well; I will not persist in it.

The amendment was accordingly withdrawn.

The PRESIDENT. The question is on the resolution as amended.

Mr. GWIN. I offer the following amendment to the resolution:

Resolved, That William Hickey, the principal executive clerk, be allowed and paid the same amount of compensation as is allowed to the principal legislative clerk, commencing with the present session of Congress.

It is known that this gentleman has been performing double duty during the whole of the session. He is a clerk at the Secretary's desk, and we all know that his duties have been arduous and onerous. This amendment only proposes to put him on the same footing as the clerks who receive $300. I trust that the amendment will be unanimously adopted.

Mr. CLEMENS. If any of the persons provided for in this report ought to be allowed extra compensation, the gentleman named in the amendment of the Senator from California ought to be provided for. But, in my opinion, none of these resolutions should pass. There is not an executive officer in the Senate or House of Representatives who has not applied for an increase of compensation. In my opinion this has been the most reckless Congress, in regard to expenditures of this kind, that ever did assemble. There is not an officer in any of the Departments who has not applied for extra compensation. I take much pleasure in saying that this is one of the most meritorious cases which has been presented here. And if any of these clerks are to receive extra compensation, the gentleman named in this amendment is entitled to receive it. But I want it distinctly understood that I shall vote against them all. I have voted for none of them, and I intend to vote for none of them.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. CHASE. I entirely concur with the Senator from Alabama, that this resolution contemplates a most reckless expenditure of the public money. It introduces, too, a very extraordinary principle—a principle which, I think, ought to engage the attention of the country. We have made a contract for reporting and publishing our debates. We all know the character of the corps of reporters; we all know that they perform their duties well and skillfully; but we all know, too, that our contract is not with the corps of reporters, but with the gentlemen who employ them; and the proposition to pay a gratuity to the reporters is precisely of the same character as a proposition which has several times been agitated here, within the last few months, to pay the workmen employed under one of your contractors. If the reporters are to be paid in this way, then it would be proper that the workmen engaged in building the wings of your Capitol should also be paid. I will not detain the Senate at this late hour of the session, in commenting further on what I conceive to be objectionable in the resolution; but I will move to lay the resolution on the table, and on that motion I ask for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered; and being taken, resulted—yeas 12, nays 29; as follows:

YEAS—Messrs. Adams, Bright, Brodhead, Chase, Clemens, Downs, Hunter, Mason, Meriwether, Norris, Spruance, and Underwood—12.

NAYS—Messrs. Bayard, Bell, Borland, Brooke, Cass, Charlton, Clarke, Cooper, Davis, De Sausure, Dodge of Iowa, Fish, Foot, Geyer, Gwin, Houston, James, Jones of Iowa, Mangum, Miller, Morton, Rusk, Seward, Shields, Smith, Soule, Wade, Walker, and Weller—29.

So the motion to lay the resolution on the table was rejected.

Mr. BELL. I think there is some objection, on principle, to the state in which this resolution now stands. We propose here to pay a gratuity to reporters, who are not officers of the Senate. This subject was under the consideration of the Committee on the Contingent Fund, and it was suggested that if this payment were made, it would be difficult to determine where we should stop. If this could be placed on a safe principle, or on such a ground as might be applied to the government of similar cases, I would have no objection whatever to give this gratuity to the reporters as an acknowledgment on the part of the Senate of the fidelity with which they have made their reports. I suggested to my friend from Iowa, who is chairman of the committee, [Mr. Dodge,] whether we could not here at once adopt a principle which would be safe in such cases. Those reporters who are admitted to the floor of the Senate ought to be in some sort under the control of the Senate. If this proposition can be amended in such a manner as that they could be recognized as officers, or with the view to such a proposition in future, taking care that no reporter should be admitted to the floor of the Senate but those who were actually employed by the publishers of the Congressional Globe and Daily Union, then, I think, I should vote for it. But these persons should be such as receive the sanction of the Secretary of the Senate to come upon the floor; they should be recognized as persons proper to be employed here. I should have no objection to the proposition that those who have been employed during the session should be so recognized; and I think it would be proper that we should resolve that in future the Secretary of the Senate should recognize and sanction such as ought to be admitted on this floor; and that no reporter should be admitted who has not such sanction. We would then have them under our control as officers of the Senate, and they would be subject to our reprehension in case of misconduct, and might, in such case, be ejected by the Presiding Officer. If that amendment was made, I think the principle would be sound. I say nothing against the amount proposed to be paid to these gentlemen, but I object to the principle as it is now embodied in that resolution.

The resolution was then reported to the Senate; the amendments were concurred in, and the resolution was read a third time and passed, as follows:

1st. Resolved, That there be allowed and paid, under the direction of the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent expenses of the Senate, to the persons in its employ, the sums, respectively, which were allowed at the last session, and to Harry Dodson, John Brown, and Robert Carter, the sum of $50 each.

2d. Resolved, That the Sergeant-at-Arms, under the direction of the same committee, be authorized to employ the messengers, pages, and folders, during the recess, in folding documents, and that the same price be paid therefor as was paid at the last session; and that he be authorized, under the same authority, to employ the necessary force of men and wagons to convey the documents to the city post office.

3d. Resolved, That there be paid, under the direction of the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate, to each member of the respective corps of reporters to the Senate, $300.

4th. Resolved, That the Secretary of the Senate be authorized to employ an additional clerk, who shall be allowed the same compensation as the engrossing clerks.

5th. Resolved, That the Secretary of the Senate cause to be published and laid on the table of Senators at the commencement of the next session, the sums paid under these resolutions to the several persons entitled, and the amount paid to each.

6th. Resolved, That William Hickey, the principal executive clerk, be allowed and paid the same amount of compensation as is allowed to the principal legislative clerk, commencing with the present session of Congress.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

A message from the House of Representatives was received by Mr. FORNEY, its Clerk, announcing that it had passed the bill from the Senate to constitute Alton, in the State of Illinois, a port of entry, with an amendment.

The Senate proceeded to consider the amendment of the House of Representatives to the bill, and it was concurred in.

Also, a message announcing that the President of the United States had notified the House that he had signed House bill No. 144, entitled "An act to amend an act entitled 'An act to reduce and modify the rates of postage in the United States, and for other purposes,' passed March 3, 1851."

Also, "An act making appropriations for the transportation of the United States mails by ocean steamers, and otherwise, during the fiscal year ending the 30th June, 1853."

Also, "An act in addition to an act to promote the progress of the useful arts."

Also, "An act making appropriations for the current and contingent expenses of the Indian Department, and for fulfilling treaty stipulations with various Indian tribes, for the year ending June 30, 1853."

Also, "An act making appropriations for the improvement of certain harbors and rivers."

EXECUTIVE SESSION.

On motion by Mr. SHIELDS, the Senate proceeded to the consideration of Executive business; and after some time spent therein, the doors were reopened, and

The Senate adjourned to meet at nine o'clock to-morrow morning.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

MONDAY, August 30, 1852.

The House met at eleven o'clock, a. m. Prayer by the Rev. LITTLETON F. MORGAN.

Mr. HAMMOND. I move to dispense with the reading of the Journal.

The SPEAKER. That motion is not in order, except by unanimous consent.

Mr. HALL. I object.

The Clerk then proceeded to read.

Mr. STANTON, of Tennessee. I hope I shall be allowed to move to dispense with the further reading of the Journal. I understand it will take about an hour to read it. I suppose the Speaker has examined it and found it to be correct. If it be in order, I make that motion.

Mr. HALL. I object.

The SPEAKER. The Chair is of the opinion that the motion cannot be made without a suspension of the rule. That is the impression of the Chair. He, however, is not very certain upon the matter.

Mr. JOHNSON, of Tennessee. I will not object to dispensing with the reading of the Journal. There is, however, one portion to which I desire to call the attention of the House. When the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. EDGERTON] offered the resolution requiring the select committee for investigating the conduct of the Secretary of the Treasury in relation to the Gardiner claim, to prosecute that investigation during the vacation, it was my impression that the committee would be allowed to make their report so soon as the investigation should have been completed. If they are not authorized to make their report as soon as it is completed, the object which would detain the committee during the recess will be defeated. It will not be necessary that we should be detained here after the adjournment of Congress, unless we can report the facts for the information of the country, or to those who are concerned. If it is to be laid over to the next session of Congress, the whole object will be defeated.

A message was here received from the Senate, announcing the passage, by that body, of the following bills:

A bill making appropriations for the civil and diplomatic expenses of the Government during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1853, with amendments;

A bill making appropriations for the support of the Army during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1853, with amendments;

A bill making appropriations for the service of the Post Office Department during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1853, with amendments; and

A bill making appropriations for the transportation of the United States mail by ocean steamers and otherwise, during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1853, without amendment.

The SPEAKER. The Chair is informed by a member of the Committee on Enrolled Bills that it is next to impossible for them to get through with their labors—their number having been reduced from some cause. They ask, therefore, that two additional members may be placed upon the committee. Is it the pleasure of the House that the Speaker be empowered to appoint two additional members upon that committee?

There was no objection, and it was so ordered; and the Speaker appointed Messrs. McNAIR and GOODENOW.

The objection being withdrawn, the further reading of the Journal was dispensed with.

Mr. CLARK. I rise to a question of order.

Mr. JOHNSON, of Tennessee. I have already the floor upon a question of order. I rise to move a correction of the Journal. I was proceeding to state that when the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. EDGERTON] moved, on Saturday, a resolution detaining the Select Committee during the recess of Congress, I was under the impression that they would be authorized to report the facts to the country as soon as they should have completed their investigation. Unless this authority be given them, it will be wholly useless to require them to remain here during the recess; and it will be incurring additional expense for no purpose. I was under the impression that the resolution gave that authority; and I now ask the unanimous consent of the House for the Journal to be corrected, as to permit the committee to report to the Clerk of the House during the recess.

Mr. JOHN W. HOWE. I object.

Mr. JOHNSON. I cannot see why gentlemen will object. The whole object will be defeated unless this authority be given; and I appeal to the gentleman to withdraw his objection.

Mr. HOWE. I will withdraw my objection.

The Journal was corrected accordingly.

Mr. CLARK. I now rise to a question of order.

I desire to know whether the first business in order is not to call the Committee on the Post Office and Post Roads for reports?

The SPEAKER. That would be the first business in order but for the fact, that a bill reported from that committee has not been disposed of, and is now pending before the House as unfinished business.

PATENT OFFICE REPORT.

Mr. GORMAN. I ask the consent of the House to make a report from the Committee on Printing.

The SPEAKER. It is not in order at this time to make a report from that committee, except by unanimous consent.

Mr. GORMAN. I ask that the report may be read for information.

It was read by the Clerk, as follows:

Resolved, That there be printed for the use of the House of Representatives, one hundred thousand copies of the agricultural part of the Patent Office Report.

There was no objection, and the resolution was received and agreed to.

Mr. PENN. I call for the regular order of business.

The SPEAKER. The regular order of business is the motion to lay on the table House bill No. 323, for the relief of the Memphis and Charleston or Tennessee, Mississippi and Alabama, the Alabama and Tennessee river, the Coosa, the New Orleans and Jackson, and the New Orleans and Opelousas, and Great Western Railroad Companies.

Mr. GORMAN. I desire the unanimous consent of the House to make a motion from the Committee on Printing. It is, that the mechanical part of the Patent Office Report, now lying upon your table, be taken up and printed. I ask that it may be done now; for, unless it be done, we shall not have time to do it during the present session of Congress.

[Cries of "Agreed!" "Agreed!"]

There was no objection, and the motion was received and passed.

Mr. JONES, of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, there was a bill passed the Senate (No. 59) which was sent here and referred to the Committee of Ways and Means. Under their direction, I ask now that it may be taken up and acted upon.

Mr. PENN. I insist upon the regular order of business.

Mr. JONES. I hope I may be allowed to ask that Senate bill No. 59 be taken up and acted upon. It was referred to the Committee of Ways and Means a long time ago, and under the instructions of that committee I reported it back to the House. It is a bill to provide compensation to such persons as shall be designated by the Secretary of the Treasury to receive and keep the public money, under the fifteenth section of the act of August 6th, 1846, to provide for additional services required under that act. By that act, the Secretary of the Treasury is authorized to designate certain officers as receivers at land offices, custom-house officers, and collectors, as depositaries of the public money, at points where there are no assistant treasurers.

Mr. PENN. I call the gentleman from Tennessee to order. He is making a speech, and consuming the morning hour. I call for the regular order of business.

Mr. JONES. I hope the House will consent to take this bill up and pass it. It is one which will require no discussion. I have no interest in it, but I desire to see it taken up and passed.

Mr. PENN. I object, and call the gentleman to order.

Mr. JONES. Well, sir, I call the attention of the House to the fact, that a gentleman objects who comes from a section of the country where there is an assistant treasurer.

Mr. McQUEEN. I ask the gentleman from Louisiana to give way, to allow me to introduce a bill merely for the purpose of having it referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. PENN. I will yield for that purpose.

Mr. McQUEEN then, by unanimous consent, introduced a bill authorizing the adjustment and payment of the claims of William Hazard, Whig, for losses sustained by him during the war of the Revolution; which was read a first and second time by its title, referred to a Committee of the Whole House, made the order of the day for tomorrow, and, with the report accompanying, ordered to be printed.

Mr. HENDRICKS. I rise to a question of order. I object to the transaction of any other business before the House proceeds to the regular order.

DUTY ON RAILROAD IRON.

The House then proceeded to the regular order of business, being the motion to lay on the table House bill No. 323, for the relief of the Memphis and Charleston or Tennessee, the Mississippi and Alabama, the Alabama and Tennessee River, the Coosa, the New Orleans and Jackson, and the New Orleans and Opelousas, and Great Western Railroad Companies.

Mr. ALLISON. This is an important bill. If it be in order, I move that there be a call of the House.

The SPEAKER. That motion is in order.

Mr. IVES. I have a paper in my hand which I ask may be read for the information of the House.

Mr. PENN. I object. We have no time to spare.

The question now being on ordering a call of the House,

Mr. ALLISON demanded the yeas and nays, and tellers on the yeas and nays.

Tellers were ordered; and Messrs. CHANDLER and HENDRICKS were appointed.

The House was then divided upon ordering the yeas and nays, and the tellers reported 46 in the affirmative—a sufficient number.

So the yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. BROOKS. I would suggest, as the yeas and nays have been ordered upon this bill—and it is quite evident that we cannot dispose of it during the morning hour—that, to save time, we now take up one of the appropriation bills.

Mr. COBB. I object. We can have at least one vote upon the bill before the morning hour expires.

The SPEAKER. The yeas and nays have been ordered upon the motion that there be a call of the House, and they must be taken unless dispensed with by unanimous consent.

Mr. OUTLAW. I rise to a question of order. I understand the previous question has been ordered upon the passage of the bill. I submit that it is not in order to move a call of the House after the previous question has been ordered.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will inform the gentleman from North Carolina that the previous question has not been seconded, and much less ordered.

The question was taken, and there were—yeas 51, nays 100.

So a call of the House was not ordered.

The question then recurred upon the motion to lay the bill upon the table.

Mr. ALLISON demanded the yeas and nays; which were ordered.

The question was then put, and the result was—yeas 90, nays 80; as follows:

YEAS—Messrs. Charles Allen, Allison, Barrere, Bibb, John H. Boyd, George H. Brown, Buell, Busby, Carter, Chandler, Chapman, Cleveland, Cobb, Curtis, Dawson, Dean, Dimmick, Disney, Dockery, Duncan, Edgerton, Edmundson, Faulkner, Florence, Floyd, Fowler, Henry M. Fuller, Gamble, Gaylord, Gilmore, Goodenow, Goodrich, Green, Hamilton, Hammond, Hascall, Haven, Horsford, John W. Howe, Ingersoll, Ives, Jenkins, Andrew Johnson, Daniel T. Jones, George W. Jones, J. Glancy Jones, George G. King, Preston King, Kuhns, Kurtz, Letcher, Manu, Martin, Mason, McNair, Henry D. Moore, Morrison, Murray, Newton, Andrew Parker, Penniman, Perkins, Phelps, Price, Reed, Richardson, Riddle, Robbins, Robie, Ross, Savage, Schoonmaker, Scudder, David L. Seymour, Origes, Seymour, Skelton, Snow, Richard H. Stanton, Thaddeus Stevens, Thompson, Thurston, Townshend, Tuck, Walbridge, Walsh, Washburn, Wells, and Wilbrick—90.

NAYS—Messrs. Aiken, Willis Allen, William Appleton, Ashe, Averett, Thomas H. Bayly, Bissell, Boccock, Bragg, Breckinridge, Brenton, Albert G. Brown, E. Carrington Cabell, Joseph Cable, Caldwell, Lewis D. Campbell, Thompson Campbell, Caskie, Chastain, Churchwell, Clark, Clingman, Conger, Daniel, James G. Davis, Doty, Eastman, Evans, Ewing, Ficklin, Gentry, Gorman, Grey, Hall, Isham G. Harris, Hart, Haws, Hendricks, Henn, Holladay, Houston, Howard, Thomas Y. How, Jackson, John Johnson, Robert W. Johnson, Landry, Lockhart, McKorkle, McQueen, Meade, Miller, Millson, Molony, John Moore, Morehead, Murphy, Outlaw, Samuel W. Parker, Penn, Polk, Porter, Powell, Schermerhorn, Scurry, Stanley, Frederick P. Stanton, Abraham P. Stephens, St. Martin, Strother, Sweetser, Taylor, Yenabe, Wallace, Ward, Watkins, Addison White, Alexander White, Wilcox, and Woodward—80.

So the bill was laid on the table.

Mr. JENKINS. I move to reconsider the vote just taken, by which the bill was ordered to lie upon the table, and move to lay the motion to reconsider upon the table.

Mr. BAYLY. I demand the yeas and nays upon that motion.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. COBB. For the sake of saving time, I am willing to make a compromise in this matter. If it meets the concurrence of the House, I will move to postpone the consideration of the motion till the second day of the next session of Congress.

Mr. CLINGMAN. I have no objection to that.

Mr. JENKINS. I will not object to the gentleman's motion to postpone, if he will alter the day to the fourth Tuesday of the next session.

Mr. COBB. I will accept that amendment.

Mr. KING, of New York. I object to the motion to postpone.

The SPEAKER. Then the question must be taken upon the motion to lay upon the table the motion to reconsider.

Mr. COBB. If the question is to be now decided, I ask for a call of the House; and upon that I demand the yeas and nays.

CIVIL AND DIPLOMATIC BILL.

Mr. HOUSTON. There is a contest going on about this bill which is not likely to be soon settled. I beg leave to say to the House, that the Committee of Conference upon the civil and diplomatic bill are ready to report; and that it is absolutely necessary that that bill should be disposed of at an early hour, or it will be impossible to enroll it between now and the time of the adjournment. I am fearful it cannot be done even now. I ask, therefore, that the Committee of Conference be now permitted to report.

Mr. FICKLIN. I object.

Mr. HOUSTON. I will say to the gentleman from Illinois, in all fairness, that if the morning hour is to be taken up in this kind of contest, it would be much better to do away with it altogether.

Mr. FICKLIN. Is the morning hour out?

The SPEAKER. It is not. The morning hour expires at twenty minutes past twelve o'clock.

Mr. BAYLY, of Virginia. I hope the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. FICKLIN] will withdraw his objection.

Mr. KING, of New York. I call for the regular order of business.

The SPEAKER. The regular order of business is on the question whether there shall be a call of the House.

The yeas and nays were then ordered upon the motion for a call of the House.

[Mr. BARRERE, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported as correctly enrolled the "Act to amend an act entitled 'An act to provide for the better security of the lives of passengers on board of vessels propelled in whole or in part by steam, and for other purposes,'" which thereupon received the signature of the Speaker.]

Mr. COBB. I have no disposition to impede the progress of business, but it has been suggested by persons opposed to—

Mr. JONES, of Tennessee. I call the gentleman to order.

[Cries of "Order!" "Order!" "Order!"]

The SPEAKER. Discussion is out of order.

Mr. COBB. I am willing that it should be postponed until next session.

[Cries of "Order!" "Order!"]

The SPEAKER. A motion to postpone is not in order so long as a motion for a call of the House, or a motion to lay upon the table either, is pending.

Mr. KING, of New York. I call for the regular order of business.

The SPEAKER. It is upon a call of the House, and upon that the yeas and nays have been ordered.

Mr. STUART. I wish to state a question of order. As I understand the decisions of the Chair heretofore made, when the previous question is ordered upon a bill—

Mr. KING, of New York. The previous question has not been ordered upon this bill.

Mr. STUART. I understood that it had been.

The SPEAKER. It was demanded, but not seconded.

[Here a message was received from the Senate, informing the House that the Senate had agreed to the report of the Committee of Conference on the civil and diplomatic appropriation bill.]

Mr. BISSELL. Has the morning hour expired?

The SPEAKER. It has not.

The Clerk then proceeded to call the roll upon the motion for a call of the House; pending which, the morning hour having expired,

Mr. FICKLIN said: I believe the morning hour has expired, and I move that all further proceedings under the call be dispensed with.

The SPEAKER. The morning hour has expired, but the yeas and nays are being called upon a motion to order a call of the House, and it cannot be dispensed with except by unanimous consent.

Mr. FICKLIN. I hope it will be dispensed with by unanimous consent. The object was to exhaust the morning hour, and that object is accomplished.

No objection was made, and further proceedings in the call were dispensed with.

CIVIL AND DIPLOMATIC BILL.

Mr. HOUSTON. I wish to make a report from the Committee of Conference upon the disagreeing votes of the two Houses upon the civil and diplomatic bill. I will state, in addition to other reasons for desiring to advance that bill as rapidly as possible, that it may be enrolled in time, I understood from one of the Senators upon the Committee of Conference, a few moments ago, that he had received a line from the President, saying that it would be impossible to look over the bill unless we act hastily upon it; and he made a special request that an expeditious course should be pursued with it. I call the previous question. The previous question was seconded.

The report of the Committee of Conference was then read, as follows:

86th amendment of the Senate. Insert:

93d amendment of the Senate. Strike out "one" and insert "two," in the following clause:

"To supply the deficiency in the fund for the relief of sick and disabled seamen, $100,000."

"Sec. 15. And be it further enacted, That the Assistant Postmaster Generals shall hereafter be appointed by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, and shall receive each a salary of $3,000 per annum."

The question then recurred upon the adoption of the above report of the Committee of Conference on the civil and diplomatic appropriation bill.

Mr. FICKLIN. I demand the yeas and nays.

Mr. STANTON, of Ohio. I would inquire whether it would not be in order to have the amendments which have been agreed to read?

Mr. CAMPBELL, of Illinois. I believe they have been read.

Mr. STANTON. No, sir; those only which have been rejected have been read.

The SPEAKER. The Chair thinks that it would be in order to have the amendments read.

Mr. STANTON. Then I would make the demand that they be read.

Mr. CABELL, of Florida. Will it be in order to ask a separate vote upon any one of the amendments?

The SPEAKER. No, sir.

Mr. CABELL. That is what I supposed would be the result of referring the amendments to the Committee of Conference without consideration.

The SPEAKER. The report of the Conference Committee must be adopted or rejected as a whole.

Mr. BAYLY, of Virginia. I move that the House dispense with the reading of the amendments, and would beg leave to state, in addition, that unless proper time be given the clerks to engross those bills, mistakes will certainly occur.

Mr. FICKLIN. I desire to know what I am voting upon. I call the gentleman from Virginia to order. We have a right to have the amendments read.

The SPEAKER. The motion to dispense with the reading is not in order unless the rules of the House shall have been previously suspended for that purpose.

Mr. STANTON, of Ohio. I do not desire to detain the House, or to cause unnecessary trouble; but I must be permitted to say that I would rather a thousand times postpone the day of adjournment than be compelled to vote without understanding—

[Cries all over the Hall of "Order!" "Order!"]

The Clerk progressed with the reading of the amendments.

Mr. McMULLIN. Will it be in order, Mr. Speaker, to move to dispense with the further reading of the amendments?

Mr. FLORENCE. I object to the motion. I intend to vote understandingly.

Mr. McMULLIN. Will it be in order to move a suspension of the rules for the purpose of introducing my motion?

The SPEAKER. Such a motion would be in order.

Mr. McMULLIN. My impression is that there is not sufficient time left for the reading of the amendments, and I submit the motion for the suspension of the rules.

Mr. FICKLIN. Upon that motion I demand the yeas and nays.

The SPEAKER. Probably the reading of the amendments could be completed before the votes could be taken.

Mr. McMULLIN. At the suggestion of the Chair, which is that of several members around me, I withdraw the motion for the suspension of the rules.

Mr. HOUSTON. I will state to the House that a majority of the amendments adopted by the Conference Committee embrace very small amounts.

[Cries of "Go on!" "Go on!" addressed to the Clerk.]

[Mr. GOODENOW, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported as correctly enrolled the following act; which received the signature of the Speaker:

An act making appropriations for the current and contingent expenses of the Indian Department, and for fulfilling treaty stipulations with the various Indian tribes for the year ending 30th June, 1853.]

The Clerk progressed with the reading of the amendments.

Mr. PRICE. I understand that the most of the day will be occupied, if the amendments are all to be read, and therefore I move that the rules be suspended so that a motion to dispense with the further reading may be introduced.

Mr. STANTON, of Ohio. I demand the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The SPEAKER. (Mr. STUART temporarily in the chair.) The Chair understands from the Clerk, that the statement of the gentleman from New Jersey is correct.

Mr. PRICE. As the yeas and nays have been ordered, I will withdraw my motion. I do not desire an unnecessary consumption of time.

The Clerk finished the reading of the amendments.

The SPEAKER. The question now recurs upon the adoption of the report of the Committee of Conference.

Mr. FICKLIN. I demand the yeas and nays. The question was put, and 20 seconded the call; which was not a sufficient number.

Mr. FICKLIN. I demand tellers upon ordering the yeas and nays.

Tellers were ordered; and Messrs. PERKINS and HALL were appointed; and the House being divided, the tellers reported—ayes 30; deemed to be sufficient.

So the yeas and nays were ordered.

The question was then taken, and there were—yeas 69, nays 69; as follows:

YEAS—Messrs. Charles Allen, Willis Allen, William Appleton, Thomas H. Bayly, Bibbhaus, Bowie, John H. Boyd, Briggs, George H. Brown, Busby, Caldwell, Chandler, Chastain, Clark, Cobb, George T. Davis, Dockery, Duncan, Evans, Faulkner, Freeman, Gentry, Goodrich, Hammond, Harper, Isham G. Harris, Sampson W. Harris, Hart, Haven, Hendricks, Henn, Holladay, Houston, Howard, Jackson, George W. Jones, George G. King, Letcher, Martin, Mason, McCorkle, Meade, Miller, Milson, Henry D. Moore, Penn, Perkins, Polk, Porter, Powell, Price, Reed, Riddle, Robbins, Scudder, Scurry, David L. Seymour, Skelton, Snow, Stanley, St. Martin, Strother, Stuart, Taylor, Thurston, Venable, Walsb, Wilcox, and Wil-drick—69.

NAYS—Messrs. Aiken, Allison, Barrere, Beale, Bowne, Bragg, Breckinridge, Brenton, Brooks, Buell, Joseph Cable, Lewis D. Campbell, Thompson Campbell, Churchill, Cleveland, Colcock, Conger, Curtis, Dawson, Dean, Dinwiddie, Doney, Doty, Edgerly, Ewing, Ficklin, Florence, Floyd, Fowler, Gamble, Gilmore, Goodenow, Gornall, Grey, Hobard, Horstord, John W. Howe, Thomas Y. How, Ives, Andrew Johnson, John Johnson, Daniel T. Jones, Preston King, Kurtz, Lockhart, McNair, McQueen, Molony, Morehead, Murray, Newton, Andrew Parker, Samuel W. Parker, Penniman, Richardson, Robie, Ross, Schoonmaker, Benjamin Stanton, Frederick P. Stanton, Richard H. Stanton, Thaddeus Stevens, Sweetser, Townsend, Tuck, Walbridge, Wallace, and Watkins—69.

There being a tie, the Chair voted in the affirmative, and the question was decided in the affirmative.

So the report of the Committee of Conference was concurred in, and the bill passed.

PRE-EMPTIONS IN CALIFORNIA.

The SPEAKER. There is a motion before the House for the suspension of the rules, made by the gentleman from Missouri, [Mr. HALL.]

Mr. STUART. I hope, by unanimous consent, that that question will be acted upon.

Mr. HOUSTON. I desire to have the Army appropriation bill, which has been returned from the Senate, referred to the Committee of the Whole on the state of the Union.

The SPEAKER. Is it the unanimous consent of the House that the Army appropriation bill shall be referred?

[Cries of "Agreed!" "Agreed!"]

There being no objection, it was so ordered.

Mr. CLARK. I desire to obtain the unanimous consent of the House for the purpose of bringing up the post route bill, in which all are interested.

Mr. KING, of New York. I call for the regular order of business.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Missouri [Mr. HALL] has moved to suspend the rules to enable him to report, from the Committee on Public Lands, the bill to extend the preemption laws over California.

Mr. BRECKINRIDGE. Before the question is put, I desire to ask the gentleman from California [Mr. McCORKLE] a single question, to enable the House to vote understandingly. It is simply whether the bill embraces the mineral lands in California as well as the other lands?

Mr. McCORKLE. They are expressly reserved by this bill, and it only proposes to embrace arable lands. I ask for tellers on the motion.

Tellers were ordered; and Messrs. HART and ST. MARTIN were appointed.

The question was then taken; and there were—ayes 35, nays not counted.

So the rules were not suspended.

POST ROUTE BILL.

Mr. CLARK. I hope that I may have the unanimous consent of the House to take up and act upon the amendments to the post route bill.

Mr. STEVENS, of Pennsylvania. I object.

Mr. CLARK. I move a suspension of the rules for that purpose. I wish to make one or two amendments germane to the bill before it is acted upon.

Mr. KING, of New York. I ask that the amendments be read.

Mr. CLARK. My purpose is to move to non-concur with the Senate amendments; and I wish to move two or three amendments for new post routes.

Mr. STANTON, of Tennessee. I rise to a question of order.

The SPEAKER. When the Senate amendments are reported, the Chair will then hear the gentleman's point of order.

Mr. CLARK. I move that the House do non-concur with the Senate amendments. They are not germane to the bill as it went from the House. At least they are not of the same character as the bill which went from us. It was a post route bill exclusively.

Mr. STANTON. The gentleman from Iowa [Mr. CLARK] proposes to disagree with the Senate amendments, and insert in lieu thereof certain amendments. He can only propose amendments to the amendments.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. STANTON] must allow the amendments to be reported to the House.

The 1st amendment was then read, as follows:

After line 9 add as follows:

"From Rockland to Isle au Haut, from Aurora to township No. 33, Hancock county.

"From Hampden, via South Hampden, South Newburg, East Dixmont, Moulton's Corner, in Jackson, to Jackson Center.

"From the city of Bangor, via Eddington, Mariaville, Wesley, Crawford, Alexander Baring, over the Black road, so called, to Calais."

Mr. WASHBURN. I move to dispense with the reading of so much of the amendments as refers to post routes.

[Cries of "Agreed!" "Agreed!"]

Mr. KING, of New York. How can you determine what they are? I cannot consent.

Mr. CLARK. I take this occasion to say that it is not my purpose to move a non-concurrence in the Senate amendments, so far as they embrace post routes alone.

The question was then taken on the first amendment, and it was agreed to.

Mr. FAULKNER. Is it in order to move to dispense with the further reading of the amendments?

The SPEAKER. It is not in order, unless by a suspension of the rules. The Chair suggests that the amendments which relate to post roads be read and voted upon by the House in the aggregate, unless a division be requested. Is that agreed to?

Mr. PHELPS. From the examination I have given to that bill, all that precedes the second section in the Senate amendments, is for the establishment of post routes through the States and Territories. I therefore hope that the reading of all of the Senate amendments preceding the second section, may be dispensed with by general consent.

Mr. JOHN W. HOWE. I understand that the Wheeling Bridge matter is placed in there as an amendment. If it is, I wish a separate vote upon it.

Mr. PHELPS. The Wheeling Bridge case is embraced in the Post Office appropriation bill, and not in this.

The question was then taken upon all the Senate amendments in relation to the post routes, from 1 to 38 inclusive, and they were agreed to.

The 39th amendment of the Senate was read, as follows:

"SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That the Postmaster General be, and he is hereby, authorized to enter into a contract for the transportation of the United States mail on board of the steam vessels which at present ply regularly between Boston, in the State of Massachusetts, and Halifax, in Nova Scotia, upon such terms as may appear to him reasonable."

Mr. ROBBINS called for a separate vote upon that amendment.

Mr. BRECKINRIDGE demanded the yeas and nays; which were not ordered.

Mr. PHELPS demanded the previous question; which was seconded; and the main question ordered.

The question was then taken, and the amendment was disagreed to.

The 40th amendment of the Senate was read, as follows:

"SEC. 3. And be it further enacted, That if any person shall steal, purloin, embezzle, or obtain by any false pretense, or shall aid or assist in stealing, purloining, embezzing, or obtaining by any false pretense, or shall knowingly and unlawfully make, forge, or counterfeit, or cause to be unlawfully made, forged, or counterfeited, or knowingly aid or assist in falsely and unlawfully making, forging, or counterfeiting any key suited to any lock which has been or shall be adopted for use by the Post Office Department of the United States, and which shall be in use on any of the mails or mail-bags of the said Post Office Department, or shall have in his possession any such mail key or any such mail lock, with the intent unlawfully or improperly to use, sell, or otherwise dispose of the same, or to cause the same to be unlawfully or improperly used, sold, or otherwise disposed of, or who, being employed in the manufacture of the locks or keys for the use of the said Post Office Department, whether as contractor or otherwise, shall deliver or cause to be delivered any finished or unfinished key or lock used or designed for use by the said Post Office Department, or the interior part of any such mail lock, to any person not duly authorized under the hand of the Postmaster General of the United States and the seal of the said Post Office Department to receive the same, (unless such person so receiving the same shall be the contractor for furnishing such locks and keys, or engaged in the manufacture thereof in the manner authorized by the contract, or the agent for such manufacturer,) such person so offending shall be deemed guilty of felony, and on conviction thereof shall be imprisoned for a period not exceeding ten years."

The question was then taken upon the amendment, and it was agreed to.

The 41st amendment of the Senate was read, as follows:

"SEC. 4. And be it further enacted, That if any person shall steal, purloin, or embezzle, any mail bags in use by or belonging to the Post Office Department of the United States, or any other property in use by or belonging to the said Post Office Department, or shall, for any lucre, gain, or convenience, appropriate any such property to his own, or any other than its proper use, or for any lucre or gain shall convey away any such property to the hindrance or detriment of the public service of the United States, the person so offending, his counsellors, aiders, and abettors (knowing of and privy to any offense aforesaid) shall, on conviction thereof, if the value of such property shall exceed twenty-five dollars, be deemed guilty of felony, and shall be imprisoned for a period not exceeding three years; or if the value of such property shall be less than twenty-five dollars, shall be imprisoned not more than one year, or be fined not less than ten dollars nor more than two hundred dollars for every such offense."

MR. CARTTER. Is there a motion to non-concur pending?

THE SPEAKER. There is no such motion.

MR. WALSH. Will it be in order to refer such portions of the amendments as make a change in the criminal code to the Judiciary?

THE SPEAKER. The amendment is a whole, and cannot be divided.

MR. STEVENS. We have already voted in one section of the character the gentleman from Maryland alludes to.

MR. HART demanded tellers; which were ordered; and Messrs. GOODENOW and HALL were appointed.

The question was then taken, and there were—aye 90, noes 31.

So the amendment was agreed to.

MR. MEADE. I move to reconsider the vote by which those two amendments were passed, because they tend towards a revival of our whole code.

MR. STUART. I call the gentleman to order.

MR. MEADE. I move to reconsider the vote by which the amendments were adopted, with a view of rejecting the whole en masse.

MR. STUART. The gentleman did not vote in the affirmative, as I understood it, and he has no right to make the motion.

THE SPEAKER. The Chair is not presumed to know how the gentleman votes, unless he declares it himself.

MR. HALL. I move to lay the motion to reconsider upon the table.

The question was then taken, and it was agreed to.

So the motion to reconsider was laid upon the table.

[MR. McMULLIN. If I have the right, I would move to reconsider the vote upon the amendments to the civil and diplomatic bill.]

THE SPEAKER. The gentleman will have a right to do so when he gets the floor.

MR. JONES, of Tennessee. Did the gentleman vote either way?

MR. McMULLIN. My name is not recorded either way.

MR. GORMAN. I desire to have published a report lying upon the Clerk's desk from the Regents of the Smithsonian Institution. It has been lying upon your tables, but has not been ordered to be printed.

THE SPEAKER. It can be done only by unanimous consent.

MR. JOHNSON, of Tennessee. They ought to print their own report.]

The 42d amendment of the Senate to the post route bill was then read, as follows:

SEC. 5. And be it further enacted, That no collector or other officer of the customs shall permit any ship or vessel, arriving within any port or collection district of the United States, to make entry or break bulk until all letters on board the same shall be delivered into the post office at or nearest said port or place, nor until the captain or commander of such ship or vessel shall have signed and sworn to a declaration before such collector or officer of customs, in the form and to the effect following; that is to say:

"I, A B, commander of the (state the name of the ship or vessel,) arriving from (state the place,) and now lying in the port of (state the name of the port,) do, as required by law, solemnly swear (or affirm as the case may be) that I have, to the best of my knowledge or belief, delivered or caused to be delivered into the post office at or nearest said port, every letter and every bag, parcel, or package of letters that were on board the (state the name of the ship or vessel) during her last voyage, and that I have so delivered or caused to be delivered all such letters, bags, parcels, and packages as were in my possession or under my power or control."

And the collector, and every officer of the customs at every port, without special instructions, and every special agent of the Post Office Department, when instructed by the Postmaster General to make examinations and seizures, shall carefully search every vessel for letters which may be on board, or have been carried or transported contrary to law; and each and every of such officers and agents, and every marshal of the United States and his deputies, shall at all times have power to seize all letters, and packages and parcels containing letters, which shall have been sent or conveyed contrary to law on board any ship or vessel, or on or over any post route of the United States, and to convey such letters to the nearest post office; or may, if the Postmaster General and the Secretary of the Treasury shall so direct, detain the said letters, or any part thereof, until two months after the trial and final determination of all suits and proceedings which may at any time, within six months after seizure, be brought against any person for sending, or carrying, or transporting any such letters contrary to any provision of any act of Congress; and one half of any penalties that may be recovered for the illegal sending, carrying, or transportation of any such letters shall be paid to the officers so seizing, and the other half to the use of the Post Office Department; and every package or parcel so seized, in which any letter shall be concealed, shall be forfeited to the United States, and the same proceedings may be had to enforce such forfeiture as are authorized in respect to goods, wares, and merchandise forfeited by reason of any violation of the revenue laws of the United States; and all laws for the benefit and protection of officers of the customs seizing goods, wares, or merchandise for a violation of any revenue law of the United States, shall apply to the officers and agents making seizures by virtue of this act.

MR. BROOKS. That is an important proposition, and I ask for the yeas and nays upon it.

MR. BOYD. I call for tellers on the yeas and nays.

Tellers were ordered; and Messrs. PHELPS and GOODENOW were appointed.

The House was divided, and the tellers reported 31 in the affirmative.

So the yeas and nays were ordered.

The question was then taken upon agreeing to the amendment, and it was decided in the negative—yeas 43, nays 96; as follows:

YEAS—Messrs. Averett, E. Carrington Cabell, Caldwell, Clark, Clingman, Daniel, Dawson, Dimmick, Dockery, Doty, Duncan, Dunham, Evans, Faulkner, Freeman, Gaylord, Gorman, Grey, Hall, Hammond, Harper, Sampson, W. Harris, Haven, Henn, Houston, Howard, Jenkins, George W. Jones, Letcher, Martin, Mason, McVair, John Moore, Morehead, Murray, Newton, Phelps, Robbins, Schermerhorn, Schoolcraft, Schoonmaker, Scurry, Stanley, Frederick P. Stanton, and Stuart—43.

NAYS—Messrs. Aiken, Charles Allen, Willis Allen, Allison, William Appleton, Ashe, Babcock, Barrere, Bibbighaus, Bowie, Bowne, John H. Boyd, Bragg, Brenton, Briggs, Brooks, Buell, Burrows, Joseph Cable, Thompson Campbell, Carter, Caskie, Chandler, Chastain, Churchillwell, Cleveland, Cobb, Colcock, George F. Davis, Dean, Eastman, Edgerton, Florence, Floyd, Fowler, Gamble, Gilmore, Goodenow, Green, Hamilton, Hart, Haws, Hendricks, Holladay, Horsford, John W. Howe, Thomas Y. How, Ingersoll, Ives, Jackson, Andrew Johnson, Daniel T. Jones, George G. King, Preston King, Kuhns, Kurtz, Landry, Lockhart, McCorkle, McMullin, McQueen, Meade, Milson, Henry D. Stephens, Thaddeus Stevens, Sutherland, Sweetser, Taylor, Thompson, Thurston, Townsend, Tuck, Walbridge, Wallace, Walsh, Washburn, Watkins, Wells, Addison White, Wilcox, Wildrick, and Woodward—96.

So the amendment was not agreed to.

The 43d amendment of the Senate was read, as follows:

SEC. 6. And be it further enacted, That it shall not be lawful for any person, other than the captain or commander of such ship or vessel, to carry or transport any letter or packet, or parcel containing letters, on board of any ship or vessel which shall sail from or be bound to any port or place in the United States, or at or within three miles of which there shall be any post office of the United States; and all passengers and other persons on board such ship or vessel shall deliver all letters, and packages and parcels containing a letter or letters, to such captain or commander, as soon as practicable after the receipt thereof, or after their arrival on board such ship or vessel; and for every violation of this provision a penalty of one hundred dollars is hereby imposed, to be recovered by presentment, by information or qui tam action, one half for the use of the informer, and one half for the use of the Post Office Department. And it shall be the duty of such captain or commander, within twenty-four hours after his arrival at any port of the United States, within three miles of which there shall be a post office, to deliver all letters, and packages and parcels containing letters, in his custody, power or control, into the post office at or nearest said port; and every such captain or commander who shall refuse or willfully neglect to deliver the same, as aforesaid, shall forfeit the sum of five hundred dollars, and he shall also forfeit double the amount of postage which would have been chargeable on such letters if so delivered as aforesaid, either or both of which may be recovered in any court having cognizance thereof, one half of which shall be for the use of the party prosecuting for the same, and the other half for the use of the Post Office Department.

The question was taken on the amendment, and it was not agreed to.

The 44th amendment of the Senate was read, as follows:

SEC. 7. And be it further enacted, That any proprietor, member or agent of any express company, or other company engaged in the transportation of packages or parcels for hire, or any other person engaged in such transportation, whether as principal or agent, or temporarily or otherwise, who shall carry or cause to be carried, in violation of any act of Congress, upon or over any post road, or between any ports or places within the United States, or between any port in the United States and any port in any foreign country between which the mails of the United States are carried, any letter or communication in writing, or shall knowingly carry or cause to be carried any package or parcel containing any letter or letters, or other paper or papers in writing, or partly written and partly printed, conveying information of any kind whatever, shall, in addition to the penalties by this act, or at any time heretofore prescribed for such offense, be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and on conviction thereof shall be subject to imprisonment for a term not exceeding three months, and to pay a fine not exceeding five hundred dollars for every such offense."

The question was taken on the amendment, and it was not agreed to.

The 45th amendment of the Senate was read, as follows:

"SEC. 8. And be it further enacted, That every contractor for carrying the mails of the United States, by land or water, and every agent or employee of such contractor, who shall knowingly transport over all or any portion of the route of said contractor, any proprietor, member, agent, or messenger of any express company, or any person engaged in the transportation of parcels or packages for hire, while such contractor shall know, or have good reason to believe, that such proprietor, member, agent, messenger, or person carries, or is engaged in carrying letters, or parcels, or packages, containing a letter or letters, on the route of the said contractor or any part thereof, in violation of any law of the United States, or shall knowingly carry any boxes, bags, trunks, packages, or parcels belonging to or in the custody of such proprietor, member, agent, messenger, or person, which he shall know or have reason to suspect contains any letter or letters, such contractor shall be liable to a fine not exceeding one year's pay of such contractor; and the Postmaster General shall have power, upon such conviction, by an instrument in writing under his hand and seal, to declare the contract for the transportation of the mail by such contractor null and void from such time as he may designate in such instrument."

The question was taken on the amendment, and it was not agreed to.

The 46th amendment of the Senate was read, as follows:

"SEC. 9. And be it further enacted, That in respect to any moneys which have come or shall hereafter come into the possession or custody of any of the agents of the Post Office Department, or any of the officers of the United States, or shall have been paid to the order of the Postmaster General, as provided in the second section of the act entitled 'An act to amend the act entitled 'An act to reduce the rates of postage, to limit the use and correct the abuse of the franking privilege, and for the prevention of frauds on the revenues of the Post Office Department, passed 3d day of March, 1845, approved March 1, 1847,' it shall be lawful for the Postmaster General to receive all such information and statements, under oath or otherwise, from the special agents of the Department, the claimants, and all other persons, as he may deem proper, whether the same would or would not be competent evidence in a court of justice; and he may, after having given to the claimants, by publishing the same as often as once a week for three months in such and so many public newspapers as he may direct, a notice to come in and substantiate their claims, make an order for the payment thereof to such person or persons, and in such proportions as he may deem just and proper, notwithstanding there may be no certain conclusive evidence of the ownership of the same; and when such an order shall be examined, and the same approved by the Attorney General, by an instrument under the hand of such Attorney General, such moneys shall be distributed according to such order."

The question was taken on the amendment, and it was not agreed to.

The 47th amendment of the Senate was read, as follows:

"Sec. 10. And be it further enacted, That the Postmaster General may from time to time, by and with the advice and consent of the President, make any arrangements which may be deemed just and expedient, for allowing the mails of Canada, or of any other Province, State, or country adjoining the United States, to be carried or transported at the expense of the Province, State, or country to which such mails belong, over any part or portion of the territory of the United States, from one point in the Province, State, or country to which such mails belong, to any other point in the same, upon obtaining the same privileges for the transportation of the mails of the United States through the Province, State, or country to which such privilege shall be granted: Provided, That such privileges may at any time be annulled by the President of the United States, of by joint resolution of the two Houses of Congress, from and after the expiration of one month next succeeding the day on which the notice of the act of the President, or of the joint resolution of the two Houses, shall be given to the chief executive officer or head of the Post Office Department of the Province, State, or country whose privilege is to be thereby annulled."

Mr. BROOKS. There is nothing bad in that amendment, and I hope the House will concur in it.

Mr. CLARK. It ought to pass, and I call for tellers.

Tellers were not ordered.

The question was then taken on the amendment, and it was not agreed to.

The 48th amendment of the Senate was read, as follows:

"Sec. 11. And be it further enacted, That every mail of any Province, State, or country, having the privilege authorized to be granted in and by the next preceding section, shall, while in the Territories of the United States, be deemed and taken to be a mail of the United States, so far as to make any violation thereof, or any depredation thereon, or any act or offense in respect thereto, or any part thereof, which would be punishable under the existing laws of the United States, in case the same had been a mail or part of a mail of the United States, an offense of the same grade, and punishable in the same manner and to the same extent as though the said mails were those of the United States; and in any indictment for such act or offense, the said mails, or any part thereof, may be alleged to be, and on the trial of any such indictment they shall be deemed and held to be mails or parts of mails of the United States."

The question was put, and the amendment was not agreed to.

The 49th amendment of the Senate was read, as follows:

"Sec. 12. And be it further enacted, That the Postmaster General be authorized to contract or make other arrangements for the transportation of mails of the United States through any foreign country, and also for their transportation by such transient or other vessels as may be running between ports of the United States and foreign ports, or between foreign ports, in cases where there are no contracts or arrangements therefor, and to provide for the collection by prepayment or otherwise, of such postages as may be due to the United States on such letters and other mailable matter as may be sent under such arrangements and contracts, either in the United States or at such foreign ports, and for that purpose to use and employ as agents the several consuls of the United States, or such other persons as he may think fit: Provided, That no arrangement shall be made which shall violate the laws prevailing in such foreign ports or countries, or any treaty of the United States, and that the whole compensation to be paid for the transportation of such letters and mailable matter, shall in all cases be so limited by the terms of such contracts or arrangements, as not to exceed the whole amount of the postage chargeable upon the letters and mailable matter carried under the same."

The question was put, and the amendment was not agreed to.

The 50th amendment of the Senate was read, as follows:

"Sec. 13. And be it further enacted, That the Postmaster General shall be, and he is hereby, authorized to provide and furnish to all postmasters and other persons applying and paying therefor, suitable letter envelopes, with such water-marks or other guards against counterfeits as he may deem expedient, and with one or more suitable postage stamps, with such device and of such denominations and value as he may direct, printed or impressed thereon, which envelopes shall be sold at the cost of procuring and furnishing the same, as near as may be, with the addition of the value or denomination of the postage stamps so printed or impressed thereon or attached thereto as aforesaid; and letters, when inclosed in such envelopes, with postage stamps printed or impressed thereon, (the postage stamp or stamps in every such case being of the value, denomination, or amount required to prepay the postage which would be chargeable on such letters and envelopes, if sent by mail, to the place of their destination, under the provisions of the laws then in force, and such stamps and envelopes not having been used before,) shall pass in the mails as prepaid letters; and all letters inclosed in such envelopes as shall be provided and furnished by the Postmaster General, as first in this section prescribed, and with postage stamps thereon as aforesaid, (and such postage stamps on such envelopes being equal in value and amount to the rates of postage to which such letters would be liable, if sent by mail, and such postage stamps and envelopes not having been used before,) may be sent, conveyed, and delivered otherwise than by post or mail, notwithstanding any prohibition thereof under any existing law: Provided, That the said envelope shall be duly sealed, or otherwise firmly and securely closed, so that such letter cannot be taken therefrom without tearing or destroying such envelope, and the same duly directed and addressed, and the date of such letter, or of the receipt or transmission thereof to be written or stamped, or otherwise appear on such envelope."

hibition thereof under any existing law: Provided, That the said envelope shall be duly sealed, or otherwise firmly and securely closed, so that such letter cannot be taken therefrom without tearing or destroying such envelope, and the same duly directed and addressed, and the date of such letter, or of the receipt or transmission thereof to be written or stamped, or otherwise appear on such envelope."

Mr. BROOKS. This amendment merely provides for stamped envelopes.

Mr. STEVENS, of Pennsylvania. Is it open to discussion?

The SPEAKER. No debate is in order.

The amendment was not agreed to.

The 51st amendment of the Senate was read, as follows:

"Sec. 14. And be it further enacted, That the Auditor of the Treasury for the Post Office Department may, under such regulations and restrictions as the Postmaster General shall prescribe, allow to every postmaster whose office was not established until after the 1st day of July, 1850, or whose commissions, in consequence of the increase of labor and business at his office, shall have equalled or exceeded the commissions allowed at such office, for the year ending on the 30th day of June, 1851, such compensation in addition to his legal commissions as will, in the judgment of such auditor, make the compensation of such postmaster equal, as near as may be, to the compensation of other postmasters in the same section of the country whose labors are the same as his, and who are entitled to additional allowance under the sixth section of the act entitled 'An act to reduce and modify the rates of postage in the United States, and for other purposes,' approved March 3d, 1851, and under orders of the Postmaster General, made in pursuance of the provisions of said sixth section of the act aforesaid."

The question was put, and the amendment was agreed to.

The 52d amendment of the Senate was read, viz:

"Sec. 15. And be it further enacted, That all fines and penalties imposed for any violation of any law relating to the Post Office Department shall, when collected or recovered, be paid into the Treasury to the credit of the United States, for the use of the Post Office Department, excepting, however, such part thereof as may by law belong to the party informing or prosecuting for the same."

The question was put, and the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. CLARK. I have two or three small amendments providing for additional routes, which I desire to offer to the bill.

The SPEAKER. It is not in order except by unanimous consent.

Mr. LOCKHART. I object.

Mr. CLARK. I ask for a suspension of the rules to enable me to offer them.

The SPEAKER. The House is now acting under a suspension of the rules. The Chair is, however, of the opinion, that it is competent for the House to suspend its own order, and he decides the motion to suspend the rules to be in order. The Chair, however, is reminded that there is another Senate amendment, and he suggests to the gentleman to allow that to be first disposed of.

Mr. CLARK. I have no objection to that.

The 53d amendment of the Senate was read, as follows:

"Sec. 16. And be it further enacted, That it shall be the duty of the Postmaster General to issue proposals, and contract for the transportation of a daily mail between Louisville and Cairo, St. Louis and Cairo, Cairo and Memphis, and Memphis and New Orleans, and to supply such intermediate points as he may order from time to time, on suitable and safe steamboats."

Mr. PHELPS. I hope that amendment will be rejected. It is utterly useless.

Mr. STANTON, of Tennessee. I hope the amendment will be adopted. It is a very necessary and proper amendment.

The amendment was not agreed to.

Mr. CLARK. I now ask the unanimous consent of the House to offer the following amendment establishing a post route. It is to come in under the head of Illinois:

From Hick's Mills post office, Franklin and Kibb county, to Cherry Valley, Winnebago county, Illinois.

There was no objection, and the amendment was received.

The question was then taken, and the amendment was adopted.

Mr. CLARK. I now ask the unanimous consent to offer another amendment.

Mr. GOODENOW. I object.

Mr. CLARK. I move to suspend the rules for the purpose.

The question was taken, and two thirds not voting in the affirmative, the rules were not suspended.

POST OFFICE APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. HOUSTON. I move to take up House bill No. 141, making appropriations for the service of the Post Office Department during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1852.

Mr. STEVENS, of Pennsylvania. I object.
Mr. HOUSTON. I move to suspend the rules for the purpose.

The question was then taken, and two thirds voting in the affirmative, the rules were suspended. The bill was then taken up.

Mr. HOUSTON. I move the previous question upon the amendments of the Senate.

The question was seconded, and the main question ordered to be put.

The first amendment was read, as follows:

"To enable the Postmaster General to contract for the transporting the mail by steamboat from the Lake House to Iberia, on the route No. 6116, from Donaldsonville to Washington, in the State of Louisiana, $7,000."

The question was put, and the amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment, adding the following as a new section, was then read:

"Sec. 2. And be it further enacted, That the Postmaster General be, and he is hereby, authorized, whenever he shall deem it discreet, to dispense with the route agents now sent with the mails from New York to California, and in lieu thereof to appoint not more than two resident agents, to take charge of the mail service across the Isthmus of Panama, and to allow said agents, for salary and personal expenses, not exceeding $3,000 per year for each of such agents, which shall be paid out of the amount annually appropriated for the transportation of the mails."

Mr. PHELPS. I wish to inquire whether these are all the same amendments?

The SPEAKER. The Chair understands that all the sections constitute one amendment.

Mr. JONES, of Tennessee. I think they are all different amendments. They are all independent appropriations. No one has any connection with the preceding one. They were offered by different Senators, and they cannot all be included in a single amendment.

The SPEAKER. It is difficult to determine from the bill whether they are separate amendments or not. The Chair, however, thinks they should be considered as separate, and unless it is objected to, will so consider them.

Mr. PHELPS. I ask that the amendment now pending may be again reported.

The second section was again read by the Clerk. The amendment was then disagreed to.

The third amendment was then read, as follows:

"Sec. 3. And be it further enacted, That the salary of the route agents be, and the same is hereby increased, to $1,000 per annum."

The question was put, and 53 rose in the affirmative.

Mr. FLORENCE demanded tellers; which were ordered; and Messrs. STROTHER and LOCKHART were appointed.

The question was again put, and the tellers reported—ayes 77, noes 57.

So the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. HART. Will it be in order to move to take a recess until six o'clock?

The SPEAKER. It would not be.

Mr. MOORE, of Louisiana. There was a section rejected of which I did not hear one word read. I hope it will be reconsidered, and that the section will be adopted. I make that motion.

Mr. HOUSTON. I call the gentleman to order.

The SPEAKER. Will the gentleman state the section to which he refers?

Mr. MOORE. It is the one authorizing the Postmaster General to contract for carrying the mail in steamboats instead of in an open boat from Lake House to New Iberia, in Louisiana, as it is now carried, by which means it is often lost.

Mr. JONES, of Tennessee, moved that the motion to reconsider be laid upon the table; which motion was agreed to.

The next amendments—Nos. 4 and 5 of the Senate—were then read, and the question being taken on concurring therein, it was decided in the negative.

Amendment of the Senate No. 6, was then read, as follows:

"Sec. 6. And be it further enacted, That the bridges across the Ohio river at Wheeling, in the State of Virginia, and at Bridgeport, in the State of Ohio, abutting on Zane's Island, in said river, are hereby declared to be lawful structures in their present position and elevation, and shall be so held and taken to be, anything in any law or laws of the United States to the contrary notwithstanding."

"Sec. 7. And be it further enacted, That the said bridges are declared to be, and are established post roads for the passage of the mails of the United States, and that the Wheeling and Belmont Bridge Company are authorized to have and maintain their said bridges at their present site and elevation; and the officers and crew of all vessels and boats navigating said river are required to regulate the use of their said vessels and boats, and of any pipes and chimneys belonging thereto, so as not to interfere with the elevation and construction of said bridges."

Mr. CARTTER. Is it competent to take a separate vote upon the two sections.

The SPEAKER. The two must be voted upon as a whole.

Mr. CARTTER. One of these bridges is not ten feet high.

Mr. EDGERTON. I call the gentleman to order.

The SPEAKER. The matter contained in the amendment is indivisible. Both of the bridges are embraced in each of these separate sections.

The question being upon the adoption of the above sections,

Mr. CARTTER called for the yeas and nays; which were ordered.

Mr. STANTON, of Tennessee. Is it in order to move to suspend the rules that I may offer a resolution?

The SPEAKER. It is not.

Mr. MOORE, of Pennsylvania. Is it in order to move to take a recess for two hours?

The SPEAKER. It is not. The House is acting under the operation of the previous question.

The question was then taken on the adoption of the sixth amendment, and there were—yeas 92, nays 42; as follows:

YEAS—Messrs. Ashe, Avrett, Thomas H. Bayly, Beale, Boccock, Bragg, Breckinridge, Brenton, Briggs, Albert G. Brown, George H. Brown, Buell, Caldwell, Thompson Campbell, Caskie, Chastain, Churchwell, Clark, Cleveland, Clingman, Cobb, Colcock, Conger, Daniel, George T. Davis, Dawson, Dockery, Doty, Eastman, Edgerton, Edmundson, Evans, Ewing, Faulkner, Ficklin, Freeman, Gaylord, Goodenow, Gorman, Hall, Hamilton, Hammond, Harper, Hart, Houston, Thomas Y. How, Jackson, Jenkins, Andrew Johnson, John Johnson, Daniel T. Jones, Kuhns, Lotcher, Lockhart, Mann, Martin, Mason, McQueen, Meade, Miller, Milson, Molony, John Moore, Murphy, Murray, Newton, Outlaw, Samuel W. Parker, Penniman, Perkins, Polk, Porter, Powell, Price, Riddle, Robie, Savage, Schermierhorn, Schoolcraft, Scudder, Stanley, Frederick P. Stanton, Richard H. Stanton, Stone, Strother, Sweetser, Thompson, Venable, Wallace, Walsh, Watkins, Wilcox, and Woodward—92.

NAYS—Messrs. Charles Allen, Allison, Bibbhaus, Carter, Curtis, Dean, Dimmick, Duncan, Florence, Floyd, Fowler, Henry M. Fuller, Gamble, Gilmore, Hays, Haven, Hebard, Howard, John W. Howe, Ingersoll, J. Glancy Jones, George G. King, Kuriz, McNair, Henry D. Moore, Morehead, Morrison, Andrew Parker, Robbins, Ross, Schoonmaker, Skelton, Snow, Benjamin Stanton, Thaddeus Stevens, Sutherland, Townsend, Tuck, Walbridge, Washburn, Addison White, and Wildrick—42.

So the amendment was agreed to.

The amendment of the Senate to the title of the bill was read and agreed to, as follows, viz: add to the title the words "and for other purposes."

MILITARY APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. HOUSTON. I move that the rules be suspended and that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole on the state of the Union, for the purpose of taking up the military appropriation bill, which has a great many amendments to it.

Mr. STANLY. I suggest to the gentleman from Alabama, that he move to discharge the Committee of the Whole from the further consideration of the bill.

Mr. HOUSTON. I prefer that course, and if there is no objection, I withdraw my motion and allow the gentleman from North Carolina to make the motion indicated by him.

Mr. STANLY. I make that motion.

Mr. COBB. I rise to a question of privilege. I move to reconsider the vote by which the civil and diplomatic bill was passed.

The SPEAKER. Did the gentleman vote in the affirmative?

Mr. COBB. I did.

The SPEAKER. The motion of the gentleman from Alabama will be entered, but there is a motion pending which must be first considered by the House.

The question was then taken on Mr. STANLY's motion to discharge the Committee of the Whole on the state of the Union from the further consideration of the Army appropriation bill, and it was agreed to.

Mr. HOUSTON. I now ask that that bill be taken up and read.

Mr. HOUSTON. There are a great many amendments to the bill, and should a debate arise, we never will get through. I therefore move the previous question.

The SPEAKER. We have discharged the Committee of the Whole from the military bill; but there is a rule which requires that it shall be considered in the Committee of the Whole on the state of the Union. Is it the unanimous consent of the House that that rule be suspended?

There was no objection, and the rule was suspended.

The call for the previous question was then seconded, and the main question ordered to be put.

The Clerk then proceeded to read the Senate amendments:

The 4th amendment of the Senate, inserting in page 5 the clause below, was considered and agreed to, viz:

"For fuel and quarters for officers of the Army serving on the Coast Survey, the payment of which is no longer made by the Quartermaster's Department, $4,500."

The 1st, 2d, 3d, 5th, 6th, 7th, and 8th amendments were considered and rejected. Vide report of Committee of Conference.

The 9th amendment of the Senate was considered and agreed to, as follows:

9th. After the first section, add:

"For payment to Priscilla D. Twiggs, of the amount of the pay and allowances which would have accrued to her son George D. Twiggs, had he been regularly in service as a second lieutenant of infantry, from the 1st day of June, 1847, the date on which he left the United States, to the 12th of August in the same year, when he fell in battle at the National Bridge, Mexico, $230 33."

The 10th, 11th, 12th, 13th, and 14th amendments of the Senate were then considered, and rejected. Vide report of Committee of Conference.

Mr. STANTON, of Tennessee. The House is rejecting all of these Senate amendments, and I propose that they be disagreed to in mass and sent to a Committee of Conference.

Mr. KING, of New York. I object.

The 15th, 16th, 17th, 18th, and 19th Senate amendments were then considered and rejected. Vide report of Committee of Conference.

The 20th amendment of the Senate was read and agreed to, as follows:

Add at the end of the bill after section 9th:

"Sec. 10. And be it further enacted, That there be appropriated as aforesaid to refund to the State of North Carolina the amount of money advanced and transportation furnished to volunteers from that State during the late war with Mexico, the sum of $9,332 53."

The 21st amendment was read, as follows:

Add as a new section at the end of the bill after section 10:

"Sec. 11. And be it further enacted, That there be appropriated as aforesaid, for refunding to the State of Michigan, the amount advanced by said State in organizing, subsisting and transporting volunteers previous to their being mustered into the service of the United States during the late war with Mexico, $20,000; which said sum, or so much thereof as shall be necessary to pay and cancel the claim of said State as presented and now on file in the office of the Third Auditor of the Treasury Department, together with the interest as aforesaid on said claim from the time said advances were made by said State, shall be paid by the Secretary of the Treasury to the Governor or other proper officer of the said State of Michigan."

The question was put, and upon a division, there were—ayes 35, noes not counted.

Mr. STUART. I demand tellers.

Tellers were ordered; and Messrs. STANTON of Tennessee, and WHITE were appointed.

The question was again put, and the amendment was disagreed to, the tellers having reported—ayes 40, noes not counted.

The 22d, 23d, 24th, and 26th amendments of the Senate were then considered and rejected. [See report of Committee of Conference.]

The 25th amendment was read, as follows:

Add, as a new section, at the end of the bill after section 14:

"Sec. 15. And be it further enacted, That in the settlement of the claims of the State of Georgia, under the provisions of the act of the 11th of August, 1842, providing for the settlement of the claims of Georgia for the services of her militia, which have heretofore been suspended or disallowed, the accounting officers of the Treasury Department allow and pay, upon proof that the State has allowed and paid the same, all accounts for forage, subsistence, hospital stores, medical services, and transportation, which have not been heretofore allowed by the United States. That for the pay of mounted infantry the pay of cavalry be allowed, the same to be paid out of the fund appropriated by the act of 11th August, 1842."

The question was put upon the amendment, and upon a division there were—ayes 23, noes 64; no quorum.

Mr. CHANDLER. I demand tellers.

Tellers were ordered; and Messrs. STANTON of Tennessee, and CHANDLER were appointed.

Mr. CHASTAIN. I demand the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were not ordered.

The question was again put, and the amendment was rejected, the tellers having reported—ayes 34, noes not counted.

Mr. WASHBURN. The amendment with regard to the payment of advances to the State of Maine was rejected. I move that the vote by which it was disagreed to be reconsidered. There can be no sort of question as to the justice of the claim. It has been audited.

[Cries of "Order!" "Order!"]

Mr. CLEVELAND. The gentleman was not present, and therefore cannot move to reconsider the vote by which the amendment he refers to was rejected.

The SPEAKER. The Chair cannot know that officially.

A motion was made that the motion to reconsider be laid upon the table; and it was agreed to.

The Clerk read the following amendment of the Senate:

"97th. Add at the end of the bill, as a new section, after section 16th, the following:

"Sec. 17. And be it further enacted, That the accounts of Adjutant General Roger Jones shall be settled by the accounting officers of the Treasury according to equity and justice, and in such manner as to allow the pay and emoluments of his commission of adjutant general from the time of the reduction of the Army in 1821 to March 7, 1825, when he was restored to his rank and commission in the staff of the Army: Provided, That the pay and emoluments of captain of artillery during the same period be deducted therefrom."

Mr. JONES, of Tennessee. That is a private claim, and ought not to be allowed here.

The question was put upon the amendment, and upon a division there were—ayes 65—

Mr. ROBBINS. I demand tellers. Tellers were ordered; and Messrs. CHANDLER and ST. MARTIN were appointed.

The question was again put, and the amendment was agreed to—the tellers having reported—ayes 91, noes 32.

Mr. CLEVELAND. I desire, with the consent of the House, to move that we take a recess.

[Cries of "I object!" "I object!" "I object!"]

The 28th, 29th and 30th amendments of the Senate, proposing to add sections 18, 19, and 20, were considered and rejected. See report of Committee of Conference.

The amendments having been disposed of—

EXTRA COMPENSATION.

Mr. STANTON, of Tennessee, asked permission to offer the following resolution:

Resolved, That there be paid out of the contingent fund of the House to the employees thereof, including the police of the Capitol, and such regular laborers and lamp-lighters on the public grounds around the Capitol as have heretofore been included in similar resolutions, and the two watchmen on the wings of the Capitol, the usual extra compensation allowed at the close of a session.

Mr. STANTON. Before the previous question is put, I wish to include the watchmen on the Capitol.

Mr. SKELTON. I object to the resolution.

Mr. STANTON. I move to suspend the rules for the purpose of introducing it.

The question was then taken, and there were—ayes 80, noes not counted.

Mr. BAYLY, of Virginia, demanded tellers; which were ordered.

The question was then taken, (Messrs. CHANDLER, and STANTON of Tennessee, acting as tellers,) and there were—ayes 100, noes not counted.

So the rules were suspended.

Mr. JONES, of Tennessee. I would ask my colleague, as a matter of justice, to except, in giving this compensation, those who receive the increased compensation provided for in the civil and diplomatic bill. I ask that the amount they shall receive under that shall be deducted from this.

Mr. SEYMOUR. I would like to ask the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. STANTON] whether the amount of increased compensation by the percentage provided for in the civil and diplomatic bill will amount to $20 to these employees, inasmuch as it does not commence until the present fiscal year commences?

THE CONGRESSIONAL GLOBE.

PUBLISHED AT WASHINGTON, BY JOHN C. RIVES.—TERMS $3 FOR THIS SESSION.

32D CONGRESS, 1ST SESSION.

WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 1, 1852.

NEW SERIES...No. 156.

Mr. WOODWARD. I will offer the following amendment to that of the gentleman from Tennessee, to compensate those who, taking into consideration the character and intensity of the labor, are worth five times as much as any of them:

And that there be paid to each of the reporters of this House for the Congressional Globe a sum equal to the extra compensation hereby allowed to the Chief Clerk in the clerk's office.

Mr. STANTON, of Tennessee. I am willing to accept that amendment, but not that of the gentleman from Tennessee, [Mr. JONES.] I call the previous question.

The previous question was seconded, and the main question ordered.

Mr. JONES, of Tennessee. I ask that the resolution and amendment be again reported.

The resolution as amended was again read by the Clerk.

Mr. CLEVELAND. The amendment simply provides that these gentlemen shall receive the same extra compensation as we give the chief clerk. They ought to have it. Considering the nature of their services, they ought to have it more than any others here.

Mr. PENN. I hope the House will vote for the amendment.

Mr. STANTON, of Tennessee. It is right, and it should be paid to them.

Mr. JONES, of Tennessee, demanded the yeas and nays upon the amendment; which were not ordered.

Tellers were demanded; but only seventeen gentlemen rising in the affirmative, they were not ordered.

The question was then taken, and the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. BRECKINRIDGE. I will ask the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. STANTON] to allow me to offer an amendment, to place the Sergeant-at-Arms and the Postmaster of the House upon an equal footing with the Chief Clerk.

Mr. STANTON, of Tennessee. I think the original resolution includes them.

The question was then taken on the resolution as amended, and it was agreed to.

Mr. STANTON, of Tennessee, moved to reconsider the vote by which the resolution was passed, and to lay the motion to reconsider upon the table; which latter motion was agreed to.

FORTIFICATION BILL.

Mr. HOUSTON. I desire in some way to dispose of the fortification bill. If the House will consent to take action upon it, I will propose to bring it before the House, and make a test vote upon it.

Mr. CARTER. I object.

Mr. HOUSTON. I move that the rules be suspended, and that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole on the state of the Union, for the purpose of taking up the fortification bill.

Mr. STANTON, of Tennessee. Have we yet acted upon the naval appropriation bill?

Mr. HOUSTON. It has not yet come in from the Senate, or I would move to take it up.

Mr. WHITE, of Kentucky. I wish to know what was done with the 30th amendment to the Army bill in regard to the Blue Lick Springs in Kentucky?

The SPEAKER. It was rejected, in the opinion of the Chair.

Mr. STANTON, of Kentucky. I move to reconsider the vote by which that amendment was rejected.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will make an entry of that motion.

Mr. STANTON, of Tennessee. I rise to a privileged question. It is to reconsider the vote by which the amendment to the Post Office bill, providing for a daily mail on the Mississippi river, was rejected.

The SPEAKER. That motion will be entered, but it cannot be considered while the motion of the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. HOUSTON] is before the House.

Mr. STANTON. Is not the motion debatable?

The SPEAKER. It is not. It is not in order to consider it while the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. HOUSTON] has the floor.

Mr. STANTON. I only wish to say a single word.

[Cries of "Order!" "Order!" "Order!"]

The SPEAKER. The motion of the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. STANTON] is entered, and can be called up at any time when no other privileged motion is pending.

The question recurring upon Mr. HOUSTON's motion to suspend the rules,

Mr. HOUSTON demanded the yeas and nays; which were ordered.

The question was then taken, and there were—yeas 70, nays 46; as follows:

YEAS—Messrs. Allison, William Appleton, Averett, Babcock, Thomas H. Bayly, Bibbhaus, Bowie, John H. Boyd, Bragg, Breckinridge, Brooks, E. Carrington Cabell, Chandler, Chapman, Chastain, Conger, Daniel, Duncan, Evans, Florence, Goodenow, Goodrich, Gray, Hamilton, Hammond, Sampson W. Harris, Hart, Hascall, Haven, Hebard, Holladay, Houston, Howard, John W. Howe, Ingersoll, Jackson, George W. Jones, J. Glancy Jones, George G. King, Kurtz, Martin, McCorkle, Miller, Milson, Henry D. Moore, Morehead, Andrew Parker, Peaslee, Perkins, Phelps, Porter, Reed, Riddle, Robbins, Schermerhorn, Schoolcraft, Schoonmaker, Scudder, Skelton, Stanley, Frederick P. Stanton, Richard H. Stanton, Thaddeus Stevens, St. Martin, Strother, Taylor, Thurston, Walsh, Watkins, and Addison White—70.

NAYS—Messrs. Charles Allen, Barrere, Beale, Bowne, Brenton, Albert G. Brown, Buell, Joseph Cable, Caldwell, Lewis D. Campbell, Thompson Campbell, Churchill, Clark, Cobb, Colcock, Dawson, Dimmick, Eastman, Edgerton, Edmundson, Ficklin, Floyd, Gaylord, Gorman, Green, Hall, Isham G. Harris, Hena, Thomas Y. How, Andrew Johnson, John Johnson, Robert W. Johnson, Letcher, Lockhart, McQueen, Murray, Outlaw, Pennington, Polk, Powell, Robie, Savage, David L. Seymour, Benjamin Stanton, Stuart, Townshend, Wallace, and Woodward—46.

So the rules were suspended, and the House resolved itself into the Committee of the Whole on the state of the Union, (Mr. STUART in the chair.)

FORTIFICATION BILL.

Mr. HOUSTON. I move to take up House bill No. 316, "making appropriations for certain fortifications of the United States for the year ending the 30th of June, 1853."

The question was then taken, and it was agreed to.

Mr. HOUSTON. The fortification bill as reported by the committee, contains appropriations to the amount of $134,000. It is founded on a letter of General Totten, who classified these works into various classes, and the committee have instructed me to report back to the House one class which is embraced in this bill. General Totten, in his letter, desired the passage of the entire fortification bill; but when he found he could not get that, he urged the universal importance it was to the country of passing a bill embracing at least the first class, for the purpose of preserving the public property from dilapidation and destruction. As there is very little time for a discussion of this subject, if the committee will do so, I shall propose to go into the House for the purpose of closing the debate. I move that the committee rise.

Mr. BAYLY, of Virginia. I desire to offer a substitute, and I wish to be heard upon it for ten minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Virginia [Mr. BAYLY] can offer his substitute when the committee again organizes.

The question was then taken upon Mr. HOUSTON's motion, and it was agreed to.

The committee accordingly rose, and the Speaker having resumed the chair, the chairman reported that the Committee of the Whole on the state of the Union had, according to order, had the Union generally under consideration, and especially House bill No. 316, "making appropriations for certain fortifications of the United States for the year ending the 30th of June, 1853."

LATE MR. RANTOUL.

Mr. GOODRICH. I ask the unanimous consent of the House to offer the following resolution:

Resolved, That the Speaker pay to the widow of the Hon. Robert Rantoul, deceased, whatever balance may have been due Mr. Rantoul, as a member of this House, at the time of his death: And resolved, That the Clerk of the House be directed to pay out of the contingent fund, to Mrs. Rantoul, the per diem to which her late husband would have been entitled if he had lived until the end of the present session.

Mr. JONES, of Tennessee. I object to the latter part of that resolution. It has never been done yet, and I object to it.

Mr. GOODRICH. I will withdraw the latter clause of the resolution, if there is any objection to it. I will modify it according to the suggestion of the gentleman from Tennessee, [Mr. JONES.]

The question recurring upon the adoption of the resolution as modified, it was put, and the resolution was agreed to.

A message was received from the Senate, by Mr. DICKINS, its Secretary:

Mr. SPEAKER: The Senate have passed bills of the following titles, viz:

H. R., No. 240, entitled "An act making appropriations for the naval service for the year ending 30th June, 1853;" and

H. R., No. 312, entitled "An act making appropriations for light-houses, light-boats, buoys, &c., and providing for the erection and establishment of the same, and for other purposes," severally, with amendments, in which I am directed to ask the concurrence of this House.

On motion by Mr. HOUSTON, by unanimous consent, it was Ordered, That the bill of the House making appropriations for the naval service, for the year ending 30th June, 1853, just reported from the Senate, with sundry amendments, be committed to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. HOUSTON. I move the adoption of the usual resolution, closing debate on the fortification bill in fifteen minutes after the committee shall have resumed its consideration.

Mr. JOHNSON, of Arkansas. The gentleman will allow me to suggest to him before that resolution is adopted, to make no more propositions, or I hope the House will vote them down. It is too late in the session to go into committee, and there are some things that ought to be done in the House.

Mr. HOUSTON. This is about as important as anything else that can be done for the country.

Mr. BROWN, of Mississippi. I move to amend the proposition, by striking out "fifteen minutes" and inserting "five." We have no time to waste in speech making.

The question was taken on the amendment, and it was agreed to.

The question recurred upon agreeing to the resolution as amended; and being put, it was decided in the affirmative.

So the resolution as amended was agreed to.

Mr. HOUSTON. I move to reconsider the vote by which the resolution was adopted, and to lay the motion to reconsider on the table.

The question was taken upon the latter motion, and it was agreed to.

Mr. HOUSTON. I now move that the rules be suspended, and that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole on the state of the Union.

Mr. JOHNSON, of Arkansas. Is not a motion to postpone the bill until the first Monday in December in order?

The SPEAKER. It is not in possession of the House even, and it is not therefore in order.

Mr. JOHNSON. I hope the House will refuse to go into committee.

Mr. BROWN, of Mississippi. Is it in order to move that the Committee of the Whole on the state of the Union be discharged from the further consideration of this bill, and bring it into the House?

The SPEAKER. Not unless the rules were suspended, or by unanimous consent.

Mr. BAYLY. I object.

Mr. BROWN. Then I move to suspend the rules.

Mr. KING, of New York. I rise to a point of order. I wish to inquire of the Chair whether there is not a motion pending to suspend the rules and to go into committee?

The SPEAKER. There is a motion pending to go into committee.

Mr. KING. Then that motion must be first put.

The SPEAKER. There is a motion pending, made by the gentleman from Mississippi, [Mr. Brown,] to suspend the rules, which must first be put.

Mr. HOUSTON. I withdraw the motion to go into the Committee of the Whole.

Mr. HART. I renew it.

The SPEAKER. The other motion being first made, and being of equal dignity, must be first put.

Mr. HART. It was out of order, as I understood the Chair, to consider that motion.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Alabama [Mr. Houston] withdrew his motion to go into committee. The gentleman from Mississippi was recognized by the Chair, and submitted a motion to suspend the rules, and it is in order.

The question was then taken on Mr. Brown's motion; and on a division, there were—ayes 72, noes 66.

So (two thirds not voting in the affirmative) the rules were not suspended.

Mr. HOUSTON. I now renew my motion to suspend the rules and go into the Committee of the Whole on the state of the Union.

The question was then put upon Mr. Houston's motion, and it was agreed to.

FORTIFICATION BILL.

So the rules were suspended, and the House resolved itself into the Committee of the Whole on the state of the Union, (Mr. Stuart in the chair,) and resumed the consideration of the fortification appropriation bill.

Mr. BAYLY, of Virginia. I regret exceedingly that after there was a sort of understanding between the chairman of the Committee of Ways and Means, that we were to have an hour to discuss this bill, that we should be cut down to fifteen minutes.

Mr. HOUSTON. I do not want an hour.

Mr. BAYLY. The understanding was, that I should have fifteen minutes.

Mr. HOUSTON. I have no idea of taking up my hour.

Mr. BAYLY. I choose to say that, because the gentleman can occupy his hour.

Mr. HOUSTON. I choose to say that I told the gentleman, before he commenced his remarks, that I was not going to take my hour.

Mr. BAYLY. I move a substitute for the bill, which I send to the Clerk's desk.

The substitute was then read by the Clerk, as follows:

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the following sums be, and they are hereby, appropriated, to be paid out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, for the preservation and repair of certain fortifications, for the year ending the 30th of June, 1853:

For repairing a breach in the breakwater constructed for the protection of the site of Fort Sumter, Charleston harbor, South Carolina, $12,300.

Mr. B. said: After the suffering to which the country was subjected in the late war with Great Britain, there was appointed a mixed board of Army and Navy officers, assisted by General Bernard, who was the favorite engineer of Napoleon, to perfect our fortifications. Well, sir, there have been expended on these fortifications, and such as were constructed subsequently to the revolutionary war, and prior to the late war, the sum of $20,698,536; and the amount that is asked in my substitute—not only to preserve and to repair those forts that are completed, but to carry on the construction of two or three forts of the utmost importance—is less than three per cent. of the whole cost, or about three per cent. But if you take the old forts, the cost is little more than two per cent. to carry on their construction and keep them in repair. The percentage upon the whole is raised by the construction of four forts. Fort Delaware, on Pea Patch Island, for the protection of Philadelphia; Solter's Point, to protect the city of Baltimore; and for a fortification at Key West, and one on the dry Tortugas. A large amount of the appropriation that that bill asks for, for those works which are not already completed, are for those in the Gulf of Mexico. Everybody knows, I believe, that I have no interest in this matter, but anybody who will look at it will see the necessity for those fortifications to which I have referred. The whole commerce of the Gulf of Mexico would be terribly exposed but for those fortifications. Sir, Great Britain commands the southern outlet from the Gulf of Mexico by her fortifications in Jamaica; and Spain, by hers at Havana, has the control of the northern pass, and then Mexico has Vera Cruz or San Juan, and there is not a solitary point in the Gulf of Mexico where a single vessel laden with our commerce could, for one moment, find shelter to protect it from a British fleet. There is not a solitary point where one of our men-of-war, in the event of its being overpowered by a British fleet, could find shelter. These are not fortifications, as gentlemen suppose, of the character that has been condemned. They are not land fortifications, but are places for the shelter of our commerce and our Navy. The whole appropriation asked for to preserve, continue, and perfect these works is about three and a half per cent. on the amount expended already. Well, now, when the Government, under the control and advisement of a board of Navy and Army officers, assisted by Bonaparte's favorite engineer, has projected these works, and we have expended twenty millions upon them, is it good economy to let them go to ruin, when the small appropriation asked is about three and a half per cent. on the whole cost?

[The Speaker having temporarily resumed the chair for the purpose—

A message was received from the Senate, by Mr. DICKINS, its Secretary:

Mr. SPEAKER: The Senate have passed the bill of the House (No. 273) entitled "An act making further provision for the satisfaction of Virginia military land warrants," without amendment.

The Senate insist on their amendments disagreed to by the House, to the bill of the House (No. 241) entitled "An act making appropriation for the service of the Post Office Department during the fiscal year ending the 30th of June, 1853," and ask a conference of the House thereon; and have appointed Mr. MILLER, Mr. RUSK, and Mr. FELCH managers of the said conference on the part of the Senate.

The Senate also insist on their amendments disagreed to by the House to the bill of the House (No. 220) entitled "An act making appropriation for the support of the Army for the year ending 30th of June, 1853," and ask a conference with the House thereon; and have appointed Mr. BRIGHT, Mr. DAWSON, and Mr. BRODHEAD managers at the said conference on the part of the Senate.

On motion by Mr. HOUSTON, by unanimous consent, it was Ordered, That the House insist on their disagreement to the amendments of the Senate to the bill of the House (No. 220) making appropriations for the support of the Army for the year ending the 30th of June, 1853, and agree to a conference with the Senate thereon.

Mr. HOUSTON, Mr. STANLY, and Mr. GORMAN were appointed managers at the said conference on the part of this House.]

Mr. BROWN, of Mississippi. I am opposed to the substitute of the gentleman from Virginia, but I have no idea of consuming five minutes of the precious time of the House in discussing it. I simply want to express the opinion that, in my judgment, these fortifications, take them at large, are great humbugs. The fortification before the city of Vera Cruz was admitted to be the strongest in the world, or amongst the strongest. Military men said that it could not be taken. General Scott went there with an inferior force, and invested and took it in a little less than twenty-four hours. A beautiful commentary upon all your fortifications! I hope this fortification bill will be disposed of very shortly.

Mr. WALSH. I move to amend the substitute by reducing the first appropriation five dollars. Now, sir, although General Scott succeeded in destroying the castle at Vera Cruz, it had defied several Powers before that; and there is not a man superior to General Scott, or his equal, so far as military genius is concerned. That fortification was supposed, by all military and scientific men, to be impregnable. Sir, it is no argument at all against fortifications, that they are sometimes taken. But, sir, I propose to say that, if the system of fortifications is unjust, then this bill is unjust. We have heard a great deal about favoritism in regard to rivers and harbors, but this bill professes to proceed upon the principle that only such appropriations are to be made as will keep works actually in existence in proper repair. Now this is a most unjust principle, because New York harbor has already three or four forts, and Boston harbor and other harbors in the country are amply protected against the invasion of foreign forces; but you are to do nothing for Baltimore; you are not to give her the slightest protection, because her fort is not two thirds finished. What justice is there in that? If you want to carry out a just system, abandon the fortifications elsewhere and leave them precisely in the condition in which you leave that portion of the Atlantic coast in the vicinity of the city of Baltimore. What justice is there in making appropriations for the repair of fortifications which are to guard our coast against a foreign foe at one point, and leaving a great mart of trade, like the city of Baltimore, which is destined to become still larger and more important when our chain of internal improvements is completed, entirely exposed? Within the last five or ten years, this city of Baltimore has extended along the line of the Patapsco, far below old Fort McHenry, which maintained in the late war that gallant defense, and at this moment, in case of an invasion by a foreign naval force, she would be wholly unprotected. Under these circumstances, appropriations are recommended by this Military Committee, to keep up the defenses elsewhere, and to extend the sites of defenses elsewhere, while the solitary defense which Baltimore would have if it was completed, is to remain in its present condition. Now, if this system of fortifications is to be broken down and the proper defenses of the country destroyed, the Democratic party in this House will be held responsible for it; and though they may be sustained in their western fastnesses, those upon the sea-board will have a voice on this question, and will denounce their conduct.

Mr. GORMAN. Mr. Chairman, I am opposed to this amendment. I am opposed to the whole appropriation. I am opposed to any further appropriations for our fortifications. It is a known fact that this House has heretofore rejected these appropriations. They have twice rejected them. It is an admitted fact now, in military science, that these fortifications are of no earthly use as national defenses, except in one instance, and that is for the purpose of enabling our Navy and our merchant vessels to get under the protection of their guns when pursued by an enemy. So far as they are concerned in defending the country, they are of no earthly use. No military man on the face of the earth who had five ideas above a pickled oyster would ever think of an attempt to storm one of our fortifications. No man in this country, I apprehend, imagines that the British would attempt to sail up the Potomac and attack Fort Washington. No man in his sound mind imagines that they would attack New York. No man in his sound mind imagines that they would come up the Mississippi and attack Fort Jackson. No man in his sound mind can think they would attack Fort Moultrie. No man in his sound mind can think that they would attempt to attack the fort at Point Comfort. The only help these fortifications can be is to enable our commercial marine to get in under them and protect themselves against an outward navy. But if the enemy wish to land, all they have got to do is to go to any part of our shore, land in serf-boats, and march wherever they please. But while gentlemen universally admit this, while they accept the principle, they say that you must keep them in repair. Keep what in repair? Your fine flower-gardens and fences? Keep up the paint and brush? Under your Army regulations, the soldiers do that from day to day, and a very slight appropriation is needed to keep up the repairs from year to year. The bill of the Committee of Ways and Means of $134,000, is amply sufficient for that.

I have but one additional remark to make, and it is this: that if any gentleman can rise in his place and say that there is a fortification in America that the British cannot, by landing at some other point, surround and take, then I have learned the history of a small portion of the military science of this country to very little advantage. There is not a man in the Army, from General Scott himself down, but what will admit, that by landing on our coast and going round by land, an enemy could take any fortification in the country. They are of no earthly use whatever, except, as I said before, to protect our commercial marine by enabling vessels to run in under their guns.

Mr. STANTON, of Tennessee. I move to amend the amendment by increasing the amount $50. I do not rise for the purpose of making an argument in reference to fortifications. I agree generally with what the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. GORMAN] has said, except in reference to one or two points, such as the Tortugas, because they do not stand upon the ground of fortifications on land which can be surrounded and taken; they defend a strait. But I consider it very important that, in the absence of these fortifications, we should strengthen the Navy, and that we should build such a vessel as I proposed when the naval appropriation bill was under consideration the other day.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman is not in order in discussing the propriety of building a naval vessel.

Mr. STANTON. Well, I am only illustrating the argument in reference to fortifications.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair cannot entertain an argument of that sort at this stage of the session.

Mr. STANTON. Well, then, I will proceed in order. I was going to say that there is no time to mature a bill in reference to fortifications. I hope, therefore, that this debate will cease from this moment, and that we will rise and consider the naval appropriation bill, which has been returned from the Senate, and which is more important than the fortification bill. I move that the committee do now rise.

The question was then taken on Mr. STANTON's motion, and it was agreed to.

The committee accordingly rose, and the Speaker having resumed the chair, the chairman reported that the Committee of the Whole on the state of the Union had, according to order, had under consideration the state of the Union generally, and particularly the fortification bill, and had come to no resolution thereon.

SENATE'S AMENDMENTS TO THE NAVAL APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. STANTON, of Tennessee. I move that the Committee of the Whole on the state of the Union be discharged from the further consideration of the naval appropriation bill, and the amendments of the Senate thereto.

Mr. KING, of New York. I object.

Mr. STANTON. Then I move to suspend the rules for that purpose.

The motion was agreed to.

The bill and amendments were then taken up for consideration.

Mr. STANTON, of Tennessee. I move the previous question.

The previous question was seconded, and the main question ordered to be put.

The 1st, 2d, 3d, and 4th amendments of the Senate were then non-concurred in.

The 5th amendment was read, as follows:

"Insert in page 2, after the clause appropriating for the repair of vessels in ordinary, the following:

"And the Secretary of the Navy be, and he is hereby, authorized and required to have completed with the least possible delay, the war steamer contracted for with Robert L. Stevens, in pursuance of an act of Congress approved April 14th, 1812, and the balance of the appropriation heretofore made, which has been carried to the credit of the surplus fund, shall be used for that purpose."

Mr. DEAN. I call for the yeas and nays on concurring in the amendment.

The yeas and nays were not ordered.

Mr. SKELTON. I ask for tellers.

Tellers were ordered; and Messrs. HAMILTON, and STANTON of Tennessee, were appointed.

The question was then taken, and the tellers reported—ayes 47, noes 70.

So the amendment was not concurred in.

Mr. HALL moved to reconsider the vote just taken, and to lay the motion to reconsider upon the table.

The question was put, and the latter motion was agreed to.

The 6th amendment was read:

"Insert in the bill the following:

"And the Secretary of the Navy may, if he deem it proper, cause to be applied, as soon as practicable, to one or more of the steam vessels belonging to the United States, any steam condenser which may be found best calculated for the purpose of furnishing fresh water to marine boilers, and for the use of the crews."

The question was put, and 47 rose in the affirmative.

Mr. STANTON, of Kentucky, demanded tellers; which were ordered; and Messrs. GOODENOW and LOCKHART were appointed.

Mr. JONES, of Tennessee. I ask that the amendment may again be reported.

The amendment was again read.

The question was again put, and the tellers reported—ayes 79, noes 40.

Mr. DIMMICK demanded the yeas and nays; but they were not ordered.

So the amendment was agreed to.

7th amendment. After the following section:

"For repairs and the erection of buildings at the United States Naval Academy at Annapolis, Maryland, $30,000"—insert:

"For the purchase of ground adjoining the premises occupied by the Naval Academy, extension of the walls, and making new street and wharf, and changing the front of buildings, $32,000."

The amendment was not agreed to—ayes 17, noes not counted.

8th amendment. After the following clause:

"To complete the quarters for the students and professors of the Naval Academy at Annapolis, the sum of $75,000"—insert:

"And hereafter no appointment of midshipman, acting midshipman, or pupil at any naval school in the Navy, shall be made unless recommended by the member of Congress representing the district in which the applicant resides, in the same manner that cadets at West Point are now appointed; and that the Secretary of the Navy is hereby required to report to Congress at its second session the number and names of appointments to the Naval School which have been made, and the district and State whence each one comes, and the number of vacancies then existing at said school, with the Congressional district which may be entitled to supply them, and a statement of the order in which the remainder of the Congressional districts shall be entitled to supply all future and accruing vacancies, so far as it may be determined by existing law, or by circumstances."

Mr. JONES, of Tennessee. Is the proposition now to strike out what has been read?

The SPEAKER. That is the amendment.

Mr. JONES. Well, sir, I hope it will not be stricken out.

Mr. WALSH demanded the yeas and nays; but they were not ordered.

Mr. CLEVELAND demanded tellers; which were ordered; and Messrs. CLEVELAND and HAMILTON were appointed.

The question was then put, and the tellers reported—ayes 7, noes not counted.

So the amendment was disagreed to.

Mr. WALSH. Will it be in order at this stage of the proceedings to move that the Committee of Conference, which shall be appointed upon this bill, shall insist upon retaining this amendment?

The SPEAKER. It will not be in order.

The 9th and 10th amendments of the Senate propose to strike from the following section of the bill the words in brackets, and insert those in italics:

"For contingent expenses that may accrue for the following purposes, viz: freight and transportation, printing and stationery, advertising in newspapers, books, maps, models, and drawings, purchase and repair of fire-engines and machinery, repairs of and attending to steam-engines in navy-yards, purchase and maintenance of horses and oxen, and driving teams, carts, timber-wheels, and the purchase and repair of workmen's tools, postage of public letters, furniture for Government houses, fuel, oil, and candles for navy-yards and shore stations, pay of watchmen and incidental labor, not chargeable to any other appropriation, labor attending the delivery of stores on [civil] foreign stations, wharfage, dockage, and rent, traveling expenses of officers and others under orders, funeral expenses, store and office rent, stationery, fuel, commissions, and pay of clerks to navy agents and store-keepers, flags, awnings, and packing boxes, premiums and other expenses of recruiting, apprehending, deserters, per diem pay to persons attending courts-martial and courts of inquiry, and other services authorized by law, pay to judges advocate, pilotage and towage of vessels and assistance to vessels in distress, bills of health and quarantine expenses of vessels of the United States Navy in foreign ports, $537,840."

These amendments were severally concurred in.

11th amendment. At the end of the above section, insert:

"For contingent expenses not enumerated, $5,000."

The amendment was disagreed to.

12th amendment. After the following section: "For meteorological observations, to be conducted under the direction of the Secretary of the Navy, $2,000"—insert:

"For the payment of the salary of Professor James P. Espy, during the fiscal year ending June 30th, 1848, no appropriation having been made by Congress for that year, $2,000."

The amendment was agreed to.

The remaining amendments of the Senate, from thirteen to forty-six inclusive, were severally considered and rejected by the House. [For final action, see the report of the Committee of Conference.]

Mr. CAMPBELL, of Illinois. I ask the unanimous consent of the House to allow me to take from the Speaker's table Senate bill No. 486, entitled "An act to constitute the town of Alton, in the State of Illinois, a port of delivery."

Mr. HENN. I ask the unanimous consent of the gentleman from Illinois and the House, to allow me to take up a bill for the relief of Mrs. Worth, that a Committee of Conference may be appointed.

Mr. JOHNSON, of Tennessee. I object.

The Clerk then read Senate bill No. 486 through.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to taking up the bill just read?

There was no objection.

The bill was accordingly taken from the Speaker's table and read a first and second time by its title.

Mr. CAMPBELL. I move the following amendment, to come in at the end of the bill:

Sec. 2. And be it further enacted, That Burlington, in the State of Iowa, Galena, Illinois, and Knoxville, in the State of Tennessee, shall be ports of delivery, and shall be subject to the same regulations and restrictions as other ports of delivery in the United States; and there shall be appointed a surveyor of the customs to reside at each of the said ports, who shall, in addition to his own duties, also perform the duties, and receive the salary and emolument of surveyors, prescribed by the act of Congress, passed on the 2d day of March, 1831, providing for the payment of duties on imported goods at certain ports therein mentioned, the same being entitled "An Act allowing the duties on foreign merchandise imported into Pittsburgh, Wheeling, Cincinnati, Louisville, St. Louis, Nashville, and Natchez, to be secured and paid at those places." And said Burlington, Galena, and Knoxville, and the said ports of delivery be, and the same are hereby annexed to, and made part of the collection district of New Orleans, and all the privileges and facilities afforded to Pittsburgh, Wheeling, Cincinnati, Louisville, St. Louis, Nashville, and Natchez, by the act of Congress last aforesaid be, and the same are hereby, extended to said ports of Burlington, Galena, and Knoxville.

Sec. 3. And be it further enacted, That from and after the passage of this act, Fort Jefferson, on the north side of Long Island, in the State of New York be, and the same is hereby, made a port of delivery within the collection district of the port of New York, and that a surveyor be appointed by the President, with the advice and consent of the Senate, to reside at the said port of Fort Jefferson, who shall have power to enroll and license vessels to be employed in the coasting trade, and fisheries, and to enter, and clear, and grant registers and other usual papers to vessels employed in the whale fishery, under such restrictions and regulations as the Secretary of the Treasury may deem necessary, and who shall give the usual bond to perform the usual duties in the manner prescribed, and be entitled to receive the fees allowed by law to surveyors and collectors for the same duties, and no more. But all cargoes chargeable with duties shall be entered, and the duties paid at the port of New York, before permission shall be granted to discharge the same at Fort Jefferson.

Mr. HALL. I trust the gentleman will allow me to move the insertion of Hannibal, in the State of Missouri.

Mr. DIMMICK. I object to the matter altogether.

The SPEAKER. Objection comes too late, as the bill has been introduced by unanimous consent.

Mr. CAMPBELL. I ask the previous question upon the bill and amendment.

Mr. SEYMOUR, of New York. I wish to say one word before the gentleman moves the previous question.

Mr. CAMPBELL. I withdraw the call for a moment, and yield to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. SEYMOUR. This bill has passed the Senate, and is presented in the form in which it has been recommended by the Secretary of the Treasury. The amendment embraces three ports upon the western waters, also recommended, and for which the Committee on Commerce of this House had prepared a bill, but which they have been unable to report. It also includes one port upon the Atlantic coast. They are all recommended as ports of delivery, and are all needed for the purposes of commerce.

Mr. CAMPBELL. I call for the previous question.

Mr. HALL. I only ask that Hannibal and St. Joseph, in the State of Missouri, be included in the amendment.

Mr. CAMPBELL. I decline yielding the floor.

The call for the previous question was seconded, and the main question was ordered to be put.

Mr. DIMMICK. I move that the bill be laid on the table.

The question was taken, and the House refused to lay the bill upon the table.

The question was then taken upon the amendment, and it was agreed to.

The bill was then, according to order, read a third time.

The question then recurred upon the passage of the bill.

Mr. CAMPBELL. I call for the previous question.

The call for the previous question was sustained, and the main question was ordered to be put.

The bill was then passed.

Mr. CARTTER. I ask the unanimous consent of the House to introduce the following resolution:

Resolved, That the Clerk of this House be directed to pay to THOMAS Y. HOW, jr., any moneys due to Nathan Rathbun, by virtue of any resolutions of this House, to pay, first, the expenses of the last sickness of said Nathan Rathbun, now deceased, and his funeral expenses, and the balances, if any, to Mary G. Rathbun, the widow of said deceased.

There was no objection, and the resolution was introduced and passed.

LIGHT-HOUSE BILL.

Mr. DUNCAN. I move that the rules of the House be suspended to enable me to move to take up the bill making appropriations for light-houses, buoys, &c., which has just been returned from the Senate.

The motion was agreed to, and the bill was taken up.

Mr. DUNCAN. I have only to say, that the appropriations by the amendments of the Senate are generally small in amount. They have made appropriations for some additional buoys and one or two light-houses. There is an appropriation of $10,000, to be placed at the disposal of the Secretary of the Treasury, for light-boats, the repair of light-boats, and providing means for the preservation of life. They have also made an appropriation of $150,000 for the completion of light-houses in California and Oregon, which light-houses were appropriated for in 1851.

Mr. WALSH. How much is appropriated for the expenses of officers traveling in Europe?

Mr. DUNCAN. Nothing at all.

Mr. WALSH. Is there any appropriation to defray the expenses of a lieutenant of the Navy who is now traveling in Europe, as I understand, with a portion of his family, at the public expense, to ascertain the character of the French lights?

Mr. DUNCAN. There is no provision of that character in the bill. Nothing of the kind is insinuated with regard to the light-houses in California. An appropriation was made, light-houses were ordered to be built with superior lighting apparatus, and with signals, for which only $15,000 apiece was appropriated. The Department has endeavored to contract with suitable persons for the erection of the light-houses; and I hold in my hand a letter from the Secretary of the Treasury, in which he urges upon the committee the necessity of making the additional appropriation in order to carry into effect the intentions of Congress. The committee move a concurrence with all the amendments of the Senate. With this brief explanation, I move the previous question.

The call for the previous question was seconded, and the main question was ordered to be put.

"For a light-house on the south end of Northern Fox Island, at the entrance of Penobscot Bay, $5,000."

And insert the following, viz:

"For a light-house at the easterly end of the thoroughfare between North Haven and Vinahaven, or on Haven Neck, as the Department shall determine, $5,000."

The question was then taken upon the amendment, and it was agreed to.

A message was here received from the Senate, by the hands of ASBURY DICKINS, Esq., its Secretary, as follows:

Mr. SPEAKER: The Senate insist on their amendments disagreed to by the House, to the bill of the House No. 314, entitled "An act establishing certain post roads," and ask a conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon. The Senate have appointed Mr. RUSK, Mr. BORDLAND, and Mr. BADGER managers at the said conference on the part of the Senate.

By unanimous consent, it was Ordered, That the House insist on their disagreement to the amendments of the Senate to the said bill, (No. 314,) and agree to a conference with the Senate thereon.

The Speaker appointed Mr. CLARK, Mr. HALL, and Mr. HAVEN, managers at the said conference on the part of the House.

The 2d, 3d, 4th, 5th, 6th, 7th, 8th, 9th, 10th, 11th, 12th, and 13th amendments of the Senate were then severally considered and agreed to, as follows:

"2d. For the erection of a harbor light on a point of land lying west of the entrance of Buck's harbor, in Brooksville, $3,500.

"3d. For the erection of beacons, buoys, and spindles between Owl's Head and White Head light-houses, and through Muscle Ridge channel, $4,000.

"4th. For the erection of four buoys at Goldsborough, at the following places: one on the northeast point of Calf Island, one on the western point of the middle ground off Stone Island, one on Half-tide Ledge, and one on a sunken rock at the entrance of Flanders Bay, $200.

"5th. For repairing or reconstructing the stone beacon on Buck Ledge, Penobscot river, $500.

"6th. For one buoy in New Inlet, Great Egg Harbor, and three buoys in Herford, $200.

"7th. For a bell to be placed on one of the light-boats in Chesapeake Bay, to be designated by the Secretary of the Treasury, $200.

"8th. For the removal of the light-house at Milwaukee, and rebuilding the same at the end of the north point of Milwaukee Bay, $5,000.

"9th. For six hollow iron buoys for the waters of Cape Fear, $1,320.

"10th. For constructing three small or harbor light-houses in Galveston Bay, namely: one at Red Fish Bar, one at Clippers' Bar, and one at Half-Moon Shoal, $5,000, in addition to the amount ($20,000) already appropriated for a light-house on Red Fish Bar.

"11th. For the erection of a light-house at Santa Cruz, California, $30,000; for the completion of light-houses in California and Oregon, $120,000.

"12th. For life-boats and other means for rendering assistance to wrecked mariners and others on the coasts of the United States, to be expended under the control and direction of the Secretary of the Treasury, $10,000.

"13th. For testing the apparatus of Wilson & Meacham for illuminating light-houses, $1,000, to be expended under the direction of the Secretary of the Treasury."

The following section of the original bill was read, as follows:

"SEC. 7. And be it further enacted, That all such reports shall, as speedily as may be, be laid before the Secretary of the Treasury, and if such as to authorize the work without further legislation, he shall forthwith proceed with it, otherwise such reports shall be laid before Congress at the next ensuing session; but in all cases where the person designated by the Secretary of the Treasury under the fifth section of this act, does not report such preliminary examination as expedient, the provisions of this act shall, without delay, be carried into execution."

The 14th amendment of the Senate was as follows:

"Strike out from the above section the words 'under the fifth section of this act,' and in the same page and line to strike out the word 'not.'"

The question was then taken, and the amendments were agreed to.

Mr. HAMMOND. I ask the unanimous consent of the House to take up Senate bill No. 321, for the relief of Z. F. Johnston. I ask that the following extract from the report be read:

"That Commander Johnston was ordered by the Secretary of the Navy to the Pacific ocean, and report to Commodore Thomas Ap C. Jones, for duty in the squadron under his command. In compliance with this order, Commander Johnston reached San Francisco on the 20th of November, 1848, and reported for duty a few days thereafter. Commodore Jones declined to assign him to duty, but detained him awaiting orders. His reasons for so doing are contained in his letter of the 27th of January, 1852, addressed to Commander Johnston, which has been laid before the committee. They are stated as follows:

"The reason why you were not placed in command on your joining the Pacific squadron, was that there was no ship on the station without a commander at that time. My reasons for not permitting you to return home immediately, were twofold; first, I wished to keep in reserve a reliable commander to meet any emergency that might happen in the squadron; and, secondly, by your remaining on shore you occupied a position for apprehending deserters from the squadron, and consequently of lessening desertion, by rendering escape more difficult. I may also add, that before the arrival of the first of the steam-packets, your return home would have been attended with great delay and expense to the Government, little, if any, short of what was necessary to maintain you on shore at San Francisco until an emergency did arise which placed you in an appropriate command."

Commander Johnston was thus detained, at heavy charges, on shore, awaiting orders, under expenses far exceeding his pay. In refusing to allow these expenses, Mr. Dayton, Fourth Auditor of the Treasury, remarks as follows:

"At the same time I have no hesitation in saying, that if I had possessed the necessary discretion, I would have admitted the claim, inasmuch as the expense was incurred under very extraordinary circumstances, in the discharge of your duty, and could not have been avoided. It is certainly very hard that you should have been required to expend the whole of your pay, and much more, for your personal subsistence, in consequence of your detention in a country where the means of living were exorbitantly high, after having proceeded there under the orders of the Department, and with the reasonable expectation of receiving the command of a vessel immediately upon your arrival, but which was not furnished you."

Mr. GOODENOW. I desire to know if the paper which has just been read, is a report from any committee of this House or of the Senate?

The SPEAKER. The Chair cannot inform the gentleman.

Mr. POLK. I understand that the objection is withdrawn.

Mr. BROWN, of Mississippi. Yes, sir, I withdraw my objection.

The SPEAKER. Is it the unanimous consent of the House that the bill should be taken up?

Mr. JOHNSON, of Tennessee. I object.

Mr. HAMMOND. I move to suspend the rules for the purpose of taking up the bill.

The question was then taken on the motion to suspend the rules for the purpose of taking up the bill, and it was decided in the affirmative.

The bill was accordingly taken from the Speaker's table, read the first and second time by its title, ordered to a third reading, and subsequently read the third time, and passed.

Here a message was received from the Senate of the United States, by the hands of ASBURY DICKINS, Esq., its Secretary, announcing that the Senate insisted on its amendments to the naval appropriation bill, and asked for a Committee of Conference; and that the Senate had appointed Mr. PEARCE, Mr. MALLORY, and Mr. TOUCEY, managers at the conference on their part.

Mr. PHELPS. I ask that the Chair may appoint a Committee of Conference on the part of the House.

There being no objection, it was so ordered; and the Speaker appointed Mr. PHELPS, Mr. FREDERICK P. STANTON, and Mr. THADDEUS STEVENS, managers at the conference on the part of the House.

SALARIES OF OFFICERS OF THE HOUSE.

Mr. BRECKINRIDGE. I ask the unanimous consent of the House to offer the resolution which I send to the Clerk's desk.

The Clerk read the resolution, viz:

Resolved, That there be paid out of the contingent fund of the House to the Sergeant-at-Arms, Doorkeeper, and Postmaster, such sums in addition to their present salaries, as will make their compensation, respectively, equal to that of the Chief Clerk under the Clerk of the House of Representatives, which is $1,800 per annum, commencing with the present Congress.

Mr. JONES, of Tennessee. I object to the introduction of that resolution.

Mr. BRECKINRIDGE. Then I move to suspend the rules; and on that motion, I call for tellers.

Tellers were ordered; and Messrs. GOODRICH, and STANTON of Tennessee, were appointed.

The question was then put, and the tellers reported—ayes 87, noes 36.

Mr. JONES, of Tennessee. I ask for the yeas and nays. We have already increased these salaries—

[Cries of "Order!"]

Mr. JONES. We have given these officers—

Mr. BRECKINRIDGE. I call the gentleman to order.

The SPEAKER. Discussion is not in order, as the gentleman from Tennessee is aware.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. GOODENOW. I desire to ask for information, if the salaries of these officers have not already been increased?

[Cries of "Order!"]

The question was then taken on the motion to suspend the rules, and there were—yeas 100, nays 43; as follows:

YEAS—Messrs. Charles Allen, Averett, Babcock, Bihghaus, Bowie, John H. Boyd, Breckinridge, Brenton, Briggs, Albert G. Brown, George H. Brown, Joseph Cable, Caldwell, Lewis D. Campbell, Thompson Campbell, Carter, Chandler, Churchwell, Cleveland, Clingman, Conger, Curtis, George T. Davis, Dawson, Dean, Dimmick, Doty, Durkee, Eastman, Edmundson, Evans, Faulkner, Florence, Freeman, Henry M. Fuller, Gamble, Gaylord, Gentry, Gilmore, Goodenow, Goodrich, Gorman, Green, Harper, Sampson W. Harris, Hart, Henn, Holladay, Horsford, Thomas Y. How, Ingersoll, Jackson, John Johnson, Robert W. Johnson, J. Glancy Jones, Kurtz, Landry, Lockhart, Mann, McCorkle, McNair, McQueen, Miller, Millson, Morrison, Murphy, Murray, Andrew Parker, Samuel W. Parker, Peaslee, Penn, Polk, Porter, Powell, Price, Riddle, Robie, Sackett, Schoolcraft, Schoolmaker, Scudder, Scurry, Frederick P. Stanton, Richard H. Stanton, Stone, St. Martin, Strother, Stuart, Sutherland, Sweetser, Taylor, Thompson, Townshend, Venable, Wallace, Walsh, Watkins, Addison White, Alexander White, and Woodward—100.

NAYS—Messrs. Allison, Barrere, Boale, Chastain, Cobb, Daniel, Dockery, Edgerton, Floyd, Grey, Hall, Hamilton, Hammond, Isham G. Harris, Hascall, Haven, Houston, John W. Howe, Ives, Jenkins, Andrew Johnson, Daniel T. Jones, George W. Jones, George G. King, Preston King, Letcher, Martin, Mason, McMullin, Molony, Henry D. Moore, Morehead, Newton, Pennington, Perkins, Ross, Savage, Skelton, Benjamin Stanton, Walbridge, Washburn, Wilcox, and Wildrick—43.

So (two thirds voting in the affirmative) the rules were suspended.

The question recurred upon agreeing to the resolution.

Mr. BRECKINRIDGE. I will make but a single remark.

Mr. BROWN, of Mississippi. I ask the gentleman to yield me the floor for a moment, that I may move an amendment for one of the little boys upon the floor, who has been here during a great part of the session, and is the best and most active boy in the House.

Mr. BRECKINRIDGE. I will yield to the gentleman for that purpose.

Mr. BROWN. Then I move to amend the resolution by adding thereto the following:

And that William Norman, who has been acting as page on the floor of the House of Representatives, be placed on the same footing with the regular pages and paid the same compensation, commencing on the 24th of March last.

I have put in the 24th of March because that was the day he came on the floor.

Mr. JOHNSON, of Tennessee. I should like to know how this additional page got in here, and how it happens that he is not provided for?

Mr. BROWN. He has been performing the duties of a page, and my amendment simply asks that he shall be paid.

Mr. JOHNSON. Who brought him in here? How is it that he is not paid as the other pages are?

Mr. BRECKINRIDGE. I will simply state to the House that the salary of the Sergeant-at-

Arms, of the Postmaster, and of the Doorkeeper is only $1,500—the same salary that is paid to the copying and engrossing clerks, and $300 less than you pay to the Chief Clerk under the Clerk of this House. I need not tell this House that the Sergeant-at-Arms disburses a million of dollars a year, and that his duties are more responsible and important than those of any other officer of the House, and yet he receives a less salary than the Clerk of the House. The object of this resolution is to raise the salaries of these officers to $1,800, which is the salary received by the Chief Clerk under the Clerk of the House. I move the previous question.

Mr. JONES, of Tennessee. I move to lay the resolution upon the table.

The question was put upon that motion, and it was decided in the negative.

So the House refused to lay the resolution upon the table.

The previous question was then seconded, and the main question ordered to be put.

The question was then taken upon the amendment, and it was agreed to.

The question recurred upon the resolution as amended, and being put, the resolution as amended was adopted.

Mr. BROWN, of Mississippi. I rise to a privileged question. I move to reconsider the vote by which the resolution was agreed to, and also move to lay the motion to reconsider upon the table.

The question was taken upon the latter motion, and it was agreed to.

Mr. GAMBLE. I am instructed by the Committee on Elections to offer the resolution which I send to the Clerk's desk; and if there be objection to it, I move to suspend the rules.

HOUR OF MEETING TO-MORROW.

Mr. DEAN. I rise to a privileged question. I move that when this House adjourns, it adjourn to meet at nine o'clock to-morrow.

Mr. JENKINS. I object to that motion.

Mr. CLINGMAN. I move to suspend the rules to enable the gentleman from New York to submit his motion.

The SPEAKER. There is a motion now pending to suspend the rules, made by the gentleman from Pennsylvania, [Mr. GAMBLE,] to enable him to offer the resolution which will now be read.

Mr. DEAN. I rise to a question of order, and my question of order is, that it is in order at all times to fix the time to which the House will adjourn without suspending the rules.

The SPEAKER. The Chair overrules the point of order raised by the gentleman from New York. The rule to which the gentleman refers allows the House to fix the day to which the House will adjourn, but not to change the hour.

Mr. DEAN. Then I move that the House do now adjourn.

Mr. McMULLIN. I move that the House take a recess until to-morrow morning at ten o'clock.

The SPEAKER. That motion cannot be entertained, for there is a motion pending that the House do now adjourn.

Mr. McMULLIN. I ask the gentleman from New York to withdraw his motion to enable me to submit the one I have indicated.

Mr. DEAN. I cannot withdraw it.

Mr. JOHNSON, of Tennessee. I imagine that if the House will agree, by universal consent, to meet at nine o'clock to-morrow, the gentleman from New York will withdraw his motion for the present.

[Cries of "Object!"]

The question was then taken on Mr. DEAN's motion, and on a division, there were—ayes 68, noes 75.

So the House refused to adjourn.

Mr. McMULLIN. I move that the House take a recess till to-morrow at ten o'clock.

The SPEAKER. The motion can only be entertained by unanimous consent.

Objection was made.

The question recurred on the proposition of Mr. GAMBLE to suspend the rules for the introduction of the following resolution from the Committee on Elections:

Resolved, That the Clerk of the House be directed to ascertain the expenses of the contested-election case for the eleventh Congressional district of Pennsylvania, necessarily incurred by the sitting member and contestant, and pay the same out of the contingent fund of the House; and that the Sergeant-at-Arms be authorized and directed to pay to Hendrick B. Wright the same per diem and mileage paid to members of this House, from the first day of the session to the 24 day of July inclusive.

Mr. LETCHER. I demand the yeas and nays upon the motion to suspend the rules.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. GAMBLE. With the consent of the House I will so modify my resolution as to leave out the second provision.

Objection was made.

The question was then taken, and the result was—yeas 60, nays 83; as follows:

YEAS—Messrs. Aiken, Ashe, Bragg, Busby, Chandler, Chastain, Churchwell, Clark, Cleveland, Curtis, George T. Davis, Dimmick, Edmundson, Florence, Floyd, Freeman, Gamble, Gaylord, Gentry, Gilmore, Hall, Hamilton, Sampson W. Harris, Hart, Hendricks, Henn, Holladay, Howard, Ingersoll, Robert W. Johnson, J. Glancy Jones, Preston King, Kurtz, McNair, McQueen, Morrison, Murray, Andrew Parker, Peaslee, Polk, Powell, Richardson, Riddle, Robbins, Ross, Schermerhorn, Schoolcraft, Schoolmaker, Scurry, Frederick P. Stanton, Richard H. Stanton, St. Martin, Strother, Sutherland, Thurston, Townshend, Walsh, Wilcox, and Wildrick—60.

NAYS—Messrs. Charles Allen, Allison, Averett, Babcock, Barrere, Babcock, Bowie, Bowne, J. H. Boyd, Brenton, Briggs, G. H. Brown, Buell, Burrows, Caldwell, Thompson Campbell, Carter, Chapman, Clingman, Cobb, Conger, Daniel, Dean, Disney, Dockery, Doty, Durkee, Eastman, Edgerton, Ewing, Faulkner, Goodenow, Goodrich, Grey, Hammond, Harper, Isham G. Harris, Haven, Hebard, Horsford, John W. Howe, Thomas Y. How, Jenkins, Daniel T. Jones, George W. Jones, George G. King, Kuhns, Landry, Letcher, Lockhart, Mann, Martin, McMullin, Meade, Miller, Millson, John Moore, Morehead, Newton, Outlaw, Samuel W. Parker, Pennington, Perkins, Phelps, Porter, Reed, Robie, Sackett, Scudder, David L. Seymour, Stanley, Benjamin Stanton, Alexander H. Stephens, Stuart, Thompson, Tuck, Walbridge, Wallace, Washburn, Watkins, Wells, and Woodward—83.

So the rules were not suspended.

Mr. DEAN. I ask the unanimous consent of the House to offer the following resolution:

Resolved, That when this House adjourns, it adjourn to meet at nine o'clock to-morrow morning.

Mr. POLK. I object.

Mr. DEAN. I move to suspend the rules.

Mr. STUART. Before that vote is taken, in order that we may have three hours to complete the necessary business of the House, I desire the unanimous consent of the House that the special order for the morning hour shall be dispensed with.

[Cries of "Agreed!" "Agreed."]

Mr. FICKLIN. I object.

Mr. DEAN. I then insist upon my motion to suspend the rules.

The question was taken, and (two thirds voting in the affirmative) the rules were suspended.

The question then recurred upon the adoption of the resolution, and being put it was carried in the affirmative, and the resolution was adopted.

Mr. DEAN. I move to reconsider the vote by which the resolution was adopted, and to lay the motion to reconsider on the table.

The question was put, and the latter motion was agreed to.

Mr. STUART. It is evident that if we are to dispose of all our business to-morrow morning, we must have at least three hours to do it in. I again ask the unanimous consent of the House to dispense with the rule which requires that we should devote one hour in the morning to the consideration of other business; and if it is objected to, I will move to suspend the rules.

Mr. KING, of New York. I object.

Mr. STUART. I move to suspend the rules, to enable me to submit that motion.

Mr. FICKLIN. Is it in order to move to suspend the rules?

The SPEAKER. It is in order.

Mr. FLORENCE. I rise to a question of order. We are now acting under a suspension of the rules during the morning hour, and I submit that it is not in order to move to suspend the rules to suspend the morning hour.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will inform the gentleman from Pennsylvania that what the House may do by a majority of two thirds, they may undo by the same majority.

The question was then put, and (two thirds voting in the affirmative) the rules were suspended.

Mr. STUART. I now submit my motion, that the rule which requires that we shall devote one hour in the morning to the reception of reports, be suspended.

The question was put, and the motion was agreed to.

REPORTING.

Mr. MANN. I ask the unanimous consent of the House to introduce the following resolution; and if it be not obtained, I will move to suspend the rules:

Resolved, That William W. Curran be, and he is hereby, appointed, from and after the present session of Congress, Reporter for the House of Representatives, with authority to associate six assistants; that his annual compensation shall be the same as that of the principal clerk in the Clerk's office of this House; and the compensation of the assistant reporters shall be the same as that of the assistant clerks in the Clerk's office; to be paid out of the contingent fund of the House: Provided, That before this resolution shall take effect the Clerk of the House shall have procured from John C. Rives such a modification of his contract for reporting and printing the proceedings and debates of the House as to relinquish, of the price now paid him, the sum of $3 50 per column.

Mr. JONES, of Tennessee. I object to that resolution. It is too important a resolution to be acted upon at this late stage of the session.

Mr. MANN. I move to suspend the rules.

Mr. FICKLIN. I demand the yeas and nays upon the motion to suspend the rules.

Mr. McMULLIN. I move that the House do now adjourn.

Mr. HENN. Upon that motion I demand the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. McMULLIN. I will withdraw the motion.

Mr. CARTTER. I renew the motion.

Mr. WALSH. I demand the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The question was then taken, and the result was—yeas 87, nays 61.

So the motion was agreed to, and the House adjourned till to-morrow, at nine o'clock, a. m.

IN SENATE.

TUESDAY, August 31, 1852.

On motion by Mr. HUNTER, the reading of the Journal was dispensed with.

CLASSIFICATION OF CLERKS.

On motion by Mr. HUNTER, the Senate proceeded to consider the resolution reported by him, from the Committee on Finance, the 17th instant, in relation to the classification and appointment of clerks in the Executive Departments of the Government; and it was agreed to, as follows:

Resolved, That the Secretary of the Treasury, of War, of the Navy, of the Interior, and the Postmaster General, be directed to report to the Senate, at the commencement of its next session, the number and classification of clerks which will be required in each bureau or division of his Department, upon the supposition that they are to be organized as follows: that is to say, into four classes, viz: No. 1, into which no new appointment is to be made of any person over eighteen years of age, and with a salary of $300 per annum. No. 2, with a salary each of $1,200. No. 3, with a salary each of $1,600; and No. 4, with a salary each of $2,000. The new appointments in each Department in classes 2, 3, and 4, to be made from the class immediately below it in that Department, and the members of class No. 1 to receive five per cent. additional salaries, to commence at the end of each year of additional service; and the other classes to receive three per cent. of like additional salaries for a similar additional service; but none to receive, by virtue of these allowances, a salary higher than the grade above him; and no additional salary to be given to any member of class No. 4 after his salary reaches $2,400. But the clerks in each Department to be subject to removal by his head.

Mr. HUNTER. The clerk of the Committee on Finance will be wanted to collect this information and put it in shape. I am therefore instructed by that committee to report the following resolution, which I ask may now be considered:

Resolved, That the clerk to the Committee on Finance, authorized by the resolution of the Senate of 22d December last, to be employed during the present session, be continued until the commencement of the next session, under the direction of said committee, at the rate of compensation which he now receives.

The resolution was considered by unanimous consent, and agreed to.

PRINTING OF DOCUMENTS.

Mr. HAMLIN, from the Committee on Printing, to which was referred the motion to print the report of the Postmaster General relative to the printing, binding, and advertising executed for or by order of that Department, reported "that the same be not printed;" and the report was concurred in.

He also, from the same committee, to which was referred the motion to print a memorial of a committee of the Corporation of the city of Washington, presented the 26th instant, reported "that the same be not printed;" and the report was concurred in.

ARMY APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. BRIGHT, from the Committee of Conference on the part of the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the bill "making appropriations for the support of the Army for the year ending the 30th of June, 1853," reported that they had met the conferees on the part of the House of Representatives, and after full and free conference, had agreed to recommend, and do recommend to their respective Houses, as follows:

That the House of Representatives do recede from their disagreement to the 2d, 7th, 12th, 14th, 15th, 19th, 22d, 23d, 24th, 25th, 26th, 28th, and 30th amendments of the Senate, and agree thereto.

That the House of Representatives do recede from their disagreement to the first amendment of the Senate, and agree to the same with an amendment, as follows: Page 1, in line 4, after the word "dollars," insert the following:

Provided, That the Commissary Department may use, in advance of the regular appropriations for the fiscal year ending 30th of June, 1854, $275,000 of said sum for said fiscal year.

That the House of Representatives do recede from their disagreement to the 3d amendment of the Senate, and agree to the same with an amendment, as follows: Page 1, in line 3, strike out the words, "three hundred," and insert in lieu thereof the words "two hundred and fifty."

That the House of Representatives do recede from their disagreement to the 16th amendment of the Senate, and agree to the same with amendments, as follows: Page 4, in line 16, after the word "report," insert the words "to Congress;" and in line 21, after the word "service," strike out all to the word "same," in line 25, inclusive.

That the House of Representatives do recede from their disagreement to the 17th amendment of the Senate, and agree to the same with an amendment, as follows: Page 5, in line 13, after the word "Mexico," strike out all to the end of the section.

That the House of Representatives do recede from their disagreement to the 21st amendment of the Senate, and agree to the same with amendments, as follows: Page 8, in line 15, strike out, after the word "State," to line 18, inclusive, and add at the end of the section:

Provided, That the same principles be applied in the settlement of the claims of the State of Alabama, and all other States, for moneys advanced in raising, subsisting, and transporting troops for the Mexican war."

And that the Senate do recede from its 5th, 6th, 8th, 10th, 11th, 13th, 18th, and 29th amendments.

The Senate proceeded to consider the report, and it was

Resolved, That the Senate do concur therein, and that the bill be amended accordingly.

POST ROADS BILL.

Mr. RUSK, from the Committee of Conference on the part of the Senate, on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the bill from the House of Representatives "to establish certain post roads," reported, that having met the Committee of Conference on the part of the House, they have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the House recede from their disagreement to the amendment of the Senate, No. 39, and agree to the same with an amendment, viz: Add at the end thereof, "Provided, That the contracts authorized by this section be to the lowest bidder, according to the provisions of the existing laws: And provided further, That the amount paid shall in no case exceed the amount of postage derived from the said mails."

That the Senate recede from its amendments, numbered 43, 44, 45, 46, and 49.

That the House recede from their disagreement to the amendments of the Senate, numbered 47, 48, 50, and 53; and

That there be added at the end of the word "Maine," "from South Paris, Maine, to Harrison, North Bridgeton, Bridgeton, West Bridgeton, to Fryeburg."

The Senate proceeded to consider the said report; and it was

Resolved, That they concur therein, and that the bill be amended accordingly.

FRAUDS ON THE REVENUE.

On motion by Mr. JAMES, the Senate proceeded to consider the following resolution, submitted by him yesterday:

Resolved, That a select committee, to consist of five members, be appointed by the President pro tempore, who shall be empowered to sit during the recess, at such times and places as they may deem necessary, and to examine under oath such persons as may be required; and generally to investigate the mode and manner of importations of merchandise into the United States, with a view of ascertaining whether any and what frauds have been committed or practiced against the revenue laws of the United States; and that said committee make report of their proceedings during the next session of Congress.

Mr. HALE. It seems to me that this is a very extraordinary resolution. We have extended the powers of one committee to sit during the recess, with which I did not find any particular fault, because it was an extraordinary case which attracted great attention. But here is a proposition to raise a special committee of five without any charges being made that we know of, with power to sit during the recess when and where they please. If this is to go on, the Senate will soon be in perpetual session, only instead of being at Washington altogether, we shall be traveling around the country in little squads of five and ten at the public expense. If anything is calculated to bring the proceedings of Congress into disrepute, it will be this mode of spinning out our sessions indefinitely; and instead of transacting the regular business of the session at Washington, traveling around the country at Government expense. I think we have gone as far as we ought to go. I hope the resolution will not be adopted.

Mr. STOCKTON. I propose to amend the resolution by striking out the words "by the President pro tempore," so that the committee may be appointed by the Senate.

Mr. HAMLIN. A word in relation to what has fallen from the Senator from New Hampshire. We have heard a great deal of talk throughout the country about frauds upon the revenue. This is a measure which is proposed, and I suppose is designed, by the Senator from Rhode Island for the purpose of making a thorough investigation, in order to ascertain whether there is any truth in these assertions, and if there be any, to apply a corrective. I hope that gentlemen who have talked so much about frauds on the revenue will interpose no objection against making such discoveries as shall answer the ends of justice.

Mr. HALE. I do not know whether there have been many rumors of frauds on the revenue or not; but I think if we pass this resolution, and allow Senators to be drawing pay during the recess, the country will talk, and with a great deal of justice, about frauds on the revenue. I shall simply content myself with calling for the yeas and nays upon the resolution of the Senator from Rhode Island.

The question was taken on Mr. STOCKTON's amendment, and the Chair announced that it was agreed to.

Mr. MASON. I call for a division.

The PRESIDENT. The Senator is aware that the rules expressly require that all committees shall be appointed by the Senate, unless by unanimous consent they are appointed by the Chair.

Mr. MASON. I withdraw my call.

Mr. CLARKE. I have but one word to say. Those persons who are interested in the true execution of the revenue laws, have believed that there have been, and continue to be, great frauds upon the Government in regard to the valuation of imported goods, and, consequently, in the amount of duties collected. You will recollect, sir, that at the last session, there was an act passed the better to enforce the revenue laws. The opinion prevails in various sections of the country, that there are frauds. It is disputed by others, and disbelieved by many. Now, what can be better, in order to avoid that complaint, than to investigate the subject and ascertain whether the charge is true or false? If the charge against the inefficiency of the present laws is correct, why not appoint such a committee? and when the committee shall have investigated the subject and shall have reported upon it at the next session, the question will be settled, and Congress will know whether any further legislation will be necessary to enforce the revenue laws. I hope the resolution of my colleague will be adopted.

Mr. MASON. Mr. President, that there are frauds committed upon the revenue, I do not entertain a doubt; and if frauds are not committed upon the revenue, I apprehend it is the only branch of the public service where they are not committed. But I do not know of any reason why a committee should be appointed to go abroad over the country, for the simple purpose of determining whether frauds have been committed upon the revenue. The scope of the resolution is, as I understand, to ascertain whether frauds of a peculiar character have not been committed—frauds which, in the opinion of the honorable Senator who presents it, may render it necessary to change the mode of imposing the duties from which the revenue is derived. It is to the ulterior object that I am opposed. Sir, this is but opening the way to attain the end which many Senators have in view, of changing the mode of imposing the duties from which the revenue of the country is derived. I know the views of the honorable Senator who offered this resolution. He has a theory of ascertaining the value of imported merchandise in a form which he has digested in his own mind, and the ulterior object of which, I think,—whatever may be his opinion,—will be to raise the standard of duties, after he has ascertained whether these frauds are committed. I know the Senator's views, for he did me the honor of conversing with me on the subject. They are certainly plausible, but they are theoretical, in my judgment. But, be that as it may, I would submit to the honorable Senator, and to others around him, whether this cannot just as well be ascertained by investigations made at the custom-houses as by the investigation of a committee, and whether the investigation of officers, who have the charge of these custom-houses, would not be better calculated to give us all the facts?

Sir, I am free to admit that on particular and extraordinary occasions—occasions that very seldom occur—it may be necessary for one or the other House of Congress to send a committee abroad; but I submit to the Senate that is a dangerous practice—a practice that may lead us we know not where. Committees should sit here, and should sit while the body to which they belong is in session, where the proceedings of the committees may pass under the supervision of the body to which they belong. I certainly have no distrust of the honorable Senator from Rhode Island—none in the world; but I speak of the general principle with regard to the emanation of committees from this body.

I have no desire to detain the Senate; but my objections commence at the very threshold of this scheme of changing the present mode of imposing the revenue of the country. It has been a most agitating subject—one that has divided in sentiment the people of the two great sections of this country; but I had thought that under a Democratic Administration, a standard had at last been obtained which would not be departed from—that if there were imperfections, we had better take the imperfections as they existed than attempt to change the whole system. Or if there be such imperfections as really require change, let us do it gradually, and in the ordinary mode. These investigations and inquiries can be made just as satisfactorily and just as certainly at the next session, or the succeeding session of Congress, by a Committee to sit here, as by sending one abroad of a peripatetic character. I submit also that it is too late in the session to consider the very grave and important questions that must arise under the investigations of this committee. It should have minute and specific instructions, if it is to be raised at all. I trust, therefore, that the Senate will not agree to the resolution.

Mr. JAMES. Mr. President, I am not disposed to discuss the merits of the question at this time; nor will I consume much of the time of the Senate in reply to my honorable friend from Virginia. Suffice it to say, however, that I am not for increasing duties on imports, but I am for carrying out the spirit of the law of 1846. It is a well-known fact, that while the laboring classes of this country—the mechanics, the artisans, and the agriculturists—pay all the duty imposed upon them by the law of 1846, those who consume luxuries—such as the finer qualities of broadcloth, the fine cassimeres, the silks, the laces, and articles of that character—pay little more than from fifty to seventy-five per cent. of what the law, administered according to its spirit, and honestly carried out, would impose upon them. All I ask is, that a committee may investigate the facts, and lay them before the Senate. Then the honorable Senator from Virginia can examine into the merits of the case; and whatever information may be brought here, I presume the Senate will act upon considerably.

I hope the resolution will pass. I have nothing more to say at this time.

Mr. HUNTER. This is an important subject. I believe that this practice of appointing committees to sit during the recess is a dangerous one. The resolution relates to a most important subject of legislation, perhaps the most important with which we have to deal. It becomes all-important, if we make a tribunal to collect facts, that it should be such a tribunal as would demand the universal respect and assent of the country. I have no doubt but that any committee appointed here for this purpose would command the respect of the country. But it would be a committee which would be divided in reference to party upon these questions, and there is no doubt that would influence and govern them to some extent in collecting the facts. It is impossible that it should be otherwise. But to avoid these influences, it seems to me that this investigation should be made by committees here while Congress is in session, while members around know what is passing and have the means of suggesting something, in order to make the examination fuller and fairer.

Sir, I desire to see the facts. I have no doubt that there have been frauds under all systems; and there will be frauds under any system which you may establish. But it is an immense power to confide to any committee, to allow them, during the recess, to go out and examine whom they please, and thus to shape the facts. There is no doubt but that the prepossessions of the committee will have some involuntary influence upon the mode in which they present those facts, and the manner of their investigations. I do not think it safe, therefore, to raise this committee. And I say this not in reference to the gentlemen who may be appointed on the committee, for I dare say, sir, you may get as fair a committee here as could be constituted in the country. These objections would apply to almost any committee, but they apply to a greater degree to a committee appointed during the recess than to one sitting here, when we would know what was going on, and could make suggestions and corrections if we found that the examination was taking a partial or improper course. For these reasons I cannot support the resolutions.

Mr. HALE. I call for the yeas and nays, as this question of extending our sessions indefinitely by platons is an important one.

YEAS—Messrs. Badger, Bayard, Bell, Borland, Brodhead, Brooke, Clarke, Clemens, Cooper, Davis, Dodge of Iowa, Geyer, Houston, James, Jones of Iowa, Mallory, Mangum, Meriwether, Miller, Norris, Smith, Spruance, Stockton, Wade, Walker, and Weller—26.
NAYS—Messrs. Adams, Bright, Butler, Chase, De Sausure, Foot, Hale, Hunter, Mason, Morton, Pearce, Rusk, Sumner, and Underwood—14.

So the resolution was agreed to.

The Senate accordingly proceeded to ballot for members of the committee, with the following result:

	Votes.		Votes.
Mr. James.....	43	Mr. Borland.....	2
Mr. Dawson.....	31	Mr. Mallory.....	2
Mr. Bright.....	26	Mr. Pratt.....	2
Mr. Bell.....	25	Mr. Walker.....	2
Mr. Shields.....	19	Mr. Adams.....	1
Mr. Hunter.....	14	Mr. Atchison.....	1
Mr. Rusk.....	11	Mr. Brodhead.....	1
Mr. Stockton.....	7	Mr. Chase.....	1

So Mr. JAMES, Mr. DAWSON, Mr. BRIGHT, Mr. BELL, and Mr. SHIELDS, constitute the committee.

NAVAL APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. MALLORY, from the Committee of Conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the bill "making appropriations for the naval service for the fiscal year ending the 30th June, 1853," reported that, having met, and after full and free conference, they have agreed to recommend, and do recommend, to their respective Houses as follows:

That the Senate recede from their amendments numbered 7, 11, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, 32, 33, 34, 35, 36, 39, and 42; and that the House recede from its disagreement to the amendments of the Senate numbered 1, 4, 5, 12, 37, 38, 40, 43, and 44; and that the two Houses agree to the 2d amendment of the Senate, amended as follows, to wit: "In the 9th and 10th lines of said amendment 'strike out the words 'during the late war with Mexico, and since that period,' and insert instead 'thereof, 'since the 28th of September, 1850; and 'in the 33d line, strike out 'twelve hundred,' and 'insert in lieu thereof 'one thousand.'"

And that the two Houses agree to the 3d amendment of the Senate with the following amendments: "In line 8, strike out 'fifteen hundred,' and insert 'one thousand; and in line 11, strike out 'nine,' and insert 'eight.'"

That the Senate recede from its 8th amendment; and that the two Houses agree to amend the clause mentioned in said Senate's amendment by striking out of the 11th and 12th lines the words "this House," and inserting in lieu thereof the word "Congress."

That the Senate recede from their 41st amendment, and that the two Houses agree to strike out of the second section all after the word "repealed," in the 8th line, and the whole of the third section.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the 45th amendment of the Senate, and that the two Houses agree to amend the said amendment by striking out of the 6th line the words, "and the city post office."

And that the House do recede from its disagreement to the 46th amendment of the Senate, and that the two Houses agree to amend the same by inserting in the first line thereof, after the word "enacted," the following, to wit: "That Robert Armstrong, the public printer, be, and he is hereby, directed to execute without delay the public printing ordered by either House of Congress since his election as public printer."

The PRESIDENT. Will the Senate agree to the report?

Mr. MORTON. I am willing to accede to the recommendation of the Committee of Conference, except as to that part of their report which recommends to the Senate to recede from their amendment for the repairs of the hospital and navy-yard at Pensacola. I am willing to agree to the report with regard to all the other amendments; and I wish to make some remarks in opposition to that portion of the report.

The PRESIDENT. It is not in order for the Senator to move to accept a portion of the report. The Senate can refuse to agree in the report, and notify the House, and ask for another conference.

Mr. BADGER. I beg leave to suggest that the Senate have repeatedly concurred in portions of reports of committees of conference, and declined to concur in the remainder of the report, and asked for a Committee of Conference upon the disagreement.

Mr. MILLER. I think the report is an entire thing. That is certainly the parliamentary law.

Mr. MORTON. I am not much of a parliamentarian myself, and I would therefore ask the Chair whether I understood him to decide that we must take the entire report—that we cannot accept a portion of it?

The PRESIDENT. The report is made by a Committee of Conference of the two Houses. The report has been brought here by the Senate's portion of the committee. A report of the same description has gone to the House. If the Senate disagrees to the report, the House is notified of it, and the Senate may ask for another conference. But we cannot take a part of the report and agree to that, and disagree to the residue. The report is one entire thing.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I wish to refer the Chair to a case. I am not positively certain that my recollection about it is right, but I am inclined to think it is. I understand these reports from committees of conference to be recommendations to the two Houses as to what they ought to do. Now, may we not say to the committee, "We will do so much of what you recommend, and refuse to do the rest?" The case to which I allude is this: Some three or four years ago, a proposition was offered by my friend from Wisconsin [Mr. WALKER] to amend the civil and diplomatic bill, by adding to it a provision for the government of New Mexico and California. It was agreed to by the Senate. It was agreed to by the House with an amendment, and the Senate refused to agree to the amendment of the House, and asked a conference. Everything else that was the subject of dif-faculty on the bill had been settled; portions of the reports of the committees of conference had been agreed to, and nothing was left but that provision. There was more than one committee of conference on that alone; and, finally, the Senate receded, just before daylight in the morning of the 4th of March, and saved the bill. That is my recollection. Therefore, I think that, according to precedent, it is in the power of the Senator from Florida to move to agree to the report of the Committee of Conference in regard to everything but this particular amendment, and to adhere to that amendment of the Senate.

The PRESIDENT. If such a course has ever been pursued, it is certainly unparliamentary. A report of a committee of conference is an entire thing, and it cannot be divided.

Mr. MALLORY. The objection made by my colleague is to that portion of the report of the Committee of Conference, which recommends that the Senate recede from the amendment providing for building a brick wall around the hospital and grounds at Pensacola. I know that it is absolutely necessary that that hospital should be improved. There is no hospital in the country in such a dilapidated condition. This is so evident, that I am confident at the next session of Congress the measure will pass, and, therefore, I would suggest to my colleague that he withdraw his objection.

Mr. MORTON. Notwithstanding the appeal that has been made by my colleague, I feel it to be my duty, as one of the Senators from Florida, to resist the striking out of the amendment of the Senate providing for the repair of the hospital at Pensacola. The amendment is not, as my colleague supposes, simply for the purpose of inclosing the hospital and hospital grounds by a brick wall; it goes beyond that. I have here a communication from the commandant of that yard, and also a communication from the surgeon of the hospital, impressing upon me the absolute necessity for its prompt repair. It is a reflection upon the Government to leave that hospital in such a dilapidated situation as it now is. I will merely read three lines of the communication of the commandant of the yard, Captain Tatnall of the Navy. After speaking of other improvements absolutely necessary for that yard, he uses this language:

"As regards the hospital, it is in such a state of disgraceful dilapidation, that I should be ashamed to offer it as a shelter to the sick of a foreign squadron. Were such an institution at the North, public attention would be called to it by the press as a national discredit; but it is out of sight here, and in a few more years, if continued thus to be neglected, it will sink into the sands."

I shall, therefore, if the motion be in order, move to agree to the report of the Committee of Conference with the exception of this amendment, and to insist on it, and ask for another conference.

The PRESIDENT. The Chair has already decided, that a particular portion of the report cannot be agreed to, and the remainder of the report disagreed to. The report is an entire thing.

Mr. BADGER. I mentioned to the Chair before, that I believed there were instances where a different course had been pursued.

The PRESIDENT. Whatever may have been done heretofore, this is the only correct course. If a different course has ever been pursued, it was informal, and incorrect.

Mr. BADGER. I am aware that the decision of the Chair is right. I merely wished to call to the attention of the Chair the fact, that the parliamentary course had been departed from, in order that the Chair might enforce it for the future.

The PRESIDENT. The parliamentary law is very clear on the subject, and the Chair is not aware that it has ever been departed from when he has occupied this seat.

The report of the Committee of Conference was agreed to.

PRESENTATION OF CREDENTIALS.

Mr. MASON presented the credentials of the Hon. ROBERT M. T. HUNTER, chosen a Senator by the Legislature of the State of Virginia for six years from the 4th day of March, 1853; which were read.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

A message from the House of Representatives was received by Mr. FORNEY, its Clerk, announcing that it agreed to the amendments of the Senate to the bill entitled "An act making appropriations for light-houses, light-boats, buoys, &c., and providing for the erection and establishment of the same, and for other purposes."

Also, that it agreed to the report of the Committee of Conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the bill "to establish certain post roads."

Also, that it had passed the bill from the Senate for the relief of Z. F. Johnston; and a joint resolution relating to the printing of Congress during the recess.

Also, that it had passed a resolution to suspend the 17th joint rule of the two Houses, so far as to authorize the presentation of the bill from the House of Representatives making an appropriation for light-houses, light-boats, buoys, &c., and providing for the erection and establishment of the same, and for other purposes; also, the bill from the Senate to constitute Alton, in the State of Illinois, a port of delivery; and the bill to establish certain post roads.

SUSPENSION OF RULE.

The Senate proceeded to consider the resolution from the House, to suspend the 17th joint rule, (which prevents bills passed on the last day of the session being sent to the President of the United States,) so far as relates to the bills above named; and the resolution having been amended, on motion, by adding thereto "also the bills numbered H. R., No. 220, 240, 241, and 314," [the Army, Navy, and Post Office appropriation bills, and the post roads bill,] was agreed to.

A message from the House of Representatives was subsequently received by Mr. FORNEY, its Clerk, announcing that it agreed to the amendment of the Senate to the resolution of the House for the suspension of the 17th joint rule.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

A message from the House of Representatives was received by Mr. FORNEY, its Clerk, announcing that it agreed to the report of the Committee of Conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the bill entitled "An act making appropriations for the support of the Army for the year ending 30th of June, 1853."

Also, that it agreed to the report of the Committee of Conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the bill entitled "An act making appropriations for the naval service for the year ending June 30, 1853."

Also, to the report of the Committee of Conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the bill "making appropriations for the service of the Post Office Department during the fiscal year ending the 30th June, 1853."

SUSPENSION OF RULE.

The message also announced that the House had passed a resolution for the suspension of the 17th joint rule, so far as relates to all bills passed before half past ten o'clock this day.

The PRESIDENT. The Chair will call the attention of the Senate to the fact, that the following resolution has been received from the House of Representatives:

Resolved, (with the concurrence of the Senate,) That the 17th joint rule of the two Houses be suspended on all bills passed by both Houses up to the hour of ten and a half, a. m., this day.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I wish to call the attention of the Senate to the phraseology of that resolution. I think it is a very unusual one. Instead of suspending the rule in regard to particular bills, it suspends the rule on all bills passed up to a certain hour.

Mr. BADGER. I call the Senator to order. We have at this very session adopted a rule that a motion to suspend the 16th and 17th joint rules shall, at all times, be in order, be immediately considered, and be decided without debate.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I suppose I can answer my friend from North Carolina.

Mr. BADGER. I was only stating the rule.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I hope I may be allowed to say to the Senate, that this resolution is entirely different from similar resolutions which have been passed at previous sessions. We usually pass resolutions suspending the rule as to a particular bill. This is general as to time.

Mr. BADGER. I call the Senator to order.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. My statement is made.

The resolution of the House was concurred in.

HON. DAVID L. YULEE.

On motion by Mr. MORTON, the Senate proceeded to consider the following resolution submitted by him yesterday:

Resolved, That there be paid, out of the contingent fund of the Senate, to Hon. DAVID L. YULEE, a sum equal to the amount of mileage and per diem compensation of a Senator from the commencement of the present session to the 27th instant, the day on which the Senate decided that the Hon. STEPHEN R. MALLORY, whose seat in the Senate was claimed by him, was duly elected a Senator from the State of Florida.

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. President, I cannot vote for this resolution. I know it is said that it has been customary heretofore, both in this branch of Congress and in the other House, to allow a contestant for a seat the same compensation as a regular member. There are some cases where I have great regard for precedents, but I am not bound by precedents exclusively in anything, and if it has been the case heretofore, it has, in my humble opinion, been wrong, and we should not pursue that wrong any further. If a man who brings his case in a court of justice fails to recover, he is taxed with the costs from the commencement of the suit to the time of the rendering of judgment. The fact that a man who claims a seat in this body is rejected, is prima facie evidence at least, that he had no sufficient ground for contesting the seat.

I have no unkind feelings towards the claimant here. I am not going to consider the propriety or impropriety of his claim to a seat on this floor, but he has made a claim which no Senator could be found to vote for; and simply because he thought proper to set up a claim for which not one Senator could be found to vote, we are to pay him mileage and per diem compensation. You might just as well attempt to give mileage and compensation to a man who is around this city, whom I have seen, who presents a claim upon this body for damages sustained by reason of false imprisonment; and he speaks of annihilating this Senate unless we pass his claim. I think that under the circumstances, he may be as much entitled to pay and mileage as this claimant here. If we establish it as a universal principle that we will allow a claimant to a seat here, mileage and compensation, may not the individual to whom I refer, instead of claiming for damages for false imprisonment, set up a claim to the seat of one of us here, and could we not with as much propriety, under those circumstances, vote for paying him mileage and compensation? That individual undoubtedly has been incarcerated at the instance of the Senate, and, as acknowledged by many, unjustly. He therefore seems to have some claim. I think this is all wrong, and I therefore move to lay the resolution on the table.

Mr. BRODHEAD. I hope the Senator will not make a speech on one side and then move to lay the resolution on the table, cutting of a reply.

Mr. ADAMS. I withdraw the motion.

Mr. MORTON. I find that the resolution which I have introduced will lead to a protracted discussion, and I am unwilling to put it in jeopardy by forcing it to a vote at this time. I move, therefore, that for the present it lie on the table.

The motion was agreed to.

RAILROAD IN ARKANSAS.

Mr. BORLAND. I am directed by the Committee on Public Lands, to which was yesterday referred the bill from the House, "granting the right of way and making a grant of land to the States of Arkansas and Missouri, to aid in the construction of a railroad from a point on the Mississippi opposite the mouth of the Ohio river, via Little Rock, to the Texas boundary, near Fulton, in Arkansas, with branches to Fort Smith and the Mississippi river," to report it back without amendment, and recommend its passage. I wish to ask for its consideration now.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I object. The PRESIDENT. One objection will not prevent its being taken up, but it requires a majority to consider the bill at this time.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I objected to making the report; and I ask if the Senator can make the report now, after the morning hour has expired, without obtaining consent from the Senate?

The PRESIDENT. That is not necessary.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I thought that had been the practice.

The PRESIDENT. The report has been received, and the question now is on the motion to take up the bill.

The motion was not agreed to.

EXECUTIVE BUSINESS.

Mr. BRIGHT. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of Executive business.

Mr. HOUSTON. I hope the honorable Senator will withdraw his motion in order to allow me to make a report.

Mr. BRIGHT. I cannot withdraw the motion.

Mr. HOUSTON. The report I wish to make is from a special committee. I believe it is a privileged question.

The PRESIDENT. The Chair cannot receive the report unless the Senator from Indiana withdraws his motion.

Mr. BRIGHT. I feel it to be my duty to persist in the motion.

The motion was agreed to.

The Senate accordingly proceeded to the consideration of Executive business, and after some time spent therein the doors were reopened.

SELECT COMMITTEE OF INVESTIGATION.

Mr. HOUSTON. I wish to make a report.

The report was read, as follows:

"The Select Committee appointed by the Senate on the 6th instant to investigate frauds, bribery, &c., entered at once upon their duties, by calling witnesses before them, and instituting careful inquiry into several cases of alleged or supposed fraudulent transactions on the part of persons in the employment of the Government.

"The short time remaining from the day when these investigations were begun until the close of the session (less than a month) has necessarily restricted them within narrow limits—alike in respect to the number of cases and to the number of witnesses examined.

"Several cases of fraud and gross impropriety alleged against persons in the employment of the Government are before the committee. For want of time, however, only two have been so far investigated as to afford any definite development of their character, and the examination of them has not been completed. Without undertaking, therefore, to make any elaborate report of what they have done, the committee beg leave to submit the testimony they have taken in the two cases referred to, and ask that it be printed. And believing that the public interest will be protected and promoted by further investigation of these two cases, and many others they believe to exist, they ask leave to prosecute their inquiries during the recess, and to resume their sittings at the next session of Congress."

Mr. HOUSTON. I ask that the report be adopted, and that the testimony be printed.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I wish to state, that the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. Brooks] and myself, who were members of the committee, thought it improper to print any of the evidence, until the whole case was brought to a close.

Mr. BADGER. The report, if I understand it, states that the examination has not been completed with reference to any one case. Am I correct in that?

Mr. HOUSTON. There are two cases which have been nearly completed.

Mr. BADGER. I understand that the report states expressly, that the examination has not been completed in any case. If the examination has not been completed in any case, it is certainly improper to print any part of the evidence.

Mr. HOUSTON. We have not been able to get along with more than two cases; but as the public mind is demanding something, we propose to give them all the testimony we have got.

Mr. BADGER. I object to the consideration of the report at this time.

The PRESIDENT. Then it cannot be considered.

Mr. HOUSTON. As the report cannot be considered now, I ask leave to withdraw it.

Leave was granted.

OBITUARY NOTICES OF HENRY CLAY.

Mr. HAMLIN. I offer the following resolution, which I ask may now be considered:

Resolved, That the Secretary of the Senate, Clerk of the House of Representatives, and the Clerk of the Printing Committee, be, and they hereby are, authorized to audit the accounts for printing and binding the obituary notices of the death of Henry Clay, ordered by the Senate, and to pay the same out of the contingent fund of the Senate.

I desire to say, that by special vote the Senate has ordered these obituary notices to be printed. They are now beginning to be delivered, and unless this resolution be adopted, they cannot be paid for.

The resolution was agreed to.

CHEAP OCEAN POSTAGE.

A message was received from the President of the United States, by Mr. M. P. FILLMORE, his secretary, transmitting, in answer to a resolution of the Senate of the 21st instant, requesting information in respect to foreign postal arrangements and cheap ocean postage, a report of the Secretary of State, and the documents by which it was accompanied.

The message was referred to the Committee on the Post Office and Post Roads, and ordered to be printed.

TONNAGE OF THE UNITED STATES.

REPORTS FROM COMMITTEES.

Mr. MALLORY, from the Committee on Naval Affairs, to which was referred a report of the Secretary of the Navy on the comparative value of anthracite and bituminous coals, and resolutions of the Legislature of Florida on the same subject, submitted a report, which was ordered to be printed.

Mr. SHIELDS, from the Committee on Military Affairs, to which were referred sundry memorials and petitions of officers, clerks, and others employed in the civil and military departments of the United States in Mexico, during the late war with that Republic, submitted a report.

The Senate proceeded to consider the said report, and in concurrence therewith, it was Ordered, That the committee be discharged from the further consideration of the subject.

Mr. DOUGLAS, from the Committee on Territories, to which the following bills from the House of Representatives were referred, reported them severally without amendment:

An act authorizing the Governor of the Territory of New Mexico to call an extra session of the Legislative Assembly of said Territory, should the same be deemed necessary and expedient;

An act to authorize the legislative authority of the several Territories to control the appropriations to be made by Congress for the support of the government of said Territories;

An act making an appropriation for the completion of the public buildings in the Territory of Minnesota;

An act to amend an act entitled "An act to establish the territorial government of Oregon," approved August 14, 1848; and

An act to provide for additional clerks, and extend the sessions of the Legislative Assembly of the Territory of New Mexico.

On motion by Mr. SHIELDS, it was Ordered, That the unfinished business in the hands of the committee be returned to the files of the Senate.

EXECUTIVE REPORTS.

On motion by Mr. MASON, it was Ordered, That the report of the Secretary of State, the report of the Secretary of the Treasury, the report of the Secretary of War, the report of the Secretary of the Navy, the report of the Secretary of the Interior, the report of the Postmaster General, and the report of the Attorney General, communicating, in compliance with a resolution of the Senate, information respecting the clerks employed in their respective Departments and Offices, be printed.

STANSBURY'S REPORT.

On motion by Mr. DODGE, of Iowa, it was Ordered, That the head of the Topographical Bureau be allowed the number of Stansbury's Report which was assigned to him by the original resolution on that subject.

OWEN'S REPORT.

On motion by Mr. DODGE, of Iowa, it was Ordered, That, instead of the distribution of Owen's Report heretofore ordered, there be furnished to the General Land Office one hundred copies, to the Smithsonian Institution one hundred copies, and to Dr. Owen two hundred copies.

NAVY-YARDS.

Mr. SOULE submitted the following resolution; which was considered by unanimous consent, and agreed to:

Resolved, That the Secretary of the Navy be requested to report, at an early day of the next session, the amount of money expended on the several navy-yards of Gosport, Washington, Philadelphia, Brooklyn, Charlestown, Portsmouth, and Kittery, specifying the amount expended for the purchase of the original sites, and for the additional land subsequently purchased for the several navy-yards above mentioned; and also to state the amount of money expended in erecting all the buildings thereon.

MARGARET L. WORTH.

A message from the House of Representatives was received by Mr. FORNEY, its Clerk, announcing that it insisted on its amendment to the bill for the relief of Margaret L. Worth; that it asked a conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses; and that it had appointed Mr. POLK, Mr. HARRIS of Tennessee, and Mr. GOODENOW, a Committee of Conference on their part.

The Senate proceeded to consider the amendment to the said bill insisted on by the House of Representatives, and it was Resolved, That the Senate insist on its disagreement to the said amendment, and agree to the conference asked by the House of Representatives.

And Mr. STOCKTON, Mr. BORLAND, and Mr. DAVIS, were appointed the committee on the part of the Senate.

ADJOURNMENT SINE DIE.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I move that a committee be appointed to wait upon the President of the United States, and inform him that we have closed our legislative business, and are now ready to adjourn.

The motion was agreed to.

It was ordered, that the PRESIDENT pro tempore appoint the committee; and Mr. UNDERWOOD, Mr. PRATT, and Mr. BAYARD, were appointed.

The committee accordingly retired, and in a short time they returned; when

Mr. UNDERWOOD said: Mr. President, the committee appointed by the Senate to wait upon the President of the United States have performed the duty assigned them. We informed the President that the Senate had concluded its labors, and was now ready to adjourn, unless he had some further communication to make. The response of the President was, that he had no further communication to make, but to tender his congratulations to the Senate upon the termination of their tedious labors.

Mr. MANGUM offered the following resolution; which was unanimously agreed to:

Resolved, That the thanks of the Senate be given to the Hon. WILLIAM R. KING, President of the Senate pro tempore, for the dignity, ability, and impartiality with which he has discharged the duties of the Chair.

The hour of twelve having arrived—

The PRESIDENT arose and addressed the Senate as follows:

GENTLEMEN OF THE SENATE: The labors of this long and fatiguing session are now brought to a close. Before I adjourn the Senate, I will beg leave to say, that I have endeavored, to the utmost of my ability, to discharge faithfully, honestly, and impartially, the duties which they were pleased to devolve upon me in elevating me to this honorable position. I am aware that on some occasions, probably, I have given cause for complaint on the part of some who supposed they were entitled to the floor, when it had been assigned to others. I will take this occasion to say, that, on all such contests I have endeavored to give the floor to the individual the sound of whose voice first reached my ear, as it is utterly impossible that I can see all the Senators when they first rise. If, on any occasion, I have given any dissatisfaction, it is the cause of true and heartfelt regret.

I beg you, gentlemen, to accept my sincere thanks for the unanimous vote that has just been passed, approving of my conduct. I shall endeavor on all occasions, in whatever situation I may be placed, to act in such a manner as to have the approbation of my own conscience, and I trust of all generous and disinterested friends.

The Senate of the United States stands adjourned sine die.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

TUESDAY, August 31, 1852.

The House met at nine o'clock, a. m. Prayer by the Rev. C. M. BUTLER.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk informs the Chair that it has been impossible for him to make out a full Journal of the proceedings of yesterday.

Mr. CHANDLER. I move to dispense with the reading of the Journal.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. CLARK. I beg leave to make a report from the Committee of Conference upon the post route bill.

Mr. COBB. I ask the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. CLARK] to give way. You all know that the civil and diplomatic bill is hung up here upon a proposition made by me yesterday, to reconsider the vote by which it was passed.

Mr. JONES, of Tennessee. The gentleman can hold on to his motion.

Mr. COBB. I rise to a privileged question.

The SPEAKER. There is a privileged question pending to make a report from a Committee of Conference.

The report from the Committee of Conference upon the post route bill was then read, as follows:

That the Committee of Conference on the part of the two Houses upon the disagreeing votes upon the bill for establishing post roads having met and fully and freely conferred, agree to recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the House recede from its disagreement to Senate amendment No. 39, and agree to the same with an amendment, to wit: Add at the end thereof, Provided, That the contracts authorized by this section be let to the lowest bidder, according to the provisions of the existing laws: And provided further, That the amount paid shall in no case exceed the amount of postage derived from the said mails. That the Senate recede from amendments numbered 43, 44, 45, 46, and 49.

And that the House recede from its disagreement to Senate amendments numbered 47, 48, 50, and 53.

That there be added at the end of Maine, "from south Paris, Maine, to Harrison, North Bridgton, Bridgton, West Bridgton, to Fryeburgh."

THOS. J. RUSK,
GEO. E. BADGER,
SOLON BORLAND,
On the part of the Senate.

LINCOLN CLARK,
S. G. HAVEN,
W. P. HALL,
On the part of the House.

Mr. CLARK. I will simply state that this report rejects those sections most obnoxious to the House, especially those authorizing marshals to seize packages, &c. I call the previous question upon the report.

Mr. CLEVELAND. I wish to inquire of the gentleman from Iowa, whether those amendments in regard to the revision of the penal law are all retained?

Mr. CLARK. They remain.

Mr. KING, of New York. I desire to have the sections read, that we may have an opportunity to know how the bill stands.

The SPEAKER. They were all read yesterday.

Mr. KING. The House rejected nearly the whole of them. My object in wishing the whole report read is, that we may know what they report to adopt, and what they report to reject, and without reading all the sections we cannot possibly know. We can know nothing from the numbers.

The SPEAKER. The amendments, for the purpose of having them enrolled, were left up to the latest moment in the Clerk's office, where they are now. They will be sent for.

Mr. CLINGMAN. I move to dispense with the further reading of the amendments.

Mr. KING. There are one or two sections quite objectionable.

Mr. WASHBURN. I would ask the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. CLARK] if he can tell us what portions of the amendments in the printed bill are retained, and what rejected?

Mr. CLARK. The 43d, 44th, 45th, 46th, and 49th amendments of the Senate are rejected, comprising the following sections, viz:

43d amendment.

"Sec. 6. And be it further enacted, That it shall not be lawful for any person other than the captain or commander of such ship or vessel, to carry or transport any letter or packet, or parcel containing letters, on board of any ship or vessel which shall sail from or be bound to any port or place in the United States, at or within three miles of which there shall be any post office of the United States; and all passengers and other persons on board such ship or vessel shall deliver all letters, and packages, and parcels containing a letter or letters, to such captain or commander, as soon as practicable after the receipt thereof, or after their arrival on board such ship or vessel; and for every violation of this provision, a penalty of one hundred dollars is hereby imposed, to be recovered by presentment, by information or qui tam action, one half for the use of the informer, and one half for the use of the Post Office Department. And it shall be the duty of such captain or commander, within twenty-four hours after his arrival at any port of the United States, within three miles of which there shall be a post office, to deliver all letters, and packages and parcels containing letters, in his custody, power, or control, into the post office at or nearest said port; and every such captain or commander who shall refuse or willfully neglect to deliver the same, as aforesaid, shall forfeit the sum of five hundred dollars, and he shall also forfeit double the amount of postage which would have been chargeable on such letters if so delivered as aforesaid, either or both of which may be recovered in any court having cognizance thereof, one half of which shall be for the use of the party prosecuting for the same, and the other half for the use of the Post Office Department."

44th amendment.

"Sec. 7. And be it further enacted, That any proprietor, member, or agent of any express company, or other company engaged in the transportation of packages or parcels for hire, or any other person engaged in such transportation, whether as principal or agent, or temporarily or otherwise, who shall carry or cause to be carried, in violation of any act of Congress, upon or over any post road, or between any ports or places within the United States, or between any port in the United States and any port in any foreign country between which the mails of the United States are carried, any letter or communication in writing, or shall knowingly carry or cause to be carried any package or parcel containing any letter or letters, or other paper or papers in writing, or partly written and partly printed, conveying information of any kind whatever, shall, in addition to the penalties by this act, or at any time heretofore prescribed for such offense, be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and on conviction thereof, shall be subject to imprisonment for a term not exceeding three months, and to pay a fine not exceeding five hundred dollars for every such offense."

45th amendment:

"Sec. 8. And be it further enacted, That every contractor for carrying the mails of the United States, by land or water, and every agent or employee of such contractor who shall knowingly transport over all or any portion of the route of said contractor, any proprietor, member, agent, or messenger of any express company, or any person engaged in the transportation of parcels or packages for hire, while such contractor shall know or have good reason to believe that such proprietor, member, agent, messenger, or person, carries or is engaged in carrying letters, or parcels or packages containing a letter or letters, on the route of said contractor or any part thereof, in violation of any law of the United States, or shall knowingly carry any boxes, bags, trunks, packages, or parcels, belonging to or in the custody of such proprietor, member, agent, messenger, or persons which he shall know or have reason to suspect contains any letter or letters, such contractor shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and on conviction thereof shall be liable to a fine not exceeding one year's pay of such contractor; and the Postmaster General shall have power, upon such conviction, by an instrument in writing under his hand and seal, to declare the contract for the transportation of the mail by such contractor null and void, from such time as he may designate in such instrument."

46th amendment:

"Sec. 9. And be it further enacted, That in respect to any moneys which have come or shall hereafter come into the possession or custody of any of the agents of the Post Office Department, or any of the officers of the United States, or shall have been paid to the order of the Postmaster General, as provided in the second section of the act entitled 'An act to amend the act entitled 'An act to reduce the rates of postage, to limit the use and correct the abuse of the franking privilege, and for the prevention of frauds on the revenues of the Post Office Department, passed 3d day of March, 1845,' approved March 1st, 1847,' it shall be lawful for the Postmaster General to receive all such information and statements, under oath or otherwise, from the special agents of the Department, the claimants, and all other persons, as he may deem proper, whether the same would or would not be competent evidence in a court of justice; and he may, after having given to the claimants, by publishing the same as often as once a week for three months in such and so many public newspapers as he may direct, a notice to come in and substantiate their claims, make an order for the payment thereof to such person or persons, and in such proportions as he may deem just and proper, notwithstanding there may be no certain conclusive evidence of the ownership of the same; and when such order shall be examined, and the same approved by the Attorney General, by an instrument under the hand of such Attorney General, such moneys shall be distributed according to such order."

49th amendment:

"Sec. 12. And be it further enacted, That the Postmaster General be authorized to contract or make other arrangements for the transportation of mails of the United States through any foreign country, and also for their transportation by such transient or other vessels as may be running between ports of the United States and foreign ports, or between foreign ports, in cases where there are no contracts or arrangements therefor, and to provide for the collection, by prepayment or otherwise, of such postages as may be due to the United States on such letters and other mailable matter as may be sent under such arrangements and contracts, either in the United States or at such foreign ports, and for that purpose to use and employ as agents the several consuls of the United States, or such other persons as he may think fit: Provided, That no arrangement shall be made which will violate the laws prevailing in such foreign ports or countries, or any treaty of the United States, and that the whole compensation to be paid for the transportation of such letters and mailable matter, shall in all cases be so limited by the terms of such contracts or arrangements, as not to exceed the whole amount of the postage chargeable upon the letters and mailable matter carried under the same."

Mr. KING. Now the gentleman will please read those which the committee have adopted.

Mr. CLARK then read the following sections, which were retained.

39th amendment:

"Sec. 2. And be it further enacted, That the Postmaster General be, and he is hereby, authorized to enter into a contract for the transportation of the United States mail on board of the steam vessels which at present ply regularly between Boston, in the State of Massachusetts, and Halifax, in Nova Scotia, upon such terms as may appear to him reasonable."

The Committee of Conference add the following to the above:

"Provided, That the contracts authorized by this section be let to the lowest bidder, according to the provisions of existing laws: And provided further, That the amount paid shall in no case exceed the amount of postage derived from the said mails."

47th amendment:

"Sec. 10. And be it further enacted, That the Postmaster General may from time to time, by and with the advice and consent of the President, make any arrangements which may be deemed just and expedient, for allowing the mails of Canada, or of any other Province, State, or country adjoining the United States, to be carried or transported at the expense of the Province, State, or country to which such mails belong, over any part or portion of the territory of the United States, from one point in the Province, State, or country to which such mails belong, to any other point in the same, upon obtaining the same privileges for the transportation of the mails of the United States through the Province, State, or country to which such privilege shall be granted: Provided, That such privileges may at any time be annulled by the President of the United States, or by joint resolution of the two Houses of Congress, from and after the expiration of one month next succeeding the day on which the notice of the act of the President or of the joint resolution of the two Houses shall be given to the chief executive officer or head of the Post Office Department of the Province, State, or country, whose privilege is to be thereby annulled."

48th amendment:

"Sec. 11. And be it further enacted, That every mail of any Province, State, or country, having the privilege authorized to be granted in and by the next preceding section, shall, while in the territories of the United States, be deemed and taken to be a mail of the United States, so far as to make any violation thereof or any depredation thereon, or any act or offense in respect thereto or any part thereof, which would be punishable under the existing laws of the United States, in case the same had been a mail or part of a mail of the United States, an offense of the same grade and punishable in the same manner and to the same extent as though the said mails were those of the United States; and in any indictment for such act or offense, the said mails or any part thereof may be alleged to be, and on the trial of any such indictment they shall be deemed and held to be, mails or parts of mails of the United States."

50th amendment:

"Sec. 13. And be it further enacted, That the Postmaster General shall be, and he is hereby, authorized to provide and furnish to all postmasters and other persons applying and paying therefor suitable letter envelopes, with such water marks or other guards against counterfeits as he may deem expedient, and with one or more suitable postage stamps, with such device and of such denominations and value as he may direct, printed or impressed thereon, which envelopes shall be sold at the cost of procuring and furnishing the same, as near as may be, with the addition of the value or denomination of the postage stamps so printed or impressed thereon or attached thereto as aforesaid; and letters, when inclosed in such envelopes, with postage stamps printed or impressed thereon, (the postage stamp or stamps in every such case being of the value, denomination, or amount required to prepay the postage which would be chargeable on such letters and envelopes, if sent by mail, to the place of their destination, under the provisions of the laws then in force, and such stamps and envelopes not having been used before), shall pass in the mails as prepaid letters; and all letters inclosed in such envelopes as shall be provided and furnished by the Postmaster General, as first in this section prescribed, and with postage stamps thereon as aforesaid, (and such postage stamps on such envelopes being equal in value and amount to the rates of postage to which such letters would be liable, if sent by mail, and such postage stamps and envelopes not having been used before), may be sent, conveyed, and delivered otherwise than by post or mail, notwithstanding any prohibition thereof under any existing law: Provided, That the said envelope shall be duly sealed, or otherwise firmly and securely closed, so that such letter cannot be taken therefrom without tearing or destroying such envelope, and the same duly directed and addressed, and the date of such letter, or of the receipt or transmission thereof to be written or stamped, or otherwise appear on such envelope."

53d amendment:

"Sec. 15. And be it further enacted, That all fines and penalties imposed for any violation of any law relating to the Post Office Department shall, when collected or recovered, be paid into the Treasury to the credit of the United States, for the use of the Post Office Department, excepting, however, such part thereof as may by law belong to the party informing or prosecuting for the same."

Mr. KING. There was a section making it obligatory upon the Postmaster General to put in operation certain routes.

Mr. CLARK. The first one was adopted.

Mr. HALL. Section second, which provided for the transportation of the mail from Boston to Halifax in steamers, was adopted with an amendment. The amendment requires that the contract shall be let to the lowest bidder; and it provides further that no more shall be paid for transporting the mail, in any event, than the revenues arising from those mails. There was an amendment providing for paying the contractor for carrying the United States mails between foreign ports. That was rejected. Then the last section, providing for the carrying of a daily mail from Louisville to Cairo, &c., was adopted.

The House was then divided on seconding the previous question, and there were—ayes 51, noes 9; no quorum voting.

Mr. DEAN. I move that there be a call of the House.

The question was put, and the motion was agreed to.

The roll was then called, and 135 members answered to their names.

Mr. DEAN. I move that all further proceedings under the call be dispensed with.

The question was taken, and the motion was agreed to.

Mr. HALL. I insist upon the regular order of business.

The SPEAKER. The question is upon seconding the demand for the previous question.

The previous question then received a second, and the main question was ordered to be put.

The question was then taken upon agreeing to the report of the committee, and it was decided in the affirmative.

CIVIL AND DIPLOMATIC BILL.

Mr. COBB. I will not detain the House by any lengthy remarks. Yesterday, under a sense of duty to myself, as well as a sense of duty which I considered that I owed to my country, I took action contrary to my will, and in regard to an amendment to the civil and diplomatic bill. I now call up the motion I then made to reconsider the vote by which the civil and diplomatic bill was passed.

Mr. LETCHER. I move to lay that motion upon the table.

Mr. COBB. Will the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. LETCHER] wait until he gets the floor before he makes that motion?

[Cries of "Order!" "Order!"]

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Alabama will confine his remarks to the question under consideration.

Mr. COBB. Yesterday when the proposition before the House was to agree with the amendments proposed by the Committee of Conference upon that bill I withheld my vote, hoping that there would be men enough found in this House who, believing that the amendments were right, would sustain the report. I found, however, when the vote was about to be announced, that it took myself and one other to sustain the measure. I took upon myself then the responsibility of voting for the amendments, although it was the bitterest pill I ever took in my life, with a view to keep the civil and diplomatic bill alive, that there might not be the probability of its being entirely lost, relying, as I did, upon you, Mr. Speaker, to come to the rescue, as you have in former cases when the country was in danger. I believed you would give the casting vote and sustain the amendments. The bill as a whole I could not agree to, although there are provisions in it for which I could most cordially vote. I felt it my duty to sustain that bill by giving it my vote, although my judgment and my feelings were against it.

This is all I desire to say, and I withdraw the motion to reconsider.

Mr. HALL moved to reconsider the vote by which the report of the Committee of Conference upon the post route bill was agreed to, and also to lay the motion to reconsider upon the table; which latter motion was agreed to.

Mr. JONES, of Tennessee, moved to reconsider the vote by which the report of the Committee of Conference upon the civil and diplomatic bill was agreed to, and also to lay the motion to reconsider upon the table; which latter motion was agreed to.

ARMY APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. HOUSTON. I wish to make a report from the Committee of Conference upon the Army appropriation bill. But before I do that, I will thank my colleague [Mr. COBB] for his patriotic feelings in saving the civil and diplomatic bill; but I was satisfied that the bill was in no danger, and that there was not a single individual in this House, who would have been willing to defeat that bill, if it had depended upon his single vote.

I move the previous question upon the report which I present from the Committee of Conference on the Army bill.

Mr. JOHNSON, of Tennessee. I was in hopes that my friend [Mr. HOUSTON] was not so unkind as to strip his colleague [Mr. COBB] and the Speaker of the distinguished honor of saving the country when it was in a great crisis. [Laughter.]

The previous question was seconded, and the main question was ordered to be put.

[Mr. HENN, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, here reported as correctly enrolled "An act for the relief of Z. F. Johnston;" which thereupon received the signature of the Speaker.]

The report of the Committee of Conference on the Army appropriation bill was then read, as follows:

The Committee of Conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the bill (H. The Committee of Conference further recommended that the House of Representatives do recede from their disagreement to the following amendments of the Senate, and agree to the same with amendments, as follows:

1st amendment. After the following Senate amendment—

"For subsistence, $1,047,185"—

insert the following:

3d amendment. The Senate propose to amend the following clause, by striking out "two hundred and twenty-five" and insert "three hundred." The committee recommend to agree to the same by amending, by striking out "three hundred" and substituting "two hundred and fifty," so that the appropriation shall be $250,000:

"For the incidental expenses of the Quartermaster's Department, consisting of postage on letters and packets received and sent by officers of the Army on public service, expenses of courts-martial and courts of inquiry, including the additional compensation to judges advocate, recorders, members, and witnesses while on that service, under the act of March 16th, 1802; extra pay to soldiers employed under the direction of the Quartermaster's Department in the erection of barracks, quarters, store-houses, and hospitals; the construction of roads and other constant labor for periods of not less than ten days, under the act of March 2d, 1819; expenses of express-boys to and from the frontier posts and armies in the field; of escorts to pyrameters, other disbursing officers and trains, when military escorts cannot be furnished; expenses of the internment of non-commissioned officers and soldiers; authorized office furniture; hire of laborers in the Quartermaster's Department, including hire of interpreters, spies and guides for the Army; compensation of clerks to officers of the Quartermaster's Department; compensation of forage and wagon masters, authorized by the act of July, 1838; for the apprehension of deserters, and the expenses incident to their pursuit; the various expenditures required for the first and second regiments of dragoons, the companies of light artillery, the regiment of mounted riflemen, and such companies of infantry as may be mounted, including the purchase of traveling forges, blacksmiths' and shoeing tools, horse and mule shoes, iron, hire of veterinary surgeons and medicines for horses and mules, $225,000."

The committee recommend an agreement to the 16th amendment of the Senate, by inserting the words "to Congress" in italics, and striking out after the word "service" the following words: "and that upon being satisfied of the correctness of the claims which may be reported favorably upon in whole or in part, he shall proceed to audit and pay the same," so that it shall read as follows:

"Sec. 6. And be it further enacted, That for the pay and equipment as mounted riflemen, finding their own horses and forage, of the volunteers serving under the command of Captain John C. Fremont, in California, during the year 1846, as appears by the muster rolls on file in the War Department, and for the subsistence and supplies consumed by said volunteers in said service, $168,000 is hereby appropriated out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated; and the Secretary of War is authorized and empowered to appoint three competent and disinterested officers of the Army to examine and report to Congress upon all such claims as may be presented for funds advanced and subsistence and supplies of all kinds furnished or taken for the use of said command whilst thus engaged in the public service; and for the expenses of said board of officers, the sum of $2,000 is hereby appropriated."

"And that the benefits of the provisions of the said section shall apply equally to all, whether they have paid into the Treasury all the public money in their hands or not"— so that it will read as follows:

"Sec. 7. And be it further enacted, That the second section of an act entitled 'An act to provide for the settlement of the accounts of public officers and others who may have received moneys arising from military contributions, or otherwise, in Mexico,' approved March 3d, 1849, shall be so construed as to extend to officers and other persons who were engaged in the collection of military contributions as collectors in any part of Mexico or California during the war with Mexico."

"Provided, That the same principles be applied in the settlement of the claims of the sale of Alabama and all other States for moneys advanced in raising, subsisting, and transporting troops for the Mexican war"—

so that it will read as follows:

"Sec. 10. And be it further enacted, That there be appropriated as aforesaid, for refunding to the State of Michigan the amount advanced by said State in organizing, subsisting, and transporting volunteers previous to their being mustered into the service of the United States, during the late war with Mexico, $20,000; which said sum, or so much thereof as shall be necessary to pay and cancel the claim of said State, as presented and now on file in the office of the Third Auditor of the Treasury Department, shall be paid by the Secretary of the Treasury to the Governor or other proper officer of the said State of Michigan: Provided, That the same principles be applied in the settlement of the claims of the State of Alabama, and all other States, for moneys advanced in raising, subsisting, and transporting troops for the Mexican war."

The Committee of Conference further recommended that the Senate do recede from its following amendments, viz:

5th amendment. The Senate's 5th amendment was to strike out "5" and insert "8" in the following clause:

"For transportation of the army, including the baggage of the troops when moving either by land or water; of clothing, camp, and garrison equipage, and horse equipments, from the depot at Philadelphia to the several posts and army depots; of subsistence from the places of purchase and from the places of delivery, under contract, to such places as the circumstances of the service may require it to be sent; of ordnance, ordnance stores, and small arms from the foundries and armories to the arsenals, fortifications, frontier posts, and army depots; freights, tolls, and ferriages; for the purchase and hire of horses, mules, oxen, wagons, carts, drays, ships, and other sea-going vessels and boats, for the transportation of supplies, and for garrison purposes; for drayage and cartage at the several posts; hire of teamsters; transportation of funds for the pay and other disbursing departments; the expense of sailing public transports on the various rivers, the Gulf of Mexico, and the Atlantic and Pacific; and for procuring water at such posts as, from their situation, require that it be brought from a distance, $1,500,000"—

So that the appropriation should be "$1,800,000" instead of "$1,500,000."

the following words:

"And the construction of said work shall be continued and completed under the Topographical Bureau, by J. W. P. Lewis, who has hitherto had charge of it; and so much of any act of Congress as requires that an officer of the Army shall be employed in constructing said work be, and the same is hereby, repealed."

13th amendment. Strike out the following section—

"Sec. 3. And be it further enacted, That so much of the act making appropriations for the support of the Army for the year ending June 30, 1851, approved September 28, 1850, as provides extra pay to the commissioned officers and enlisted men of the United States serving in Oregon or California, be, and the same is hereby, continued in force for one year from the 1st day of March, 1852; and that the provision of the last-mentioned act be, and is hereby, extended to New Mexico during the current year, provided for by this section, and that $300,000 be, and is hereby, appropriated for that purpose: Provided further, That said officers and men shall receive only one half of the increased amount over the regular pay allowed by law"— and insert in lieu thereof the following:

"That for extra pay to commissioned officers of the Army of the United States, serving at posts west of the States of Missouri and Arkansas, and in the eighth, ninth, tenth, and eleventh military departments, $226,865, on the following basis, to wit:

A message was here received from the Senate, by the hands of Mr. DICKINS, its Secretary:

Mr. SPEAKER: The Senate have agreed to the amendment of this House to the bill of the Senate (No. 486) entitled "An act to constitute Alton, in the State of Illinois, a port of entry."

The Senate have agreed to the reports of the Committees of Conference, on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the bills of the following titles, viz:

"H. R. No. 314. An act establishing certain post roads."

"H. R. No. 220. An act making appropriation for the support of the Army for the year ending 30th June, 1853."

Mr. BAYLY, of Virginia. In the civil and diplomatic appropriation bill, which has just been passed, there is a verbal error concerning an honorable member of this House, which was not brought to my notice until this very moment. As chairman of the Committee on Foreign Affairs, by the direction of that committee, I moved an appropriation to our colleague [Mr. INGERSOLL] for pay as Chargé d'Affaires, from August to January, which covered the period when there was no minister there, and whilst he acted as such. By a mistake of the Clerk, it was made from August till May. It ought to be August till January. There will be no error in the settlement of the accounts, but I desire to make this statement in his justification.

Mr. JONES, of Tennessee. That bill has not yet been reported as correctly enrolled, and I move that the error be corrected.

There was no objection, and it was so ordered. The report of the Committee of Conference on the Army bill was then adopted.

Mr. JONES, of Tennessee. I move to reconsider that vote, and to lay the motion to reconsider upon the table; which latter motion was agreed to.

Mr. JONES. I submit the following resolution:

Resolved, (with the concurrence of the Senate,) That the 17th joint rule of the two Houses be suspended for the remainder of the present session, so far as relates to the appropriation, light-house, and post road bills.

The 17th rule reads, as follows:

"No bill or resolution that shall have passed the House of Representatives and the Senate, shall be presented to the President of the United States for his approbation on the last day of the session."

The resolution was adopted.

Mr. STANTON, of Kentucky. I am directed by the Committee on Printing to move to take up a joint resolution from the Senate, which provides that the Clerk of the House, the Secretary of the Senate, and the clerk of the Committee on Printing, shall, during the recess, audit and settle the accounts of the public printer. If the resolution be not passed, it will impose upon the Committee on Printing the necessity of remaining here during the recess to settle and adjust those accounts. I move the resolution be taken up and passed.

There was no objection, and the resolution was taken up for consideration.

The Clerk read the resolution, as follows:

S. 61. Joint resolution relating to the printing of Congress during the recess:

Resolved, That the Secretary of the Senate, the Clerk of the House, and the Clerk of the Committee on Printing, jointly, be, and they are hereby, authorized to examine, audit, and pass upon all accounts for printing and binding, during the recess of the present Congress, in the same manner as is done by the Committee on Printing during the session of Congress.

Mr. STANLY. I shall be glad to know to what printing that refers?

Mr. STANTON. All the printing under the contract with Mr. Hamilton.

Mr. STANLY. Are they to settle Mr. Ritchie's accounts also?

Mr. STANTON. Not at all; they are settled in the civil and diplomatic appropriation bill.

The resolution was read a second time.

Mr. STANLY. I should like to know what are the duties of the Superintendent of the Public Printing if he has no control over this matter?

Mr. STANTON. His duties are created under the law we passed a few weeks ago. The settlement of the accounts under the old law, applicable to Mr. Hamilton alone, is all these gentlemen will have to do.

Mr. STANLY. I think that the Superintendent ought to have a command over these accounts, because these clerks cannot understand the hocus focus of this act.

Mr. STANTON. The clerk of the Committee on Printing is a practical printer.

Mr. STANLY. Very well, sir.

The question was taken, and the resolution was adopted.

Mr. HENN, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported as correctly enrolled the following, which received the signature of the Speaker:

An act to constitute Alton, in the State of Illinois, a port of delivery.

Mr. HOUSTON. I move that the bill which has just been reported from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, be included in the resolution for the suspension of the 17th rule.

There was no objection, and it was so ordered.

NAVAL APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. PHELPS. I beg leave to submit the following report from the Committee of Conference on the naval appropriation bill:

That the House recede from its disagreement to the 45th amendment of the Senate, and that the two Houses agree to amend the said amendment by striking out of the 6th line the words "and the city post office."

And that the House do recede from its disagreement to the 46th amendment of the Senate, and that the two Houses agree to amend the same by inserting in the 1st line thereof, after the word "enacted" the following provision, to wit: "That Robert Armstrong, the public printer, be, and is hereby, directed to execute, without delay, the public printing ordered by either House of Congress since his election as public printer."

"Sec. 4. And be it further enacted, That the Secretary of the Navy be, and he is hereby, directed to appoint some suitable naval officer or engineer to receive and superintend the construction of the floating dry-dock in California."

And that the two Houses agree to the second amendment of the Senate, amended as follows, to wit: In the 9th and 10th lines of said amendment strike out the words "during the late war with Mexico, and since that period," and insert instead thereof, "since the 28th of September, 1850;" and in the 33d line strike out "1,200," and insert in lieu thereof, "1,000,"—so that the clause will read:

"And the proper accounting officers of the Treasury be, and they are hereby, authorized and directed to allow and pay, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to the officers, petty officers, seamen, and marines of the United States Navy, and to the officers and men of the revenue service who served in the Pacific ocean on the coast of California and Mexico, since the 28th day of September, 1850, the same increased or additional compensation as has been by law directed to be paid to the officers and soldiers of the Army who served in California; and the several officers who served on the late Arctic expedition in search of Sir John Franklin shall, in addition to the pay with which they have already been credited, be allowed for the period during which they so served, the following compensation respectively, namely: the commander of the expedition the pay of a commander; the passed midshipmen the pay of lieutenants; the passed assistant surgeon the pay of a fleet surgeon; the assistant surgeon the pay of a surgeon; the midshipmen the pay of passed midshipmen—all as on sea service; and that there be allowed to the warrant officers, and to the petty officers and men that composed the crews of the vessels employed on that expedition, extra pay equal to the regular pay with which they have been credited for their services on the said expedition; and the pay of chaplains in the Navy shall be $1,000 on leave or waiting orders, and $1,500 while on duty."

And that the two Houses agree to the 3d amendment of the Senate with the following amendments: In line 8, strike out "1,500" and insert "1,000;" and in line 11, strike out "9" and insert "8"—so that the clause will read:

"And the salary of the assistant to purser for the navy-yard at Kittery, Maine, who also discharges the duties of clerk and steward, shall be $750; and the pay of the 'first clerk to the commandant' at the navy-yards at Norfolk, New York, and Boston, shall be at the rate of $1,000 per annum; and that the 'second clerk of the commandant' at the same yards shall be at the rate of $800 per annum from and after the passage of this act."

That the Senate do recede from its 8th amendment, which is as follows:

From the following clause—

"To complete the quarters for the students and professors at the Naval Academy at Annapolis, the sum of 75,000 dollars. And hereafter no appointment of midshipman, acting midshipman, or pupil at any naval school in the Navy, shall be made unless recommended by the member of Congress representing the district in which the applicant resides, in the same manner that cadets at West Point are now appointed; and that the Secretary of the Navy is hereby required to report to this House, at its second session, the number and names of appointments to the Naval School which have been made; and the district and State whence each one comes; and the number of vacancies then existing at said school, with the Congressional district which may be entitled to supply them; and a statement of the order in which the remainder of the Congressional districts shall be entitled to supply all future and accruing vacancies, so far as it may be determined by existing law, or by circumstances" strike out all after the word "dollars," and that the two Houses agree to amend the clause mentioned in the Senate's amendment, by striking out of the 11th and 12th lines, the words "this House," and inserting in lieu thereof "Congress," so that it will read:

"And hereafter no appointment of midshipman, acting midshipman, or pupil at any Naval School in the Navy, shall be made, unless recommended by the member of Congress representing the district in which the applicant resides, in the same manner that cadets at West Point are now appointed; and that the Secretary of the Navy is hereby required to report to Congress, at its second session, the number and names of appointments to the Naval School, which have been made; and the district and State whence each one comes; and the number of vacancies then existing at said school, with the Congressional district which may be entitled to supply them; and a statement of the order in which the remainder of the Congressional districts shall be entitled to supply all future and accruing vacancies, so far as it may be determined by existing law, or by circumstances."

That the Senate recede from their 41st amendment, which is as follows:

"Strike out sections two and three, which are as follows:

"Sec. 2. And be it further enacted, That all acts or parts of acts authorizing the President of the United States, or the Secretary of the proper Department under his direction, to transfer any portion of the moneys appropriated for a particular branch of expenditure in that Department, to be applied to another branch of expenditure in the same Department, be, and are hereby, so far as relates to the Navy Department, repealed; and no portion of the money appropriated by this act shall be applied to the payment of any expenses incurred prior to the 1st day of July, 1852."

"Sec. 3. And be it further enacted, That it shall be lawful for the President of the United States to appoint commanders in the Navy, as well as captains, for chiefs of the bureaus of navy-yards and docks, and of ordnance and hydrography, and of construction, equipment, and repair."

And that the two Houses agree to strike out of the second section all after the word "repealed" in the 8th line, and the whole of the third section, so that it will read:

"Sec. 2. And be it further enacted, That all acts or parts of acts authorizing the President of the United States, or the Secretary of the proper Department under his direction, to transfer any portion of the moneys appropriated for a particular branch of expenditure in that Department, to be applied to another branch of expenditure in the same Department, be, and are hereby, so far as relates to the Navy Department, repealed."

That the House recede from its disagreement to the 45th amendment of the Senate, which is as follows:

"Add to the bill the following:

"Sec. 5. And be it further enacted, That the percentage added by law to the pay of the clerks employed in the executive and legislative departments of Washington, be, and is hereby, allowed to the clerks employed at the navy-yard and marine barracks, and the city post office, in the city of Washington."

And that the House do recede from its disagreement to the 46th amendment of the Senate, which is as follows:

"Add as an additional section:

"Sec. 6. And be it further enacted, That all paper used by the public printer for the space of sixty days from this date shall be furnished by him at cost, and shall be of the quality and description specified in the law passed at this session of Congress."

And that the two Houses agree to amend the same by inserting in the first line, after the word "enacted," the following, to wit:

"That Robert Armstrong, the public printer, be, and is hereby, directed to execute, without delay, the public printing ordered by either House of Congress since his election as public printer, and"— so that the clause will read:

"Sec. 6. And be it further enacted, That Robert Armstrong, the public printer, be, and is hereby, directed to execute, without delay, the public printing ordered by either House of Congress since his election as public printer, and that all paper used by the public printer for the space of sixty days from this date shall be furnished by him at cost, and shall be of the quality and description specified in the law passed at this session of Congress."

Mr. PHELPS. I call for the previous question upon the adoption of the report.

The call for the previous question was seconded, and the main question was ordered to be put.

[A message was here received from the Senate by the hands of ASBURY DICKINS, Esq., its Secretary, notifying the House that that body had agreed to the report of the Committee of Conference on the naval appropriation bill.]

Mr. CARTER. I call for the yeas and nays upon the adoption of the report of the Committee of Conference on the naval appropriation bill.

Mr. STANTON, of Ohio. I desire to know whether, among the amendments adopted, there is one for fortifications?

Mr. PHELPS. There is not.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The question was taken, and the report was adopted—yeas 92, nays 64; as follows:

YEAS—Messrs. Willis Allen, Allison, William Appleton, Ashe, Thomas H. Bayly, Bennett, Bowie, Breckinridge, Brooks, Burrows, Busby, E. Carrington Cabell, Caldwell, Chandler, Chapman, Clingman, Conger, George T. Davis, Dean, Dockery, Doty, Duncan, Edmondson, Evans, Ewing, Faulkner, Florence, Freeman, Henry M. Fuller, Gentry, Gilmore, Goodrich, Gorman, Hammond, Harper, Hart, Havas, Hascall, Haven, Holladay, Jackson, Robert W. Johnson, George G. King, Kuhns, Landry, Martin, McCormick, McMullin, Miller, Millson, Molony, Henry D. Moore, John Moore, Morehead, Outlaw, Samuel W. Parker, Peaslee, Penn, Phelps, Folk, Porter, Price, Reed, Richardson, Riddle, Robbins, Sackett, Schermerhorn, Schoolcraft, Schoonmaker, David L. Seymour, Skelton, Snow, Stanley, Frederick P. Stanton, Richard H. Stanton, Abraham P. Stephens, Thaddeus Stevens, Stone, St. Martin, Strother, Stuart, Sutherland, Taylor, Thompson, Thurston, Walbridge, Walsh, Washburn, Wells, and Yates—92.

NAYS—Messrs. Charles Allen, Averett, Babcock, Barrere, Beale, Bibbighaus, Brenton, Albert G. Brown, Buell, Thompson Campbell, Carter, Caskey, Clark, Cleveland, Cobb, Curtis, Daniel, Dawson, Dimmick, Durkee, Eastman, Edgerton, Ficklin, Floyd, George, Hall, Hamilton, Isham G. Harris, Horsford, Howard, John W. Howe, Thomas Y. How, Ingersoll, Ives, Jenkins, Andrew Johnson, Daniel T. Jones, George W. Jones, J. Glancy Jones, Preston King, Kurtz, Letcher, Mann, Mason, McNair, McQueen, Morrison, Murray, Newton, Andrew Parker, Pennington, Perkins, Powell, Robie, Savage, Benjamin Stanton, Sweetser, Townshend, Tuck, Wallace, Watkins, Addison White, Wilcox, and Woodward—64.

So the report of the Committee of Conference on the naval appropriation bill was adopted.

Mr. PHELPS. I move to reconsider the vote just taken, and to lay the motion to reconsider upon the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

Mr. JONES, of Tennessee. I move that the 17th rule be suspended on all bills passed up to this time.

There was no objection and it was so ordered.

Mr. CARTER. I wish the House would give their unanimous consent to a motion to furnish the Patent Office with ten thousand extra copies of the Patent Office Report. The provision for that purpose was accidentally omitted to be made. The motion provides only for the usual number.

There was no objection, and it was so ordered.

The following joint resolution was reported from the Committee on Enrolled Bills as correctly enrolled; which received the signature of the Speaker:

"A Joint Resolution relating to the printing of Congress during the recess."

Mr. JONES, of Tennessee. I would suggest the propriety of the House ordering the Executive reports and communications now lying upon the Speaker's table, to be printed. It will be recollected that a great many have never been presented to the House. I ask that no extra number shall be printed.

There was no objection and it was so ordered.

Mr. SEYMOUR, of New York. There was an Executive communication made to the Senate respecting the internal trade between this country and the British Provinces, and the fisheries, which interests the country very much, and I ask leave to introduce the following resolution providing for the printing of a number of copies for the use of members of this House:

Resolved, That five thousand extra copies of the report made to the Senate at the present session by Mr. Andrews, upon the internal trade of the United States and its connection with the trade of the British North American Provinces, and the fisheries, be printed for the use of this House.

There was no objection, and the resolution was introduced and then adopted.

Mr. FICKLIN. I ask the unanimous consent that I may present some two or three bills from the Committee on the District of Columbia, merely to have them referred and printed. It will take but a moment's time.

Mr. HART. I object. I have bills likewise which I desire referred.

Mr. PENN. I beg leave to make the following report from the Committee of Conference on the Post Office appropriation bill.

The Committee of Conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the bill of the House of Representatives, No. 241, making appropriations for the Post Office Department during the fiscal year ending 30th June, 1853, having met, and after full and free conference, have agreed to and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows, to wit:

That the House recede from their disagreements of the Senate, numbered 1, 2, 4, and 5.

THOS. J. RUSK,
ALPHEUS FELCH,
J. W. MILLER,
A. G. PENN.,
JAMES BROOKS.

The following are the amendments of the Senate, Nos. 1, 2, 4, and 5.

Sec. 1, page 3, after line 23, insert:

To enable the Postmaster General to contract for the transporting the mail by steamboat from the Lake House to New Iberia, on the route No. 6,116, from Donaldsonville to Washington, in the State of Louisiana, $7,000.

Add the following as new sections:

Sec. 2. And be it further enacted, That the Postmaster General be, and he is hereby, authorized, whenever he shall deem it discreet, to dispense with the route agents now sent with the mails from New York to California, and in lieu thereof to appoint not more than two resident agents to take charge of the mail service across the Isthmus of Panama, and to allow said agents for salary and personal expenses, not exceeding $3,000 per year for each of such agents, which shall be paid out of the amount annually appropriated for the transportation of the mails.

Sec. 4. And be it further enacted, That the Postmaster General be, and he is hereby, authorized, if he shall deem it proper, to advertise for, and establish service upon the regular mail route between New Orleans and certain Gulf ports of Florida.

Sec. 5. And be it further enacted, That the Postmaster General is authorized to contract with the Ocean Steam Navigation Company for one additional trip on the Havre line, and one additional trip on the Bremen line, until the expiration of their existing contract, receiving and delivering mails at Southampton, Cowes, or Plymouth, as the Postmaster General may direct, according to such schedule as shall be prescribed by the Postmaster General, in order thereby to maintain through such lines, and the Collins line, a regular weekly communication by American mail steamers, between the United States and the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland; but the compensation for such additional trips shall not exceed the compensation allowed for each trip under the said existing contract: And provided further, That the Postmaster General shall be, and he is hereby, authorized, in his discretion, to negotiate with the contractors for changing the terminus of the Havre line, from Havre to Antwerp, in Belgium, and to make an agreement for such change, if he shall think proper, but the increased compensation to be allowed for such change shall be limited to a pro rata allowance for the increased distance.

Mr. PENN. I demand the previous question on the adoption of the report.

The previous question was seconded, and the main question ordered.

The question was then taken upon agreeing to the report of the Committee of Conference, and it was decided in the affirmative.

Mr. CLINGMAN moved to reconsider the vote by which the report of the Committee of Conference was agreed to, and to lay the motion to reconsider upon the table; which latter motion was agreed to.

Mr. CHANDLER. I rise to ask the unanimous consent of the House to take up from the Speaker's table the bill relating to the accounts of Purser Speiden. Much distress will follow our neglect to pass it. It only asks for the exercise of justice by the Department, and I hope the House will indulge me in taking it up.

[Cries of "Agreed!" "Agreed!" "Agreed!"]

The bill was then reported as follows: Senate bill No. 217 for the relief of William Speiden.

Mr. HENN, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported as correctly enrolled the following bills: "An act making further provisions for the satisfaction of Virginia military land warrants;" and also "An act making an appropriation for light-houses, light-boats, buoys, &c., and providing for the erection and establishment of the same, and for other purposes;" which severally received the signature of the Speaker.

Mr. HOUSTON. I would like to ask the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. CHANDLER] a question. It seems to me that the bill for the relief of Purser Speiden is covered in the military appropriation bill which passed this morning. We have an amendment to the law of 1849, which authorizes all persons who collected military contributions in California, or in that range of country, during the war to come forward and make settlement. It covers all cases.

Mr. CHANDLER. I think that it does not reach this case, and if it did, it would do no harm to pass the bill.

Mr. JOHNSON, of Arkansas. I wish simply to say this in regard to the measure. If, as the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. HOUSTON] says, this case is covered by a provision in the Army bill, then this is but an accumulative remedy. I do not believe that this case is covered. This is a bill which deserves to be passed. It has been passed long since in the Senate, and it is now before the House, and I hope gentlemen, by making a contest about it, will not consume more time than is necessary for the subject. I call the previous question.

Mr. HOUSTON. I would ask whether the collector in this instance has paid money into the Treasury?

Mr. KING, of New York. I rise to a point of order. This bill makes an appropriation. By unanimous consent it was taken up, and the House has discovered what it is. The rules require that it should first be considered in Committee of the Whole. It makes an appropriation of a special amount, and such bills ought not to be passed in this way without anything being known of them by the House.

Mr. CHANDLER. I beg leave to say, that this bill has undergone the closest investigation here by the Senate, and is recommended by the accounting officers of the Department.

The SPEAKER. Before the bill can be passed it must go to a committee.

Mr. CHANDLER. I move that the rules of the House be suspended which require the bill to be first considered in a Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. STANTON, of Ohio. Upon that motion I demand the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The question was then taken upon Mr. CHANDLER's motion, and there were—yeas 94, nays 58; as follows:

YEAS—Messrs. Aiken, Willis Allen, William Appleton, Thomas H. Bayly, Bibbhaugh, Bocoek, Bowie, Bowne, Bragg, Brenon, Brooks, Albert G. Brown, George H. Brown, Burrows, Caldwell, Thompson Campbell, Caskie, Chandler, Clingman, Curtis, Daniel, George T. Davis, Dimmick, Disney, Dockery, Doty, Edgerton, Edmundson, Evans, Florence, Henry M. Fuller, Gentry, Goodenow, Goodrich, Green, Grey, Hall, Hammond, Harper, Hart, Haws, Haven, Hebard, Holladay, Howard, Ingersoll, Jackson, John Johnson, Robert W. Johnson, George G. King, Kuhns, Lockhart, McQueen, Meade, Miller, Milson, Minner, Molony, J. Moore, Outlaw, S. W. Parker, Peaslee, Penn, Pennington, Phelps, Polk, Porter, Richardson, Robbins, Ross, Savage, Schermerhorn, Schoolcraft, Scurry, David L. Seymour, Stanley, Frederick P. Stanton, Richard H. Stanton, Abraham P. Stephens, Thaddeus Stevens, St. Martin, Strother, Sweetser, Taylor, Thurston, Tuck, Walbridge, Wallace, Washburn, Watkins, Addison White, Wilcox, Woodward, and Yates—94.

NAYS—Messrs. Allison, Averett, Babcock, Barrere, Busby, Lewis D. Campbell, Carter, Chapman, Chastain, Churchill, Clark, Cleveland, Cobb, Conger, Dawson, Dean, Durkee, Eastman, Faulkner, Floyd, Freeman, Gorman, I. G. Harris, Hascall, Henn, Horsford, Houston, J. W.

Howe, T. Y. How, Ives, Jenkins, D. T. Jones, J. Glancy Jones, Preston King, Kurtz, Letcher, Mann, Martin, Mason, McCorkle, McMullin, McNair, Morehead, Morrison, Murphy, Murray, Andrew Parker, Perkins, Powell, Reed, Riddle, Robie, Schoonmaker, Skelton, Benjamin Stanton, Stuart, Townshend, and Wells—58.

So the House refused to suspend the rules.

REPORTING.

Mr. STANTON, of Tennessee. According to my recollection, there was a motion submitted last night to suspend the rules.

The SPEAKER. The Chair stated this morning, that there was a motion lying over to suspend the rules.

Mr. MANN. I call for the consideration of the resolution.

The SPEAKER. The resolution will be reported.

Mr. KING, of New York. I would inquire whether the bill introduced by the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. CHANDLER] goes to a Committee of the Whole House.

The SPEAKER. It goes back to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

[A message was here received from the Senate by the hands of ASBURY DICKINS, Esq., its Secretary, agreeing to a joint resolution, with an amendment, suspending the 17th joint rule.]

The SPEAKER. The Chair hopes that the House will adopt the amendment, as it is necessary for the bill to be signed by the President.

The joint resolution was then read as follows:

"Resolved, (with the concurrence of the Senate,) That the 17th rule of the two Houses be suspended for the remainder of the present session, so far as relates to the appropriation bills for light-houses and post roads, and to constitute Alton, in the State of Illinois, a port of delivery."

The Senate amendment was then read, as follows:

"Resolved, That the Senate agree to this resolution with the following amendment: Add also the bills No. 222, 240, 241, and 314, making appropriations for the Army, Navy, Post Office, and the establishment of post roads."

The question was then taken upon concurring in the resolution as amended by the Senate, and it was decided in the affirmative.

Mr. FAULKNER. Mr. Speaker, I desire—

The SPEAKER. There is a proposition pending to suspend the rules lying over from yesterday. The gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. MANN] moves to suspend the rules for the purpose of introducing the following resolution:

Resolved, That William W. Curran be, and he is hereby, appointed, from and after the present session of Congress, Reporter for the House of Representatives, with authority to associate six assistants; that his annual compensation shall be the same as that of the principal clerk in the Clerk's office of this House; and the compensation of the assistant reporters shall be the same as that of the assistant clerks in the Clerk's office; to be paid out of the contingent fund of the House: Provided, That before this resolution shall take effect the Clerk of the House shall have procured from John C. Rives such a modification of his contract for reporting and printing the proceedings and debates of the House as to relinquish, of the price now paid him, the sum of $3.50 per column.

Mr. JONES, of Tennessee. That is too important a measure to be adopted at this stage of the session. I hope that the rules will not be suspended. I demand the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. HAMMOND. I wish to make a report from the Committee on Printing. The engravings connected with the publication of the Patent Office Report have not been provided for in the publication of the work.

The SPEAKER. The Chair understands that the Patent Office Report has been ordered to be printed without the order for the engravings. Unless objection is made, the neglect will be remedied, and the order accordingly made:

There was no objection.

The question was then taken on the proposition to suspend the rules to admit Mr. MANN's resolution, and there were—yeas 73, nays 62, as follows:

YEAS—Messrs. Charles Allen, Willis Allen, Allison, William Appleton, Thomas H. Bayly, Beale, Bennett, Albert G. Brown, Busby, Lewis D. Campbell, Carter, Chandler, Chapman, Dawson, Dean, Disney, Doty, Durkee, Eastman, Edgerton, Edmundson, Florence, Freeman, Henry M. Fuller, Gentry, Gilmore, Goodenow, Goodrich, Gorman, Hart, Hascall, Hearn, Howard, John W. Howe, Thomas Y. Howe, Andrew Johnson, Robert W. Johnson, J. G. Jones, G. G. King, Mann, Martin, McCorkle, McQueen, Meade, Milson, Molony, H. D. Moore, Newton, Outlaw, Pennington, Perkins, Price, Reed, Riddle, Sackett, Schermerhorn, Schoonmaker, Skelton, Snow, Frederick P. Stanton, Abraham P. Stephens, Thaddeus Stephens, Strother, Taylor, Townshend, Tuck, Walbridge, Walsh, Washburn, Watkins, Wells, Addison White, and Woodward—73.

NAYS—Messrs. Aiken, Averett, Barrere, Bibbighaus, John H. Boyd, Brenton, George H. Brown, Burrows, Caldwell, Thompson Campbell, Caskie, Chastain, Churchwell, Clark, Clingman, Conzer, Daniel, John G. Davis, Dimmick, Dockery, Duncan, Ficklin, Floyd, Hall, Hamilton, Hammond, Isham G. Harris, Haws, Haven, Hebard, Hubbard, Holladay, Houston, Jackson, Jenkins, John Johnson, Daniel T. Jones, George W. Jones, Preston King, Kuhns, Kurz, Landry, Mason, Morehead, Murphy, Murray, Andrew Parker, Samuel W. Parker, Peaslee, Penn, Phelps, Richardson, Robbins, Robie, Ross, Savage, Schooncraft, David L. Seymour, Stanly, Stuart, Sweetser, and Wilcox—62.

So (two thirds not voting in the affirmative) the rules were not suspended.

EXPENSES OF CONTESTED ELECTION.

Mr. ROBBINS. I ask the unanimous consent of the House to offer the following resolution:

Resolved, That the Clerk of the House be directed to pay to William Galloway, Esq., $200, in full for his services as commissioner to take testimony in the contested election case from the fourth Congressional district of Pennsylvania in the Thirty-first Congress.

Mr. HAMILTON. That resolution was passed upon by the Committee on Elections; and I will state to the House that this commissioner was ordered to take the evidence by the House.

Mr. JOHN W. HOWE. I object to the resolution, and call the gentleman from Maryland to order.

Mr. JONES, of Tennessee. I move to suspend the rules, to enable the gentleman from Pennsylvania to offer his resolution.

The question was then taken on Mr. JONES's motion, and it was decided in the affirmative.

So the rules were suspended.

The question recurred upon the adoption of the resolution.

Mr. GAMBLE. I desire to offer an amendment to the resolution, which I send to the Clerk's desk.

The Clerk proceeded to read the amendment, as follows:

Resolved, That the Sergeant-at-Arms be directed to pay to Hendrick B. Wright, the contestant—

Mr. JONES, of Tennessee, (interrupting.) I object to that amendment.

Mr. GAMBLE. I have a right to offer it.

The SPEAKER. Does the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. ROBBINS] yield the floor to his colleague to offer the amendment?

WIDOW OF MAJOR GENERAL WORTH.

Mr. POLK. I ask the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. ROBBINS] to yield me the floor for one moment.

Mr. ROBBINS. I yield the floor to the gentleman from Tennessee.

Mr. POLK. I think that in the closing hours of this session, it becomes this House to pay a tribute of respect to the noble dead. I therefore move, with the permission of the gentleman from Pennsylvania, that the House recede from its amendment to the bill granting a pension to the widow of Major General Worth. I hope the House will agree to it.

Mr. CARTTER. So do I.

The SPEAKER. Is it the unanimous consent of the House that the motion be entertained?

Mr. HARRIS, of Tennessee. I object.

Mr. POLK. I desire, the floor having been yielded to me, and objection having been made from a quarter where I did not expect it, to move to suspend the rules to enable me to submit the motion.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. ROBBINS] is entitled to the floor.

Mr. POLK. The gentleman from Pennsylvania has given me the floor for this special purpose, and I hope the Speaker will not extort for him a right which he does not claim.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will execute the rule precisely as he understands it. The Chair understands the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. ROBBINS] to yield the floor for a suggestion, or explanation, and not for a motion.

Mr. ROBBINS. I must insist on my resolution, and I call the previous question.

The SPEAKER. Does the gentleman from Pennsylvania yield for the amendment of his colleague?

Mr. ROBBINS. No, sir, I do not.

The previous question was then seconded, and the main question ordered.

Mr. GAMBLE. I think there has been some mistake. I understood my colleague to yield me the floor to offer that amendment, and I hope it will be received.

The SPEAKER. It would require unanimous consent now, the main question having been ordered. Is it the pleasure of the House that the amendment be received?

Mr. HARRIS, of Tennessee. I object to the introduction of the amendment.

Mr. GAMBLE. I offered my amendment before the previous question was seconded.

The SPEAKER. It was at the mercy of the gentleman's colleague, and his colleague declined to yield the floor for the amendment to be offered.

Mr. GAMBLE. I believe my colleague agrees to the amendment.

Mr. ROBBINS. I have no objection to it.

Mr. LETCHER. I have; and I object to its reception.

The question was then taken on Mr. ROBBINS's resolution, and it was adopted.

JAMES POOLE.

Mr. PHELPS. I ask the unanimous consent of the House to submit a motion to take up joint resolution from the Senate No. 57, it being a joint resolution directing a settlement of the accounts of James Poole, who was employed as a blacksmith in the service of the Indian Department. I have examined the matter myself, and am satisfied that the claim is a just one. The joint resolution only directs that the accounting officers of the Treasury shall examine and settle the accounts of this poor man, and pay him what is justly due him.

Mr. WALSH. I object.

Mr. PHELPS. I understand that in relation to the bill for the relief of Mrs. Worth, a committee of conference is asked by the Senate; and at the request of the gentleman from Tennessee, [Mr. POLK,] I ask that a committee of conference be appointed on the part of the House.

Mr. POLK. That is all we ask.

There being no objection, it was so ordered; and the Speaker appointed Mr. POLK, Mr. ISHAM G. HARRIS, and Mr. GOODENOW, managers at the said conference on the part of the House.

Mr. PHELPS. I now move that the rules be suspended for the purpose of enabling me to make the motion I have indicated in relation to the claim of James Poole.

The question was taken, and on a division there were—ayes 75, noes 42.

So (two thirds not voting in the affirmative) the rules were not suspended.

Mr. HENN, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported back as correctly enrolled the following bills; which thereupon severally received the signature of the Speaker, viz:

An act making appropriations for the naval service for the year ending the 30th of June, 1853; and

An act making appropriations for the service of the Post Office Department during the fiscal year ending the 30th of June, 1853, and for other purposes.

Mr. STANTON, of Kentucky. I rise to a question of privilege.

Mr. PHELPS. I ask the unanimous consent to correct a clerical error in relation to the document we have just ordered to be printed. In the resolution offered by the gentleman from New York, it should be "the report of Mr. Andrews."

There was no objection, and the correction was made.

Mr. DAVIS, of Massachusetts. I ask the unanimous consent of the House to offer the following resolution. It is authorized by the Committee on Accounts, and I hope it will not be objected to:

Resolved, That the Clerk of the House be authorized to pay out of the contingent fund of this House, to William H. Minnix, petition and stationery clerk, the same compensation annually which is paid to the assistant clerks of the Clerk of the House of Representatives, from the commencement of this Congress until otherwise ordered by this House.

Mr. PENN. Mr. Minnix has discharged his duties well, and I hope the resolution will be adopted.

[Objection was made.]

Mr. DAVIS. I will state that this resolution is authorized by and meets the approbation of the Committee on Accounts. I hope the objection will be withdrawn; but if not, I move to suspend the rules.

The objection was withdrawn, and the resolution was introduced.

The question was then taken, and the resolution adopted.

Mr. ROBIE. I ask the unanimous consent of the House to offer the following resolution:

Resolved, That John J. Malloy, John D. Ott, and Henry McLaughlin, public folders, be allowed $2 50 per day during the present session of Congress, and whilst employed in office during said session, to be paid out of the contingent fund of the House: Provided, That this does not change the character of their employment or office, and that the amount made by them as such folders for work during this session be deducted therefrom.

There was no objection, and the resolution was introduced.

Mr. KING, of New York. I call for the regular order of business, whatever it is.

The SPEAKER. The regular order of business is on the adoption of the resolution just introduced by unanimous consent.

Mr. STANTON, of Kentucky. I offer the following amendment to the resolution:

Resolved, That Thomas J. Galt, and Samuel H. Lamborn, in charge of the House folding-room, be allowed the same compensation as is allowed to the person in charge of the House Library, commencing with the present session of Congress.

Mr. EDMUNDSON. I offer the following amendment to the amendment:

Resolved, That John Castin, Francis Riley, and Lewis Hickman, laborers in the Clerk's Office of the House, be allowed two dollars per day, commencing from the first day of this session, and until otherwise ordered.

Mr. ROBIE. I now call the previous question.

The previous question was seconded, and the main question ordered to be put.

Mr. GORMAN. I ask the unanimous consent of the House to make a report from the Committee on Printing.

Objection was made.

Mr. MOREHEAD. I move to lay the resolution and amendments on the table; and upon that question I demand the yeas and nays.

Mr. GORMAN. It now lacks but twenty-seven minutes of the time fixed for adjournment. I hope the House will allow a report to be made from the Committee on Printing, providing for the printing of Stansbury's Report of the Exploration and Survey of the Valley of the Great Salt Lake. No copies of that work have been ordered to be printed. I ask the unanimous consent of the House to offer the following resolution:

Resolved, That ten thousand extra copies of Stansbury's Report of the Exploration of the Valley of the Great Salt Lake be printed for the use of the members of this House.

Mr. BEALE. I object.

Mr. GORMAN. I hope the gentleman will withdraw his objection.

Mr. STEVENS, of Pennsylvania. I object. We want no more Salt Lake reports.

Mr. GORMAN. I move to suspend the rules to enable me to offer the resolution.

The SPEAKER. The pending question is the motion to lay on the table the resolution and amendments offered a few minutes ago.

Mr. MOREHEAD. I will withdraw that motion.

Mr. LETCHER. I renew the motion to lay the resolution and amendments on the table, and call the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered—

Mr. POLK. I ask the gentleman who offered this resolution to withdraw it. The yeas and nays have been called upon it, and they will consume all the time we have left. Let us go to the consideration of private claims.

[Cries of "Object!" "Object!" and "Call the roll!"]

A message was here received from the President of the United States, by the hands of MILLARD P. FILLMORE, his Private Secretary, informing the House that he had approved and signed the following bills, viz:

A bill making appropriations for the civil and diplomatic expenses of the Government during the year ending the 30th of June, 1853, and for other purposes;

A bill making appropriations for light-houses, light-boats, buoys, &c., and providing for the erection and establishment of the same, and for other purposes;

A bill making appropriations for the service of the Post Office Department during the year ending the 30th of June, 1853;

A bill making appropriations for the support of the Army during the year ending June 30, 1853; and

A bill making appropriations for the naval service during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1853.

[Cries of "Call the roll."]

The Clerk then proceeded to call the roll upon the motion to lay the resolution and amendments on the table, and there were—yeas 67, nays 88; as follows:

YEAS—Messrs. Allison, Averett, Barrere, Bowie, Bragg, Brenton, Albert G. Brown, George H. Brown, Burrows, E. Carrington Cabell, Cartter, Chapman, Chastain, Clingman, John G. Stanton, Abraham P. Stephens, Thaddeus Stevens, St. Martin, Strother, Stuart, Sutherland, Sweetser, Walbridge, Walsh, Wilcox, Wildrick, and Woodward—88.

So the House refused to lay the resolution on the table.

While the roll was being called,

Mr. HENN, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported as correctly enrolled the following bill:

An act to establish certain post routes.

A message was also received from the President of the United States, by the hands of MILLARD P. FILLMORE, his Private Secretary, informing the House that he had approved and signed the above bill.

The question then recurred upon the amendment offered by Mr. EDMUNDSON to the amendment.

Mr. JOHN W. HOWE demanded the yeas and nays; and they were ordered.

Mr. CARTTER. I move that the House do now adjourn.

Mr. STANTON, of Tennessee. I rise to a question of order. The House have fixed the time of adjournment at twelve o'clock, and I submit that it is not in order to adjourn before that hour, allowing ten minutes for difference of time.

Mr. CARTTER. I will withdraw the motion.

Mr. POLK. I ask the unanimous consent of the House to make a motion, that the House recede from its amendment to the bill for the relief of Mrs. Margaret L. Worth.

Mr. HARRIS, of Tennessee. I object.

Mr. POLK. I move to suspend the rules. I want my name to be placed on the record against that amendment.

Mr. HARRIS. I hope my colleague will have that opportunity.

It now being precisely twelve o'clock,

The SPEAKER said: The hour fixed for the adjournment of the present session of Congress having arrived, the Chair announces that this House stands adjourned sine die.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That there shall be a Superintendent of the Public Printing, who shall hold his office for the term of two years, who shall receive for his services a salary of twenty-five hundred dollars per annum, and who shall give bond with two sureties, to be approved by the Secretary of the Interior, in the penalty of twenty thousand dollars, for the faithful discharge of his duties under this law. The said Superintendent shall be a practical printer, versed in the various branches of the arts of printing and book-binding, and he shall not be interested directly or indirectly in any contract for printing for Congress or for any Department or Bureau of the Government of the United States. The first Superintendent under this law shall hold his office until the commencement of the Thirty-third Congress, and the Superintendents thereafter appointed shall hold their offices for two years, commencing with the first day of the session of each Congress.

SEC. 3. And be it further enacted, That it shall be the duty of said Superintendent to receive from the Secretary of the Senate and Clerk of the House of Representatives all matter ordered by Congress to be printed, and from the several chiefs of Departments and heads of Bureaus all matter ordered by them respectively, to be printed at the public expense, and to keep a faithful account of the same, in the order in which the same shall be received, in a book or books to be by him kept for that purpose. He shall deliver said matter to the public printer or printers in the order in which it shall be received, unless otherwise ordered by the Joint Committee on Printing. He shall inspect the work when executed by the public printer or printers, and shall record in a book or books, to be by him kept for that purpose, the dates at which the returns of said work are made, and whether the same is executed in a neat and workmanlike manner, upon the paper furnished to the public printers by said Superintendent, and the amount allowed by said Superintendent for the said printing. It shall be his duty to supervise the execution of the public printing; to inspect the work when executed, and to see that the same is done with neatness and dispatch; to report every failure or delinquency of duty on the part of the public printer, and from time to time to report the said delinquencies to the Joint Committee of Congress on Printing. He shall issue his certificate for the amount due to the public printer for such work as shall have been faithfully executed, which certificate shall be made payable to the public printer at the Treasury of the United States, and shall not be assignable or transferable by indorsement or delivery to any third party. Said certificate of the Superintendent shall be a sufficient voucher for the Comptroller to pass, and for the Treasurer, upon the order of the Second Comptroller, to pay the same.

SEC. 4. And be it further enacted, That it shall be the duty of the said Superintendent of the public printing to advertise annually in one or more newspapers of general circulation in the cities of Boston, New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Washington, New Orleans, Louisville, and Cincinnati, for the space of sixty days prior to the first of December, for sealed proposals to furnish the Government of the United States all paper which may be necessary for the execution of the public printing, of quality and in quantity to be specified in the said advertisements from year to year. He shall open such proposals as may be made, in the presence of the President of the Senate and Speaker of the House of Representatives, on the first Tuesday after the first Monday of December, annually, provided a Speaker shall have been elected, or as soon thereafter as a Speaker shall be elected, and shall award the contract for furnishing all of said paper, or such class thereof as may be bid for to the lowest bidder, whose sample, accompanying his bid, shall most nearly approximate to the quality of paper (size, weight, and texture all considered) advertised for by the said Superintendent. The sample offered with the bid accepted shall be preserved by the said Superintendent, and it shall be his duty to compare these with the paper furnished by the public contractor; and he shall not accept any paper from the contractor which does not conform to the sample preserved as aforesaid. It shall be the duty of the Superintendent of the public printing to deliver the paper for the printing of the United States upon the requisitions of the public printer or printers, and to charge him or them therewith; and, as the printing is returned and passed by the said Superintendent, he shall credit the public printer with the quantity used in the public service. It shall be the duty of said Superintendent to have the requisitions of the printer and the returns of paper by the printer balanced at least once in each year, and in default thereof to report the same to Congress for such proceedings as Congress may direct. In default of any contractor under this law to comply with his contract in furnishing the paper in proper time and of proper quality, the Superintendent is authorized to advertise for proposals, as hereinbefore provided, and award the contract to the lowest bidder; and for any increase of cost to the Government in procuring a proper supply of paper for the use of the Government, the contractor in default and his securities shall be charged with and held responsible for the same, and shall be prosecuted upon their bond, by the Superintendent, in the name of the United States, in the circuit court of the United States for the District of Columbia.

And should the printer detain any matter longer than thirty days, a deduction of five per centum shall be made by the Superintendent, from the account of the printer, for such job; and an additional deduction of five per centum for an additional detention of twenty days. If the public printer shall detain such matter for sixty days, the Superintendent shall withdraw it entirely, and shall employ another printer to execute the same with promptness, upon the terms provided by law; and in such case the public printer shall not be allowed therefor.

SEC. 6. And be it further enacted, That the Superintendent of the Public Printing shall not be directly or indirectly interested in the business of the Public Printing, or in any material to be used by the public printer, or in any contract for furnishing paper to Congress or to any department or bureau of the Government of the United States. For any violation of this provision the Superintendent of the Public Printing shall forfeit his office, and may be indicted before the district court for the District of Columbia, and, if found guilty, shall be imprisoned in the penitentiary of the District of Columbia for any term not less than one nor more than five years, and, in addition thereto, may be fined in any sum from one thousand to ten thousand dollars.

SEC. 7. And be it further enacted, That when any document shall be ordered to be printed by both Houses of Congress, the entire printing of such document shall be done by the printer of that House which first ordered the same. And whenever the same person or the same firm shall be printer for both Houses of Congress, and both Houses shall order the same document to be printed within three weeks of the same time, composition shall be charged but once for said document; and no sum shall be paid to said printer for altering the headings from the form in which he printed them first to the form or forms in which such document shall afterwards be printed.

SEC. 8. And be it further enacted, That there shall be elected a public printer for each House of Congress, to do the public printing for the Congress for which he or they may be chosen, and such printing for the executive departments and bureaus of the Government of the United States, as may

If it cannot, it shall be printed with brevier type, each page containing not less than two thousand eight hundred ems; and if it cannot be brought into a royal octavo page with brevier type, so as to be understood with facility, it shall be printed with nonpareil type, each page containing not less than four thousand two hundred ems; and when it cannot be brought into a royal octavo page with nonpareil type, so as to be read with facility, it shall be printed with brevier type in a broadside, showing the whole table at one view, and be so filled that it can be bound in a royal octavo volume.

When matter is leaded, the composition shall be counted as if the matter were printed solid, and not leaded.

The paper for any other species of printing ordered by Congress may be of such size and quality as the Superintendent of the Public Printing may deem suitable and proper.

SEC. 10. And be it further enacted, That the public printer, or printers, may be required by the Superintendent to work at night as well as through the day upon the public printing, during the session of Congress, when the exigencies of the public service require it.

SEC. 11. And be it further enacted, That the same prices shall be paid for printing for the executive departments that are paid for printing for Congress, except for printing post-bills, which shall be printed on paper not less than sixteen by twenty-six inches, and for printing on parchment. There shall be paid for printing the post-bills at the rate of one dollar per thousand sheets, and at the rate of ten dollars per thousand for printing parchments; but nothing shall be allowed for altering post-bills when the alteration consists in the mere change of a postmaster's name; and nothing herein contained shall prevent the heads of executive departments from employing printers out of the city of Washington to execute such printing for any of said departments as may be required for use out of Washington, when the same can be executed elsewhere as cheap as at the rates herein specified, increased by the cost of transporting the printed matter to the State or States where such matter may be required for use in the public service.

Said committee shall have power to adopt such measures as may be deemed necessary to remedy any neglect or delay in the execution of the public printing, provided that no contract, agreement, or arrangement entered into by this committee shall take effect until the same shall have been approved by that House of Congress to which the printing belongs, and when the printing delayed relates to the business of both Houses, until both Houses shall have approved of such contract or arrangement. All motions to print extra copies of any bill, report, or other public document, shall be referred to the members of the Committee on Printing from the House in which the same may be made.

SEC. 13. And be it further enacted, That all acts or joint resolutions conflicting with the provisions of this act are hereby repealed; but nothing herein contained shall be construed to authorize the cancellation of any contract now or heretofore entered into with any printer under the laws heretofore in force, or to abrogate his rights in any way without his consent. Nothing in this act shall be construed to authorize the printing of the census, but the same shall be done as may be provided by law hereafter.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That the Postmaster General be, and he is hereby, authorized to enter into a contract for the transportation of the United States mail on board of the steam-vessels which at present ply regularly between Boston, in the State of Massachusetts, and Halifax, in Nova Scotia, upon such terms as may appear to him reasonable: Provided, That the contracts authorized by this section shall be let to the lowest bidder according to the provisions of the existing laws: And provided further, That the amount paid shall in no case exceed the amount of postage derived from the said mails.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That if any person shall steal, purloin, embezzle, or obtain by any false pretense, or shall aid or assist in stealing, purloining, embezzling, or obtaining by any false pretense, or shall knowingly and unlawfully make, forge, or counterfeit, or cause to be unlawfully made, forged, or counterfeited, or knowingly aid or assist in falsely and unlawfully making, forging, or counterfeiting any key suited to any lock which has been or shall be adopted for use by the Post Office Department of the United States, and which shall be in use on any of the mails or mail bags of the said Post Office Department, or shall have in his possession any such mail key or any such mail lock, with the intent unlawfully or improperly to use, sell, or otherwise dispose of the same, or to cause the same to be unlawfully or improperly used, sold, or otherwise disposed of, or who being employed in the manufacture of the locks or keys for the use of the said Post Office Department, whether as contractor or otherwise, shall deliver or cause to be delivered any finished or unfinished key or lock used or designed by the said Post Office Department, or the interior part of any such mail lock, to any person not duly authorized under the hand of the Postmaster General of the United States and the seal of the said Post Office Department to receive the same, (unless such person so receiving the same shall be the contractor for furnishing such locks and keys, or engaged in the manufacture thereof in the manner authorized by the contract, or the agent for such manufacturer,) such persons so offending shall be deemed guilty of felony, and, on conviction thereof, shall be imprisoned for a period not exceeding ten years.

SEC. 4. And be it further enacted, That if any person shall steal, purloin, or embezzle any mail bags in use by or belonging to the Post Office Department of the United States, or any other property in use by or belonging to the said Post Office Department, or shall, for any lucre, gain, or convenience, appropriate any such property to his own, or any other than its proper use, or for any lucre or gain shall convey away any such property to the hindrance or detriment of the public service of the United States, the person so offending, his counsellors, aiders, and abettors (knowing of and privy to any offense aforesaid) shall, on conviction thereof, if the value of such property shall exceed twenty-five dollars, be deemed guilty of felony, and shall be imprisoned for a period not exceeding three years; or if the value of such property shall be less than twenty-five dollars, shall be imprisoned not more than one year, or be fined not less than ten dollars, nor more than two hundred dollars for every such offense.

SEC. 5. And be it further enacted, That no collector or other officer of the customs shall permit any ship or vessel arriving within any port or collection district of the United States to make entry or break bulk until all letters on board the same shall be delivered into the post office at or nearest said port or place, nor until the captain or commander of such ship or vessel shall have signed and sworn to a declaration before such collector or officer of the customs, in the form and to the effect following, that is to say: "I, A B, commander of the [state the name of the ship or vessel,] arriving from [state the place,] and now lying in the port of [state the name of the port,] do, as required by law, solemnly swear (or affirm as the case may be) that I have, to the best of my knowledge or belief, delivered, or caused to be delivered into the post office at or nearest said port, every letter and every bag, parcel, or package of letters that were on board the [state the name of the ship or vessel,] during her last voyage, and that I have so delivered or caused to be delivered all such letters, bags, parcels, and packages as were in my possession or under my power or control." And the collector, and every officer of the customs at every port, without special instructions, and every special agent of the Post Office Department, when instructed by the Postmaster General to make examinations and seizures, shall carefully search every vessel for letters which may be on board, or have been carried or transported contrary to law, and each and every of such officers and agents, and every marshal of the United States and his deputies, shall at all times have power to seize all letters, and packages, and parcels containing letters which shall have been sent or conveyed contrary to law on board any ship or vessel, or on or over any post route of the United States, and to convey such letters to the nearest post office, or may, if the Postmaster General and the Secretary of the Treasury shall so direct, detain the said letters, or any part thereof, until two months after the trial and final determination of all suits and proceedings which may at any time within six months after such seizure be brought against any person for sending, or carrying, or transporting any such letter contrary to any provisions of any act of Congress; and one half of any penalties that may be recovered for the illegal sending, carrying, or transportation of any such letters shall be paid to the officer so seizing, and the other half to the use of the Post Office Department; and every package or parcel so seized, in which any letter shall be concealed, shall be forfeited to the United States, and the same proceedings may be had to enforce such forfeiture as are authorized in respect to goods, wares, and merchandise forfeited by reason of any violation of the revenue laws of the United States; and all laws for the benefit and protection of officers of the customs seizing goods, wares, or merchandise for a violation of any revenue law of the United States shall apply to the officers and agents making seizures by virtue of this act.

SEC. 6. And be it further enacted, That the Postmaster General may from time to time, by and with the advice and consent of the President, make any arrangements which may be deemed just and expedient for allowing the mails of Canada, or of any other Province, State, or country adjoining the United States, to be carried or transported at the expense of the Province, State, or country to which such mails belong, over any part or portion of the territory of the United States, from one point in the Province, State, or country to which such mails belong, to any other point in the same, upon obtaining the same privileges for the transportation of the mails of the United States through the Province, State, or country to which such privileges shall be granted: Provided, That such privileges may at any time be annulled by the President of the United States, or by joint resolution of the two Houses of Congress, from and after the expiration of one month next succeeding the day on which the notice of the act of the President or of the joint resolution of the two Houses shall be given to the chief executive officer or head of the Post Office Department of the Province, State, or country whose privilege is to be thereby annulled.

SEC. 7. And be it further enacted, That every mail, of any Province, State, or country having the privilege authorized to be granted in and by the next preceding section, shall, while in the territories of the United States, be deemed and taken to be a mail of the United States, so far as to make any violation thereof, any depredation thereon, or any act or offense in respect thereto, or any part thereof, which would be punishable under the existing laws of the United States, in case the same had been a mail or part of a mail of the United States, an offense of the same grade, and punishable in the same manner, and to the same extent, as though the said mails were those of the United States; and in any indictment for such act or offense, the said mails or any part thereof may be alleged to be, and on the trial of any such indictment they shall be, deemed and held to be mails or parts of mails of the United States.

SEC. 8. And be it further enacted, That the Postmaster General shall be, and he is hereby, authorized to provide and furnish to all postmasters and other persons applying and paying therefor suitable letter envelopes, with such water marks or other guards against counterfeits as he may deem expedient, and with one or more suitable postage stamps, with such device and of such denomination and value as he may direct, printed or impressed thereon, which envelopes shall be sold at the cost of procuring and furnishing the same, as near as may be, with the addition of the value or denomination of the postage stamps so printed or impressed thereon or attached thereto as aforesaid; and letters, when inclosed in such envelope, with postage stamps printed or impressed thereon, (the postage stamp or stamps in every such case being of the value, denomination, or amount required to prepay the postage which would be chargeable on such letters and envelopes if sent by mail to the place of their destination under the provisions of the laws then in force, and such stamps and envelopes not having been before used,) shall pass in the mails as prepaid letters; and all letters inclosed in such envelopes as shall be provided and furnished by the Postmaster General, as first in this section prescribed, and with postage stamps thereon as aforesaid, (and such postage stamps on such envelopes being equal in value and amount to the rates of postage to which such letters would be liable if sent by mail; and such postage stamps and envelopes not having been before used,) may be sent, conveyed, and delivered otherwise than by post or mail, notwithstanding any prohibition thereof under any existing law: Provided, That the said envelope shall be duly sealed, or otherwise firmly and securely closed, so that such letter cannot be taken therefrom without tearing or destroying such envelope; and the same duly directed and addressed, and the date of such letter, or the receipt or transmission thereof, to be written or stamped or otherwise appear on such envelope.

SEC. 9. And be it further enacted, That the Auditor of the Treasury for the Post Office Department, may, under such regulations and restrictions as the Postmaster General shall prescribe, allow to every postmaster, whose office was not established until after the first day of July, one thousand eight hundred and fifty, or whose commissions, in consequence of the increase of labor and business at his office, shall have equalled or exceeded the commissions allowed at such office for the year ending on the thirtieth day of June, one thousand eight hundred and fifty-one, such compensation, in addition to his legal commissions, as will, in the judgment of such Auditor, make the compensation of such postmaster equal, as near as may be, to the compensation of other postmasters in the same section of the country whose labors are the same as his, and who are entitled to an additional allowance under the sixth section of the act entitled "An act to reduce and modify the rates of postage in the United States, and for other purposes," approved March third, eighteen hundred and fifty-one, and under orders of the Postmaster General, made in pursuance of the provisions of said sixth section of the act aforesaid.

SEC. 10. And be it further enacted, That all fines and penalties imposed for any violation of any law relating to the Post Office Department shall, when collected or recovered, be paid into the Treasury to the credit of the United States for the use of the Post Office Department, excepting, however, such part thereof as may by law belong to the party informing or prosecuting for the same.

SEC. 11. And be it further enacted, That it shall be the duty of the Postmaster General to issue proposals and contract for the transportation of a daily mail between Louisville and Cairo, St. Louis and Cairo, Cairo and Memphis, and Memphis and New Orleans, and to supply such intermediate points as he may order from time to time on suitable and safe steamboats.

APPROVED, August 31, 1852.

PUBLIC, LXII.—An Act to amend an act entitled "An Act to provide for the Better Security of the Lives of Passengers on board of Vessels propelled in whole or in part by Steam, and for other purposes."

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That no license, register, or enrollment, under the provisions of this or the act to which this is an amendment shall be granted, or other papers issued, by any collector to any vessel propelled in whole or in part by steam, and carrying passengers, until he shall have satisfactory evidence that all the provisions of this act have been fully complied with; and if any such vessel shall be navigated, with passengers on board, without complying with the terms of this act, the owners thereof and the vessel itself shall be subject to the penalties contained in the second section of the act to which this is an amendment.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That it shall be the duty of the inspectors of the hulls of steamers, and the inspectors of boilers and engines, appointed under the provisions of this act, to examine and see that suitable and safe provisions are made throughout such vessels to guard against loss or danger from fire; and no license or other papers on any application shall be granted if the provisions of this act for preventing fires are not complied with, or if any combustible material liable to take fire from heated iron, or any other heat generated on board of such vessels in and about the boilers, pipes, or machinery, shall be placed at less than eighteen inches distant from such heated metal or other substance likely to cause ignition, unless a column of air or water intervenes between such heated surface and any wood or other combustible material so exposed, sufficient at all times and under all circumstances to prevent ignition; and further, when wood is so exposed to ignition, as an additional preventive, it shall be shielded by some incombustible material in such manner as to leave the air to circulate freely between such material and the wood: Provided, however, That when the structure of such steamers is such, or the arrangement of the boilers or machinery is such that the requirements aforesaid cannot without serious inconvenience or sacrifice be complied with, inspectors may vary therefrom if, in their judgment, it can be done with safety.

SEC. 3. And be it further enacted, That every vessel so propelled by steam, and carrying passengers, shall have not less than three double-acting forcing pumps, with chamber at least four inches in diameter, two to be worked by hand and one by steam, if steam can be employed, otherwise by hand; one whereof shall be placed near the stern—one near the stem and one amidship; each having a suitable well-fitted hose, of at least two thirds the length of the vessel, kept at all times in perfect order, and ready for immediate use; each of which pumps shall also be supplied with water by a pipe connected therewith, and passing through the side of the vessel so low as to be at all times in the water when she is afloat: Provided, That in steamers not exceeding two hundred tons measurement, two of said pumps may be dispensed with, and in steamers of over two hundred tons, and not exceeding five hundred tons measurement, one of said pumps may be dispensed with.

SEC. 4. And be it further enacted, That every such vessel carrying passengers shall have at least two good and suitable boats supplied with oars, in good condition at all times for service, one of which boats shall be a life-boat made of metal, fire-proof, and in all respects a good, substantial, safe sea-boat, capable of sustaining, inside and outside, fifty persons, with life-lines attached to the gunwale, at suitable distances. And every such vessel of more than five hundred tons, and not exceeding eight hundred tons measurement, shall have three life-boats; and every such vessel of more than eight hundred tons and not exceeding fifteen hundred tons measurement, shall have four life-boats; and every such vessel of more than fifteen hundred tons measurement, shall have six life-boats; all of which life-boats shall be well furnished with oars and other necessary apparatus: Provided, however, The inspectors are hereby authorized to exempt steamers navigating rivers only from the obligation to carry the life-boat herein provided for, more than one, the same being of suitable dimensions, made of metal, and furnished with all necessary apparatus for use and safety; such steamers having other suitable provisions for the preservation of life in case of fire or other disaster.

SEC. 5. And be it further enacted, That every such vessel carrying passengers shall also be provided with a good life-preserver made of suitable material, and float well adapted to the purpose, for each and every passenger, which life-preservers and floats shall always be kept in convenient and accessible places in such vessel and in readiness for the use of the passengers; and every such vessel shall also keep twenty-five buckets and five axes; and there shall be kept on board every such vessel exceeding five hundred tons measurement, buckets and axes after the rate of their tonnage, as follows: On every vessel of six hundred tons measurement, five buckets and one ax for each one hundred tons measurement, decreasing this proportion as the tonnage of the vessel increases, so that any such vessel of thirty-five hundred tons, and all such vessels exceeding the same, shall not be required to keep but three buckets for each one hundred tons of measurement, and but one ax for every five buckets.

SEC. 6. And be it further enacted, That every such vessel carrying passengers on the main or lower deck shall be provided with sufficient means convenient to such passengers for their escape to the upper deck in case of fire or other accident endangering life.

SEC. 7. And be it further enacted, That no loose hemp shall be carried on board any such vessel; nor shall baled hemp be carried on the deck or guards thereof, unless the bales are compactly pressed and well covered with bagging or a similar fabric; nor shall gunpowder, oil of turpentine, oil of vitriol, camphene, or other explosive burning fluids or materials which ignite by friction, be carried on board any such vessel as freight, except in cases of special license for that purpose, as hereinafter provided; and all such articles kept on board as stores shall be secured in metallic vessels. And every person who shall knowingly violate any of the provisions of this section shall pay a penalty of one hundred dollars for each offense, to be recovered by action of debt in any court of competent jurisdiction.

SEC. 8. And be it further enacted, That hereafter all gunpowder, oil of turpentine, oil of vitriol, camphene, or other explosive burning fluids, and materials which ignite by friction, when packed or put up for shipment on board of any such vessel, shall be securely packed or put up separately from each other and from all other articles; and the package, box, cask, or vessel containing the same, shall be distinctly marked on the outside with the name or description of the articles contained therein. And every person who shall pack or put up, or cause to be packed or put up for shipment on board of any such vessel, any gunpowder, oil of turpentine, oil of vitriol, camphene, or other explosive burning fluids, or materials which ignite by friction, otherwise than as aforesaid, or shall ship the same, unless packed and marked as aforesaid, on board of any steam-vessel carrying passengers, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and punished by a fine not exceeding one thousand dollars, or imprisonment not exceeding eighteen months, or both.

SEC. 9. And be it further enacted, That instead of the existing provisions of law for the inspection of steamers and their equipment, and instead of the present system of pilotage of such vessels, and the present mode of employing engineers on board the same, the following regulations shall be observed, to wit: The collector or other chief officer of the customs, together with the supervising inspector for the district, and the judge of the district court of the United States for the district in each of the following collection districts, namely, New Orleans and St. Louis, on the Mississippi river; Louisville, Cincinnati, Wheeling, and Pittsburg, on the Ohio river; Buffalo and Cleveland, on Lake Erie; Detroit, upon Detroit river; Nashville, upon the Cumberland river; Chicago, on Lake Michigan; Oswego, on Lake Ontario; Burlington, in Vermont; Galveston, in Texas; and Mobile, in Alabama; Savannah, in Georgia; Charleston, in South Carolina; Norfolk, in Virginia; Baltimore, in Maryland; Philadelphia, in Pennsylvania; New York, in New York; New London, in Connecticut; Providence, in Rhode Island; Boston, in Massachusetts; Portland, in Maine; and San Francisco, in California, shall designate two inspectors of good character, and suitable qualifications, to perform the services required of them by this act within the respective districts for which they shall be appointed—one of whom, from his practical knowledge of ship-building, and the uses of steam in navigation, shall be fully competent to make a reliable estimate of the strength, seaworthiness, and other qualities of the hulls of steamers, and their equipment, deemed essential to safety of life, when such vessels are employed in the carriage of passengers, to be called the Inspector of Hulls; the other of whom, from his knowledge and experience of the duties of an engineer employed in navigating vessels by steam, and also in the construction and use of boilers, and the machinery and appurtenances therewith connected, shall be able to form a reliable opinion of the quality of the material, the strength, form, workmanship, and suitableness of such boilers and machinery to be employed in the carriage of passengers without hazard to life from imperfections in the material, workmanship, or arrangement of any part of such apparatus for steaming, to be called the Inspector of Boilers; and these two persons, thus designated, if approved by the Secretary of the Treasury, shall be from the time of such designation inspectors, empowered and required to perform the duties herein specified, to wit:

First. Upon application in writing by the master or owner they shall, once in every year at least, carefully inspect the hull of each steamer belonging to their respective districts and employed in the carriage of passengers, and shall satisfy themselves that every such vessel so submitted to their inspection is of a structure suitable for the service in which she is to be employed, has suitable accommodations for her crew and passengers, and is in a condition to warrant the belief that she may be used in navigation as a steamer with safety to life, and that all the requirements of law in regard to fires, boats, pumps, hose, life-preservers, floats, and other things are faithfully complied with; and if they deem it expedient they may direct the vessel to be put in motion, and may adopt any other suitable means to test her sufficiency and that of her equipment.

Second. They shall also inspect the boilers of such steamers before the same shall be used, and once in every year thereafter, subjecting them to a hydrostatic pressure, the limit to which, not exceeding one hundred and sixty-five pounds to the square inch for high-pressure boilers, may be prescribed by the owner or the master, and shall satisfy themselves by examination and experimental trials that the boilers are well made, of good and suitable material; that the openings for the passage of water and steam, respectively, and all pipes and tubes exposed to heat, are of proper dimensions and free from obstruction; that the spaces between the flues are sufficient, and that the fire line of the furnace is below the prescribed water line of the boilers; and that such boilers, and the machinery, and the appurtenances may be safely employed in the service proposed in the written application, without peril to life; and shall also satisfy themselves that the safety-valves are of suitable dimensions, sufficient in number, well arranged, and in good working order, (one of which may, if necessary in the opinion of the inspectors to secure safety, be taken wholly from the control of all persons engaged in navigating such vessel;) that there is a suitable number of gauge-cocks properly inserted, and a suitable water-gauge and steam-gauge indicating the height of the water and the pressure of the steam; that in or upon the outside flue of each outside high-pressure boiler there is placed in a suitable manner alloyed metals, fusible by the heat of the boiler when raised to the highest working pressure allowed, and that in or upon the top of the flues of all other high-pressure boilers in the steamer such alloyed metals are placed as aforesaid, fusing at ten pounds greater pressure than said metals on the outside boilers, thereby in each case letting steam escape; and that adequate and certain provision is made for an ample supply of water to feed the boilers at all times, whether such vessel is in motion or not; so that in high-pressure boilers the water shall not be less than four inches above the flue: Provided, however, In steamers hereafter supplied with new high-pressure boilers, if the alloy fuses on the outer boilers at a pressure of ten pounds exceeding the working pressure allowed, and at twenty pounds above said pressure on the inner boilers, it shall be a sufficient compliance with this act.

Third. That in subjecting to the hydrostatic test aforesaid boilers called and usually known under the designation of high-pressure boilers, the inspectors shall assume one hundred and ten pounds to the square inch as the maximum pressure allowable as a working power for a new boiler forty-two inches in diameter, made of inspected iron plates at least one fourth of an inch thick, in the best manner, and of the quality herein required, and shall rate the working power of all high-pressure boilers, whether of greater or less diameter, old or new, according to their strength compared with this standard; and in all cases the test applied shall exceed the working power allowed in the ratio of one hundred and sixty-five to one hundred and ten, and no high-pressure boilers hereafter made shall be rated above this standard; and in subjecting to the test aforesaid that class of boilers usually designated and known as low-pressure boilers, the said inspectors shall allow as a working power of each new boiler a pressure of only three fourths the number of pounds to the square inch to which it shall have been subjected by the hydrostatic test and found to be sufficient therefor, using the water in such tests at a temperature not exceeding sixty degrees Fahrenheit; but should such inspectors be of opinion that said boiler, by reason of its construction or material, will not safely allow so high a working pressure, they may, for reasons to be stated specifically in their certificate, fix the working pressure of said boiler at less than three fourths of said test pressure; and no low-pressure boiler hereafter made shall be rated in its working pressure above the aforesaid standard; and provided that the same rules shall be observed in regard to boilers heretofore made, unless the proportion between such boilers and the cylinders, or some other cause, renders it manifest that its application would be unjust, in which cases the inspectors may depart from these rules, if it can be done with safety; but in no case shall the working pressure allowed exceed the hydrostatic test; and no valve, under any circumstances, shall be loaded or so managed in any way as to subject a boiler to a greater pressure than the amount allowed by the inspectors, nor shall any boiler or pipe be approved which is made in whole or in part of bad material, or is unsafe in its form, or dangerous from defective workmanship, age, use, or any other cause.

Fourth. That when the inspection in detail is completed, and the inspectors approve of the vessel and her equipment throughout, they shall make and subscribe a certificate to the collector of the district, substantially as follows:

State of _____, district of _____:

Application having been made in writing by _____ to the subscribers, inspectors for said district, to examine the steamer _____, of _____, whereof _____ are owners and _____ is master, we, having performed that service, now, on this _____ day of _____, Anno Domini _____, do certify that she was built in the year _____, is in all respects staunch, sea-worthy, and in good condition for navigation, having suitable means of escape in case of accident from the main to the upper deck; that she is provided with [here insert the number of state-rooms, the number of berths therein, the number of other permanent berths for cabin passengers, the number of berths for deck or other classes of passengers, the number of passengers for each class for whom she has suitable accommodations; and in case of steamers sailing to or from any European port, or to or from any port on the Atlantic or the Pacific, a distance of one thousand miles or upwards, the number of each she is permitted to carry; and in case of a steamer sailing to any other port, a distance of five hundred miles or upwards, the number of deck passengers she is permitted to carry; also the number of boilers, and the form, dimensions, and material of which each boiler is made, the thickness of the metal, and when made; if after this act takes effect, and of iron, whether they are such in all respects as the act requires, whether each boiler has been tried by hydrostatic test, the amount of pressure to the square inch in pounds applied to it, whether the amount allowed as the maximum working power was determined by the rule prescribed by this act, if not, the reason for a departure from it; also the number of safety-valves required, their capacity, the load prescribed for each valve, how many are left in the control of the persons navigating the vessel, whether one is withdrawn, and the manner of securing it against interference; also the number and dimensions of supply pipes, and whether they and the other means provided are sufficient at all times and under all circumstances when in good order to keep the water up four inches at least above the top of the flue; also the number and dimensions of the steam-pipes, the number and kind of engines, the dimensions of their cylinders, the number and capacity of the forcing pumps, and how worked; the number and kind of gauge-cocks, water, and steam-gauges, where situate, and how secured; also the manner of using alloyed metals and the pressure at which they are known by the inspectors to fuse; the equipments for the extinguishment of fires, including hose, fire-buckets, and axes; the provisions for saving life in case of accident, including boats, life-preservers, and substitutes therefor, where kept, and all other provisions made on board for the security of the lives of passengers.] And we further certify, that the equipment of the vessel throughout, including pipes, pumps, and other means to keep the water up to the point aforesaid, hose, boats, life-preservers, and other things, is in conformity with the provisions of law; and that we declare it to be our deliberate conviction, founded upon the inspection which we have made, that the vessel may be employed as a steamer upon the waters named in the application, without peril to life from any imperfection of form, materials, workmanship, or arrangement of the several parts, or from age or use. And we further certify, that said vessel is to run within the following limits, to wit: from _____ to _____ and back, touching at intermediate places. And which certificate shall be verified by the oaths of the inspectors signing it, before a person competent by law to administer oaths. And in case the said inspectors do not grant a certificate of approval, they shall state in writing, and sign the same, their reasons for their disapproval.

Fifth. Upon the application of the master or owner of any steamer employed in the carriage of passengers, for a license to carry gunpowder, oil of turpentine, oil of vitriol, camphene, or other explosive burning fluids and materials which ignite by friction, or either of them, the inspectors shall examine such vessel, and if they find that she is provided with chests or safes composed of metal, or entirely lined therewith, or one or more apartments thoroughly lined with metal at a secure distance from any fire, they may grant a certificate to that effect, authorizing such vessel to carry as freight any of the articles aforesaid, those of each description to be secured in such chest, safe, or apartment containing no other article, and carried at a distance from any fire to be specified in the certificate: Provided, That any such certificate may be revoked or annulled at any time by the inspectors, upon proof that either of the said articles have been carried on board said vessel at a place and in a manner not authorized by such certificate, or that any of the provisions of this act in relation thereto have been violated.

Sixth. The said inspectors shall keep a regular record of certificates of inspections of vessels, their boilers, engines, and machinery, whether of approval or disapproval, and when recorded the original shall be delivered to the collector of the district; they shall keep a like record of certificates authorizing gunpowder, oil of turpentine, oil of vitriol, camphene, or other explosive burning fluids, and materials which ignite by friction, or either of them to be carried as freight, by any such vessel, and when recorded deliver the originals to said collector; they shall keep a like record of all licenses to pilots and engineers, and all revocations thereof, and shall from time to time report to the supervising inspector of their respective districts, in writing, their decisions on all applications for such licenses, or proceedings for the revocation thereof, and all testimony received by them in such proceedings.

Seventh. The inspectors shall license and classify all engineers and pilots of steamers carrying passengers.

Eighth. Whenever any person claiming to be qualified to perform the duty of engineer upon steamers carrying passengers, shall apply for a certificate, the board of inspectors shall examine the applicant, and the proofs which he produces in support of his claim; and if, upon full consideration, they are satisfied that his character, habits of life, knowledge and experience in the duties of an engineer, are all such as to authorize the belief that the applicant is a suitable and safe person to be intrusted with the powers and duties of such a station, they shall give him a certificate to that effect for one year, signed by them, in which certificate they shall state the time of the examination, and shall assign the appointee to the appropriate class of engineers.

Ninth. Whenever any person claiming to be a skillful pilot for any such vessel shall offer himself for a license, the said board shall make diligent inquiry as to his character and merits; and if satisfied that he possesses the requisite skill, and is trustworthy and faithful, they shall give him a certificate to that effect, licensing him for one year to be a pilot of any such vessels within the limit prescribed in the certificate; but the license of any such engineer or pilot may be revoked upon proof of negligence, unskillfulness, or inattention to the duties of the station: Provided, however, if in cases of refusal to license engineers or pilots, and in cases of revocation of any license by the local board of inspectors, any engineer or pilot deeming himself wronged by such refusal or revocation, may, within thirty days after notice thereof, on application to a supervising inspector, have his case examined anew by such supervising inspector, upon producing a certified copy of the reasons assigned by the local board for their doings in the premises; and such supervising inspector may revoke the decision of such local board of inspectors and license such pilot or engineer; and like proceedings, upon the same conditions, may be had by the master or owner of any such vessel, or of any steamboat boiler, for which the said local board shall have refused, upon inspection, to give a certificate of approval, or shall have notified such master or owner of any repairs necessary after such certificate has been granted.

Tenth. It shall be unlawful for any person to employ, or any person to serve, as engineer or pilot on any such vessel, who is not licensed by the inspectors; and any one so offending shall forfeit one hundred dollars for each offense: Provided, however, That if a vessel leaves her port with a complement of engineers and pilots, and on her voyage is deprived of their services, or the services of any of them, without the consent, fault, or collusion of the master, owner, or any one interested in the vessel, the deficiency may be temporarily supplied, until others licensed can be obtained.

Eleventh. In addition to the annual inspection, it shall be the duty of said board to examine seasonably steamers arriving and departing, so often as to enable them to detect any neglect to comply with the requirements of law, and also any defects or imperfections becoming apparent after the inspection aforesaid, and tending to render the navigation of the vessel unsafe, which service may be performed by one of the board; and if he shall discover an omission to comply with the law, or that repairs have become necessary to make the vessel safe, he shall at once notify the master, stating in the notice what is required; and if the master deems the requirements unreasonable or unnecessary, he may take the opinion of the board thereon, and if dissatisfied with the decision of such board, may apply for a reexamination of the case to the supervising inspector, as is hereinbefore provided; or if he shall refuse or neglect to comply with the requirement of the local board, and shall, contrary thereto, and while the same remains uncorrected by the supervising inspector, employ the vessel by navigating her, the master and owner shall be liable for any damage to the passengers and their baggage which shall occur from any defects so as aforesaid stated in said notice, which shall be in writing, and all inspections and orders shall be promptly made by the inspectors; and where it can be safely done in their judgment, they shall permit repairs to be made where those interested can most conveniently do them; and no inspectors of one district shall modify or annul the doings of the inspectors of another district in regard to repairs, unless there is a change in the state of things demanding more repairs than were thought necessary when the order was made; nor shall the inspectors of one district appoint a person coming from another, if such person has been rejected for unfitness or want of qualifications.

Twelfth. The said board, when thereto requested, shall inspect steamers belonging to districts where no such board is established; and if a certificate of approval is not granted, no other inspection shall be made by the same or any other board until the objections made by the inspectors are removed; and if any vessel shall be navigated after a board of inspectors have refused to make the collector a certificate of approval, she shall be liable to the same penalties as if she had been run without a license: Provided, however, That nothing herein contained shall impair the right of the inspectors to permit such vessel to go to another port for repairs, if in their opinion it is safe so to do.

Thirteenth. The said board of inspectors shall have power to summon before them witnesses, and to compel their attendance by the same process as in courts of law; and after reasonable time given to the alleged delinquent of the time and place of investigation to examine said witnesses under oath touching the performance of their duties by engineers and pilots of any such vessel, and if it shall appear satisfactorily that any such engineer or pilot is incompetent, or that life has been placed in peril by reason of such incompetency, or the negligence or misconduct on the part of any such person, the board shall immediately suspend or revoke his license, and report their doings to the chief officer of the customs, and the said chief officer of the customs shall pay out of the revenues herein provided such sums to any witness so summoned under the provisions of this act for his actual travel and attendance as shall be officially certified by an inspector hearing the case upon the back of the summons, not exceeding the rates allowed to a witness for travel and attendance in the circuit and districts courts of the United States.

Fourteenth. That the said board shall report promptly all their doings to the chief officer of the customs, as well as all omissions or refusals to comply with the provisions of law on the part of any owner or master of any such vessel propelled in whole or in part by steam, carrying passengers.

Fifteenth. That it shall at all times be the duty of all engineers and pilots licensed under this act, and all mates to assist the inspectors in the examination of any such vessels to which any such engineer, mate, or pilot belongs, and to point out all defects and imperfections in the hull or apparatus for steaming, and also to make known to them, at the earliest opportunity, all incidents occasioning serious injury to the vessel or her equipment, whereby life may be in danger; and in default thereof the license of any such engineer or pilot shall be revoked.

Sec. 10. And be it further enacted, That in those cases where the number of passengers is limited by the inspectors' certificate, it shall not be lawful to take on board of any steamer a greater number of passengers than is certified by the inspectors in the certificate; and the master and owners, or either of them, shall be liable, to any person suing for the same, to forfeit the amount of passage-money and ten dollars for each passenger beyond the number allowed. And, moreover, in all cases of an express or implied undertaking to transport passengers, or to supply them with food and lodging, from place to place, and suitable provision is not made of a full and adequate supply of good and wholesome food and water, and of suitable lodging for all such passengers, or where barges or other craft impeding the progress are taken in tow, for a distance exceeding five hundred miles, without previous and reasonable notice to such passengers; in all such cases the owners and the vessel shall be liable to refund all the money paid for the passage, and to pay also the damage sustained by such default or delay: Provided, however, That if in any such case a satisfactory bond is given to the marshal for the benefit of the plaintiff, to secure the satisfaction of such judgment as he may recover, the vessel shall be released.

Sec. 11. And be it further enacted, That if the master of a steamer, or any other person, whether acting under orders or not, shall intentionally load or obstruct, or cause to be loaded or obstructed, in any way or manner, the safety-valve or valves of a boiler, or shall employ any other means or device whereby the boiler shall be subjected to a greater pressure than the amount allowed by the certificate of the inspectors, or shall be exposed to a greater pressure, or shall intentionally derange or hinder the operation of any machinery or device employed to denote the state of the water or steam in any boiler, or to give warning of approaching danger, it shall in any such case be a misdemeanor, and any and every person concerned therein, directly or indirectly, shall forfeit two hundred dollars, and may, at the discretion of the court, be, in addition thereto, imprisoned not exceeding eighteen months.

Sec. 12. And be it further enacted, That if at any time there be a deficiency of water in a boiler, by suffering it to fall below three inches above the flue as prescribed in this act, unless the same happens through inevitable accident, the master, if it be by his order, assent, or connivance, and also the engineer, or other person whose duty it is to keep up the supply, shall be guilty of an offense for which they shall severally be fined one hundred dollars each; and if an explosion or collapse happens in consequence of such deficiency, they, or any of them, may be further punished by imprisonment for a period of not less than six nor more than eighteen months.

Sec. 13. And be it further enacted, That hereafter all boilers of steamboats made of iron shall be constructed of plates which have been stamped according to the provisions of this act.

Sec. 14. And be it further enacted, That it shall be the duty of such inspectors to ascertain the quality of the material of which the boiler-plates of any such boiler so submitted to their inspection are made; and to satisfy themselves, by any suitable means, whether the mode of manufacturing has been such as to produce iron equal to good iron made with charcoal, such as in their judgment may be used for generating steam-power without hazard to life; and no such boiler shall be approved which is made of unsuitable material, or of which the manufacture is imperfect, or is not, in their opinion, of suitable strength, or whose plates are less than one fourth of an inch in thickness, for a high-pressure boiler of forty-two inches in diameter, and in that proportion of strength according to the maximum of working pressure allowed for high-pressure boilers of greater or less diameter, or which is made of any but wrought iron of a quality equal to good iron made with charcoal.

Sec. 15. And be it further enacted, That all plates of boiler-iron shall be distinctly and permanently stamped in such manner as the Secretary of the Treasury shall prescribe, and if practicable, in such place or places that the mark shall be left visible after the plates are worked into boilers; with the name of the manufacturer, the quality of the iron, and whether or not hammered, and the place where the same is manufactured.

Sec. 16. And be it further enacted, That it shall be unlawful to use in such vessel for generating steam for power a boiler or steam-pipe connecting the boilers, made after the passage of this act, of any iron unless it has been stamped by the manufacturer as herein provided; and if any person shall make for use in any such vessel a boiler of iron not so stamped, intended to generate steam for power, he shall, for any such offense, forfeit five hundred dollars, to be recovered in an action of debt by any person suing for the same; and any person using or causing to be used in any such vessel such a boiler to generate steam for power, shall forfeit a like sum for each offense.

Sec. 17. And be it further enacted, That if any person shall counterfeit the marks and stamps required by this act, or shall falsely stamp any boiler iron, and be convicted thereof, he shall be fined not exceeding five hundred dollars and imprisoned not exceeding two years. And if any person or persons shall stamp or mark plates with the name or marks of another, with intent to mislead, deceive, or defraud, such person or persons shall be liable to any one injured thereby for all damage occasioned by such fraud or deception.

Sec. 18. And be it further enacted, That in order to carry this act fully into execution, the President of the United States shall, with the advice of the Senate, appoint nine supervising inspectors, who shall be selected for their knowledge, skill, and experience in the uses of steam for navigation, and who are competent judges not only of the character of vessels, but of all parts of the machinery employed in steaming, who shall assemble together at such places as they may agree upon once in each year at least, for joint consultation and the establishment of rules and regulations for their own conduct and that of the several boards of inspectors within the districts, and also to assign to each of the said nine inspectors the limits of territory within which he shall perform his duties. And the said supervising inspectors shall each be paid for his services after the rate of fifteen hundred dollars a year, and in addition thereto his actual reasonable traveling expenses incurred in the necessary performance of his duty when away from the principal port in his district, and certified and sworn to by him under such instructions as shall be given by the Secretary of the Treasury, who is hereby authorized to pay such salaries, and also such traveling expenses, and the actual reasonable expenses (both to them and other inspectors) of transporting from place to place the instruments used in inspections, which expenses shall be proved to his satisfaction.

Sec. 19. And be it further enacted, That the supervising inspectors shall watch over all parts of the territory assigned them, shall visit, confer with, and examine into the doings of the several boards of inspectors, and shall, whenever they think it expedient, visit such vessels licensed, and examine into their condition, for the purpose of ascertaining whether the provisions of this act have been observed and complied with, both by the board of inspectors and the master and owners; and it shall be the duty of all masters, engineers, and pilots of such vessels, to answer all reasonable inquiries and to give all the information in their power in regard to any such vessel so visited, and her machinery for steaming, and the manner of managing both.

Sec. 20. And be it further enacted, That whenever a supervising inspector ascertains to his satisfaction that the master, engineer, pilot, or owners of any such vessel fail to perform the duties according to the provisions of this act, he shall report the facts in writing to the board in the district where the vessel belongs, and, if need be, cause the negligent or offending parties to be prosecuted; and if he has good reason to believe there has been, through negligence, or from any other cause, a failure of the board who inspected the vessel to do its duty, he shall report the facts in writing to the Secretary of the Treasury, who shall cause immediate investigation into the truth of the complaint, and if he deems the cause sufficient shall remove the delinquent.

Sec. 21. And be it further enacted, That it shall be the duty of such supervising inspectors to see that the said several boards within their respective collection districts execute their duties faithfully, promptly, and, as far as possible, uniformly, in all places, by following out the provisions of this act, according to the true intent and meaning thereof; and they shall, as far as practicable by their established rules, harmonize differences of opinion when they exist in different boards.

Sec. 22. And be it further enacted, That the said supervising inspectors shall also visit collection districts in which there are no boards of inspectors, if there be any, where steamers are owned or employed, and each one shall have full power to inspect any such steamer or boilers of each steamer in any such district, or in any other district where, from distance or other cause, it is inconvenient to resort to the local board, and to grant certificates of approval according to the provisions of this act, and to do and perform in such districts all the duties imposed upon boards in the districts where they exist: Provided, That no supervising or other inspector shall be deemed competent to inspect in any case where he is directly or indirectly personally interested, or is associated in business with any person who is so interested, but in all such cases the duty shall be performed by disinterested inspectors, and inspection made in violation of this rule shall be void and of no effect.

Sec. 23. And be it further enacted, That it shall be the duty of each of the collectors, or other chief officer of the customs for the districts aforesaid, except San Francisco, to make known without delay to the collectors of all the said districts, except San Francisco, the names of all persons licensed as engineers or pilots for such vessels, and the names of all persons from whom upon application licenses have been withheld, and the names of all whose licenses have been revoked or suspended, and also the names of all such vessels which neglect or refuse to make such repairs as may be ordered under the provisions of this act, and the names of all for which license has been on application refused.

Sec. 24. And be it further enacted, That it shall be the duty of the collectors, or other chief officers of the customs, and of the inspectors aforesaid, within the said several districts, to enforce the provisions of law against all such steamers arriving and departing; and upon proof that any collector or other chief officer of the customs, or inspector, has negligently or intentionally omitted his duty in this particular, such delinquent shall be removed from office, and shall also be subject to a penalty of one hundred dollars for each offense, to be sued for in an action of debt before any court of competent jurisdiction.

Sec. 25. And be it further enacted, That the collector or other chief officer of the customs shall retain on file all original certificates of the inspectors required by this act to be delivered to him, and shall give to the master or owner of the vessel therein named two certified copies thereof—one of which shall be placed by such master or owner in some conspicuous place in the vessel, where it will be most likely to be observed by passengers and others, and there kept at all times; the other shall be retained by such master or owner as evidence of the authority thereby conferred; and if any person shall receive or carry any passenger on board any such steamer not having a certified copy of the certificate of approval as required by this act, placed and kept as aforesaid, or who shall receive or carry any gunpowder, oil of turpentine, oil of vitriol, camphene, or other explosive burning fluids, or materials which ignite by friction, as freight on board any steamer carrying passengers, not having a certificate authorizing the same, and a certified copy thereof placed and kept as aforesaid, or who shall stow or carry any of said articles at a place or in a manner not authorized by such certificate, shall forfeit and pay for each offense, one hundred dollars, to be recovered by action of debt in any court of competent jurisdiction.

Sec. 26. And be it further enacted, That every inspector who shall willfully certify falsely touching any such vessel propelled in whole or in part by steam, and carrying passengers, her hull, accommodations, boilers, engines, machinery, or their appurtenances, or any of her equipments, or any matter or thing contained in any certificate signed or sworn to by him, shall, on conviction thereof, be punished by fine not exceeding five hundred dollars, or imprisonment not exceeding six months, or both.

Sec. 27. And be it further enacted, That if any such vessel carrying passengers, having a license and certificate as required by this act, shall be navigated without having her hull, accommodations, boilers, engines, machinery, and their appurtenances, and all equipments in all things conformable to such certificate, the master or commander by whom she shall be so navigated, having knowledge of such defect, shall be punished by fine not exceeding one hundred dollars, or imprisonment not exceeding two months, or both: Provided, That such master or commander shall not be liable for loss or deficiency occasioned by the dangers of navigation, if such loss or deficiency shall be supplied as soon as practicable.

Sec. 28. And be it further enacted, That on any such steamers navigating rivers only, when from darkness, fog, or other cause the pilot on watch shall be of opinion that the navigation is unsafe, or from accident to or derangement of the machinery of the boat, the engineer on watch shall be of the opinion that the further navigation of the vessel is unsafe, the vessel shall be brought to anchor or moored as soon as it prudently can be done: Provided, That if the person in command shall, after being so admonished by either of such officers, elect to pursue such voyage, he shall do the same; but in such case both he and the owners of such steamer shall be answerable for all damages which shall arise to the person of any passenger and his baggage from said causes in so pursuing the voyage, and no degree of care or diligence shall in such case be held to justify or excuse the person in command or said owners.

Sec. 29. And be it further enacted, That it shall be the duty of the supervising inspectors to establish such rules and regulations to be observed by all such vessels in passing each other as they shall from time to time deem necessary for safety, two printed copies of which rules and regulations, signed by said inspectors, shall be furnished to each of such vessels, and shall at all times be kept up in conspicuous places on such vessels, which rules shall be observed both night and day. Should any pilot, engineer, or master of any such vessel, neglect or willfully refuse to observe the foregoing regulations, any delinquent so neglecting or refusing shall be liable to a penalty of thirty dollars, and to all damage done to any passenger in his person or baggage by such neglect or refusal; and no such vessel shall be justified in coming into collision with another if it can be avoided.

Sec. 30. And be it further enacted, That whenever any damage is sustained by any passenger or his baggage, from explosion, fire, collision, or other cause, the master and the owner of such vessel or either of them, and the vessel, shall be liable to each and every person so injured, to the full amount of damage, if it happens through any neglect to comply with the provisions of law herein prescribed, or through known defects or imperfections of the steaming apparatus, or of the hull; and any person sustaining loss or injury through the carelessness, negligence, or willful misconduct of an engineer or pilot, or their neglect or refusal to obey the provisions of law herein prescribed as to navigating such steamers, may sue such engineer or pilot, and recover damages for any such injury caused as aforesaid by any such engineer or pilot.

Sec. 31. And be it further enacted, That before issuing the annual license to any such steamer, the collector or other chief officer of the customs for the port or district shall demand and receive from the owner or owners of the steamer, as a compensation for the inspections and examinations made for the year, the following sums, in addition to the fees for issuing enrollment and licenses, now allowed by law, according to the tonnage of the vessel, to wit: for each vessel of a thousand tons and over, thirty-five dollars; for each of five hundred tons and over, but less than one thousand tons, thirty dollars; and for each under five hundred tons and over one hundred and twenty-five tons, twenty-five dollars; and for each under one hundred and twenty-five tons, twenty dollars, at the time of obtaining registry, and once in each year thereafter, pay, according to the rate of tonnage before mentioned, the sum of money herein fixed. And each engineer and pilot licensed as herein provided shall pay for the first certificate granted by any inspector or inspectors the sum of five dollars, and for each subsequent certificate one dollar, to such inspector or inspectors, to be accounted for and paid over to the collector or other chief officer of the customs, and the sums derived from all the sources above specified shall be quarterly accounted for and paid over to the United States in the same manner as other revenue.

Sec. 32. And be it further enacted, That each inspector shall keep an accurate account of every such steamer boarded by him during the year, and of all his official acts and doings, which in the form of a report he shall communicate to the collector, or other chief officer of the customs, on the first days of May and November, in each year.

Sec. 33. And be it further enacted, That the inspectors in the following districts shall each be allowed annually the following compensation, to be paid under the direction of the Secretary of the Treasury, in the manner officers of the revenue are paid, to wit:

SEC. 34. And be it further enacted, That the Secretary of the Treasury shall provide the inspectors with a suitable number of instruments, of uniform construction, so as to give uniform results, to test the strength of boilers.

SEC. 35. And be it further enacted, That it shall be the duty of the master of any such steamer to cause to be kept a correct list of all the passengers received and delivered from day to day, noting the places where received and where landed, which record shall be open to the inspection of the inspectors and officers of the customs at all times; and in case of default, through negligence or design, the said master shall forfeit one hundred dollars, which penalty, as well as that for excess of passengers, shall be a lien upon the vessel: Provided, however, A bond may, as provided for in other cases, be given to secure the satisfaction of the judgment.

SEC. 39. And be it further enacted, That the supervising inspectors, appointed under the provisions of this act, shall, within their respective districts, under the direction of the Secretary of the Treasury, take the examination, or receive the statements in writing, of persons of practical knowledge and experience in the navigation of steam-vessels, the construction and use of boilers, engines, machinery, and equipments, touching the form, material, and construction of engines, and their appurtenances; the causes of the explosion of boilers and collapse of flues, and the means of prevention; the kind and description of safety-valves, water and steam-gauges, or indicators; equipments for the extinguishment of fires, and for the preservation of life in case of accident on board of such vessels, and all other means in use or proper to be adopted for the better security of the lives of persons on board vessels propelled in whole or in part by steam; the advantages and disadvantages of the different descriptions of boilers, engines, and their appurtenances, safety-valves, water and steam-gauges, or indicators, equipments for the prevention or extinguishment of fires, and the preservation of life in case of accident, in use on board such vessel; whether any, and what further legislation is necessary or proper for the better security of the lives of persons on board such steam-vessels; which examination and statements so taken and received, shall be transmitted to the Secretary of the Treasury, at such time as he shall prescribe.

SEC. 40. And be it further enacted, That it shall be the duty of the Secretary of the Treasury to cause such interrogatories to be prepared and published as in his opinion may be proper to elicit the information contemplated by the preceding section, and upon the receipt of the examination and statements taken by the inspectors, shall report the same to Congress, together with the recommendation of such other provisions as he may deem proper to be made for the better security of the lives of persons on board steam-vessels.
